RAILROAD THROUGH NORTH

Branch of C. N. R. from North Battleford to Athabasca to be Built

North Battleford, May 9.—An official announcement was received by J. O. Nolin, M.L.A., stating that the branch of the Canadian Northern railway from North Battleford to Athabasca Landing will be built this summer.

This will enable the farmers of the Jackfish district, which is thickly settled and very fertile, to find a ready market for their wheat. The announcement was received in good time, for a number of farmers in the north country, who were doubtful that the road would be built this summer and had therefore [illegible] ... VERMILION, ALTA., MAY 19th, 1909

OUR BOW

In the first number of a new publication a certain amount of space is necessarily devoted to "shop talk." In face of the fact that this is the second journal to be issued in Vermilion, possibly misapprehension may exist as to the why and wherefore of its coming into being. From the fact that the other paper has been an advocate of Liberal principles, erroneous conclusions may be hastily arrived at that the STANDARD is being established as a party organ. Such, however, is wide of the mark. The editor does not consider that the best interests of Vermilion and the districts tributary to it can possibly be served by the petty factions and divisions aroused and continuously fostered by any organ supporting and advocating either one or the other of the two great political parties of our country. We admire men of whatever political stand who are loyal and true to their intelligent convictions, but we are not yet convinced that it redounds in the most good to a town for any paper to concentrate all its energies in advocacy of the policy of one political party. We believe in party government, in a government with a strong opposition in front of it—Dominion or provincial—be it either Liberal or Conservative, a strong opposition to our mind being one of the greatest aids to any government in safeguarding the interests of the electorate who placed them there, and the welfare of the country in general.

The STANDARD will be conducted on broad, fearless and strictly independent lines, it has no axes to grind, but is looking for all the legitimate business it can secure for which it will give in return honest and conscientious service. It is a business enterprise established to meet the need of a growing and progressive town and community. Its main object is to be first and essentially a newspaper and the earnest endeavor of the management will be directed towards this end. Consequently in making its bow to the public the STANDARD has no apologies to make for its appearance, if such were necessary it would not be. The newspaper field is a large and varied one and the scope for journalistic enterprise unlimited. The STANDARD will be a representative local paper and will devote its columns to the recording of all town and district news, municipal doings, meetings, sports and pastimes and all educational matters and strive to further the aims and objects of true citizenship by aiding to develop a suitable, loyal and patriotic spirit.

The editor has had twelve years experience in the newspaper and printing line, nine of these as editor and proprietor of a weekly in Manitoba where he published an independent paper. Like many other western newspaper men who have and are making a success of journalism, he has taken all the degrees of the print shop from the initiation into its mysteries to the conduction of a paper. He is consequently an all-round practical man and in close touch with every detail of the business. A resident here for the past two years the editor is not a stranger to the people whom he addresses, and while he feels that great as has been the past development of Vermilion and this portion of Alberta, there lies before us a future of greatness which will not only equal but surpass some of our more advanced commercial centres. Surrounded by a country rich in its fertility, adapted to both grain growing and stock raising, settled by the very best representative class of settlers, with its stretches of rich timber and unlimited mineral wealth awaiting development, no town could have a more substantial backbone upon which to build a future. It is also a coming railroad centre of no mean importance. Vermilion is destined to grow—destined to become a metropolis of some pretensions. The STANDARD feels that it can also be a means towards promoting this end and appeals confidently for general support and trusts that its cheery face will be welcomed every Wednesday morning from now to the crack o' doom.

OBJECT OF A NEWSPAPER

The editor of the STANDARD believes that a newspaper should exert an educational force in the community. While it is of necessity a commercial enterprise to a more or less degree, yet to our mind it should not be purely or simply so, nor should it be purely or simply to help some man or party to political or other preferment. That papers themselves have always hugely exaggerated the power of the press is undeniable. The average Canadian election, as an instance, is and always will be decided largely on the policies and records of the parties in spite of the marvelous cavillings of one section or other of the press. In towns and villages of Canada are to be found papers of opposing political views, who during the elections devote the bulk of their space and brains to stories of the enemy, which they well know are the output of misjudgement and childish nagging. These papers lose sight of the news value of their publications and the creating of a broad, patriotic spirit. The two by four spirit must be got out of our craniums if we want to improve our journalism and endeavor to approach a national standing.

Robson Black in a recent issue of the Canadian Magazine, in an article on "Canadian Journalism," in speaking of lost elasticity in ideas of journalism, quotes as an illustration of the point "the editor or proprietor with the consuming personal ambition, who uses his paper as a chess pawn to suit the game he is playing. This pandering to interests that may give political or social honour, this salaaming with thirty point headings and suave introductions—it is all very pretty but generally misses what it aims at."

The general public may not see eye to eye with us or coincide with our views, but so long as the destinies of the STANDARD are guided by us its views will be broad and patriotic.

Our Mannville readers will find that their interests will be well looked after by the STANDARD which has taken over a very large subscription list from the Telegram. The business men of Mannville are in a position to keep in close touch with the people as heretofore and will find it to their advantage to patronize the advertising columns and job work department of the STANDARD. We can guarantee them a square deal and full returns for their money. The patronage of the business men of Mannville and the people of the districts is respectfully solicited.

A complete and up to date plant has been purchased from the Mannville Telegram printing company. A large quantity of new job type face type and large wood type had recently been added. The plant consists of a Campbell power press which prints the four pages of the paper at once, job press, 6 h.p. boiler, 5 h.p. engine, 650 pounds of news type, and some 70 cases of job and advertising faces and a thousand and one other things which go to make up a complete outfit for the publishing business. We are in a position to turn out high class job work at short notice. We respectfully solicit orders for our job work department and guarantee courteous consideration and prompt attention to all.

It is recognized courtesy to permit an opponent to state his case. There is a code of honor even among newspaper men which withholds criticism or complaint until the other fellow announces himself. It is not the policy of this paper to strike by insinuation or innuendo below the belt, all we ask for is British fair play and live and let live.

A cordial invitation is extended to farmers to drop in and see us when in town, they will receive a hearty welcome at all times, and any items of interest or doings about the farm will be gladly received.

"Every man has the right to put forth an effort to make an honest living, even though some people may not think so.

The issue of the STANDARD for this week is 600, watch it grow to 1000.

SUGGESTIONS REGARDING PLANTING OF TREES

Trees should be planted on land that has been long enough broken to be free from sod.

A margin of from 4 to 6 feet on each side of the trees should be left to permit cultivation which should be sufficiently frequent to maintain a surface mulch and so prevent the escape of moisture and keep down grass and weeds. Young trees will not succeed if compelled to contest with wild grass, tame grass, or weeds for possession of the soil.

Box Elder or Manitoba Maple may be planted in single rows from 8 to 12 feet apart or in double rows at the same distances, alternating the trees, or in other words, breaking the joints. The latter method would provide a wind break in a shorter time.

Caragana or Siberian Pea Tree, if intended for wind breaks, may be planted in single or double rows as above, the trees being placed from 4 to 6 feet apart in rows and the rows the same distance. For hedges plant from 15 to 18 inches apart.

Plant all trees about two inches deeper than they stood in the nursery, keeping roots straight and firming well pulverized soil about the roots, but leaving the surface inch loose.

Teddy is Champion Lion Killer

Nairobi, British East Africa, May 7—Theodore Roosevelt has added two more lions to his "bag." He now holds the record as lion killer in the protectorate. Since Saturday he has killed five lions and one lioness.

Interrogatory

Do you know that your printed matter is an unfailing index to your way of doing business? That if it be slovenly, indifferent or commonplace, those who receive it will unconsciously get the impression that you are also careless in your general business methods?

Effectiveness

The continual use of good printing secures that "accumulative effect in advertising" which thousands of real live merchants are endeavoring to oppose.

That is your side of the story.

Original Ideas

We do not experiment with work except along the lines suggested by a desire for originality and individuality. We THINK, WE SUGGEST, WE CREATE and DESIGN, and take a deep personal interest in originating work best suited to your trade. We do nothing in a perfunctory manner.

Irma News Items

Two construction trains have been through Irma during the past week. Some freight has also been shipped in and three passengers from Ontario who are overlooking the country with the hope of securing land.

We are glad to know that a post office is to be established here next week. Mr. Swales will carry the mail until Mr. Armstrong is in a position to look after it himself. This has been one of the drawbacks of the town but now we are looking for better things.

Mr. Shepherd and his bride were out to church on Sunday last. We have quite a few brides in the district.

A petition was opened last Sunday to be sent to the forthcoming conference of the Methodist church of Alberta to ask to allow the Rev. Wm. Lister to labor amongst us at least another six months.

Messrs. Pringle and Purvis are putting in a large stock of hardware. This will be the third stock of hardware carried in the town.

Seeding is progressing with a swing around here. Quite a few have finished already. Though the season is late the farmers are all cheerful.

Who had chicken at Mrs. Peterson's on Sunday last?

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Walker has left us for the summer. He has taken a contract for building an elevator at Cransfield on the C. & E.

Mr. Fischer is about to leave us for a little while.

Next Saturday the Irma baseball team will meet the Strawberry plains team at Strawberry. This will be the third match of the season. Although twice defeated we are not balky.

Mr. Mildon is almost through with J. G. Clarke's house. It is really a credit to the contractor and the whole neighborhood.

Milburn Bros. store is almost completed. The large public hall is quite an acquisition. We are expecting the people to move up from the bridge in about a week's time.

McDowell sold Mr. C. Swaile a new double-seated democrat the other day, now he will want a set of double driving harness. Who will be the "Johnny on the spot."

The Strawberry plains literary society is still holding its own; our new president keeps things going. The next meeting will include a libel case.

Mr. and Mrs. Groden are back amongst us, also Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shaw. Some of our young men went out last winter but are coming back in twos but still made one. Which one?

Mr. Pennock is helping Mr. Ambler haul lumber, he has 75,000 feet in Hardisty and intends to build a house. Mr. Pennock's house is nearing completion, some wonder "what next."

Mr. Elliott was planting strawberries today. It is reported that when the preacher was around that way he was treated to real radishes. Who says we can't raise fruits?

Mr. A. C. Idyll is still working for Mr. G. A. Purvis—in between times. They are using the breed's team this week. Who had a four mile cutter ride last Monday?

Irma, May 1.

Orbindale Doings

The people are getting along fine with seeding operations.

Mr. Roy Shelte also Mr. Henry Prothero are leaving for Edmonton Thursday.

Our mail carrier got in the creek in the cooler Friday, but nothing serious happened.

Mr. Nashes wife and mother are in our midst, hope they will like it and remain with us.

Mr. George Ambler sold a bunch of steers for a very handsome sum. It takes George to make a deal.

Mr. Whitely is in full swing with his new house.

Two car loads of settlers effects are expected to arrive any day at Irma from Toronto, the new comers will settle on 33-46-8 and break it all, 640 acres this summer.

Mr I. Hershey is out again after a month's sickness and we are glad to hear the news.

Mr. Osterhouts has his new house about completed.

Craid Bros. have started the foundation for Orbindale school house.

Orbindale, May 1.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

How Money Will be Spent in the Three Prairie Provinces

Ottawa, May 10—Supplementary estimates for the current fiscal year totalling $1,010,087 of which $83,500 is chargeable to capital account were presented to parliament to-day by Hon. Mr. Fielding.

In the main the estimates consisted of minor items, omitted from the main estimates, and which it has now been found necessary to insert to meet unavoidable expenditures during the present year. The supplementaries are the smallest in many years. Added to the main estimates brought down earlier in the session they provide for a total expenditure for the current fiscal year of $111,506,400 of which $81,611,721 is chargeable to consolidated fund and $30,494,739 to capital account. Further supplementary estimates for the past fiscal year, including $100,000 for the Italian earthquake relief fund, voted by governor general's warrant, $160,000 to defray the expenses of the quarantine along the international boundary, on account of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in the United States, and $10,000 to pay the expenses of Canada's representatives at the international institute of agriculture, held at Rome last fall were also tabled.

Taking these supplementary estimates into account the expenditure which parliament has been asked to authorize this year shows a total decrease of $21,774,772 as compared with last year. Of this decrease $8,611,840 is consolidated fund account and $13,163,026 on capital account. The chief items in the supplementary for this year include the following:

To provide for the expenses of the conservation commission and to pay salaries of office staffs $22,500; to provide for expenses connected with the fisheries arbitration before the Hague tribunals $60,000; for the Canadian section of the royal commission to inquire into trade relations between Canada and the West Indies $20,000; for seed grain distributions $30,000; grant to the international quinquennial of the conference of women at Toronto $1,000; for a monument to Laura Secord at Queenstown heights $2,000; for the removal of the squatters from Cooking Lake forest reserve $14,000; for Dr. Grenfell's experiments with reindeer in Labrador $1,000; in the estimates under the head of civil government $5,000 is provided for the salary of the deputy head of the new department of external affairs; to provide for an increase in pay for the Dominion police $8,000 is asked. In the department of agriculture there are items of $7,000 to provide for an experimental cold storage station for fruit and an item of $10,000 to provide for the expenses of a commission to investigate the swine industry of Great Britain and Denmark.

The supplementaries include the following items of particular interest to the west: Alberta penitentiary, to pay Mrs. Gertrude G. Steadman a gratuity in addition to that provided by the Penitentiary Act equal to one year's salary of her late husband, who was murdered by Gary R. Barrett, $1,500; public works, Manitoba, Brandon drill hall, $7,000; Dominion public buildings generally, $5,000; Selkirk public buildings, $3,000; Winnipeg military buildings, quarters for married non commissioned officers and men, guard room, etc. for Fort Osborne barracks, etc., $6,000.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Calgary, Dominion buildings, $6,000; Edmonton immigration building, $6,000; Medicine Hat public building, $8,000; Regina post office, customs house, etc., $12,000; Wetaskiwin public building, additional amount for site, $4,150.

Dominion public buildings, Saskatchewan and Alberta—Additional amount for improvements, $6,000.

British Columbia—Cumberland public building, $5,000; Victoria post office, etc $2,000.

Cooksyville Items

J. B. Cuskey has raised the roof of his house, and has now a fine two storey residence. The work was done by G. W. Shortridge.

A school district has been formed in this Township, and the school house is to be commenced immediately.

S. H. Garnham has completed his residence on his homestead, and has one of the largest houses in the district.

A bridge was built last week over Dog Rump Creek, by some of the settlers in the district. This has always been a very dangerous place, and the bridge was badly needed. Only a week ago Roy Cuskey, while crossing the creek, had his team and wagon swept down the stream by the strong current, and it was only after a great struggle and with the help of some of the settlers that he succeeded in saving the team, although his wagon was badly damaged.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

Long Lost Son and Brother Found Through Peculiar Means

Ten years ago Alex. Stinson brother of Jack Stinson, who runs on the C. N. R. between here and Edmonton, and of Mrs Jas. McKone, town, left the family home at Norpawn for the Crow's Nest railway, B.C. Later he became mate on a river boat and ultimately took to the sea travelling to different parts of the globe on ocean greyhounds. Following one of these trips he headed for the Klondike—this was six years ago and the last intimation members of the family received relative to his movements was at that time. His intention was to go prospecting 300 miles north of the most northern mining camps up the Bull-in Creek. Time passed on and as year followed year and no further word was received, an anxious mother and family communicated with the authorities at the coast and the far northern points. Repeated enquiries proved futile and unavailing and with the lapse of time the family knowing the exposure, dangers and privations incident to such a trip, had reconciled themselves to the belief that somewhere, in the far and lonely north land, ice enclosed the remains of him, whom they had now come to mourn as silent in death.

Three weeks ago Jack Stinson attended a theatre at Edmonton where a clairvoyant was one of the attractions. A book was passed round in which questions desired to be answered were to be written down, under the impulse of the moment Jack wrote

"Lost brother, where will I find him—J. Stinson."

The reply to his question came in due time the medium articulating slowly but clearly the message

"J. Stinson enquiring lost brother, write Seattle, Washington."

When he returned to town Jack mentioned the affair to his sister and Mr. McKone, the latter naturally made light of the matter. Jack however determined to set his mind at rase by writing and did so.

On Monday the following communication was received:

"Dear Jack: I received your letter. I am sending you this picture and to let you see how I look, write and tell me all the news and I will answer your letter, from Alex Stinson, Seattle, Wash."

The post card contains the photo of the writer and a lady taken on the deck of a ship, and the joy and relief of all can be better imagined than described, when they immediately recognized in the picture their lost brother. The family have sent the news to their mother at Norpawn and it is more than likely that Mr. Alex. Stinson, discovered in so strange a manner, may shortly come out this way on a visit.

The above are the facts as related to the STANDARD by Jas., the card was also exhibited and probably there is no one more mystified over the event than Jas.

Minburn Notes

Mr. W. W. Ross, of Strathcona, spent a few days in town this week.

We are pleased to see that Miss Crysler has returned after spending about six weeks with friends in Southern Alberta.

Mr. E. Hoffman, of Vegreville, spent Sunday in town.

What might have proved a serious conflagration last Wednesday was prevented by the prompt action of the residents of the town. A pile of refuse lying near the blacksmith shop was found to be on fire and had it not been discovered in time it would soon have spread to the surrounding buildings. The residents turned out in full force; men, women and children could be seen flocking down Main St. to First Ave., the scene of excitement. The men worked valiantly and soon had the flames under control. There was no loss of property but one unfortunate man was struck with flying debris and sustained slight injuries to the head and face which were obliterated by the prompt application of aqueous fluid. The cause of the fire is not known some contending that it was from spontaneous combustion, others that it was a spark from a pipe or a lighted match.

Rev. G. Halstead, of Viking, was in town on Wednesday the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hillier.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peck have moved out to the homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. French have the sympathy of the whole community in the recent loss of their home by fire. The building was totally destroyed and none of the contents saved. There was no insurance. Mr. French's loss is considerable. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney. Mr. French has been very unfortunate as his grain was burned last year at the threshing.

A disastrous prairie fire swept over several sections in the east and west of town Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Jas. Matson and Mr. Wm. Elgin each lost a barn. Messrs. Foess, Neilson and Moede lost all their buildings. On Sunday evening it was found necessary to fire guard the town, but by Monday morning all danger was past.

There was a very enjoyable dance at Mr. and Mrs. Moore's on Tuesday evening in honor of Jack Astley, who is shortly leaving here for Edmonton.

Mr. Brandon, of Dakota, is visiting at Mrs. Bowers.

We are pleased to see Mr. Jack Spratt again in our midst after spending several months in Edmonton.

It is early in the season for croquet but a number of our residents were seen enjoying that old but fascinating game one evening this week and we hear that there is some talk of a club being formed.

Don't forget the picnic May 24th.

Offering—Resolutions, etc. 9.10, The Great Commission of the Modern Sunday School Movement, by H. F. Kenny. 9.45, Closing Words of the President. Benediction.

Important. The executive committee respectfully urge upon every school the necessity of having at least one delegate to attend the convention. Billets will be provided for all delegates whose names are reported to the Secy-Treas., Miss P. M. Brimacombe, Vermilion, within a reasonable time previous to the convention. The meetings will be both interesting and instructive but the convention will fail in its object unless every school is represented.

Delegates are requested to bring reports of their respective schools and also be prepared to take part in the discussions.

LOCAL NEWS.

A. W. Ebbett of Mannville, was in town Monday.

Mr. Jas. Commons was a Calgary visitor this week.

T. A. Brown left Thursday for a trip to British Columbia.

F. G. Cook, lumber dealer, was up from Wainwright, Monday.

Mr. J. Kelly of Megantic, Quebec, is visiting the Powell Brothers.

Mr. W. E. Saunders of Olds, Alta., has come to Vermilion to reside.

Mr. R. L. Craig is erecting a building on a lot near the new school.

Rev. W. E. Gilbert has been visiting a brother in Vancouver, B.C. He is expected home this week.

R. W. Falkins arrived home on Sunday's train, after an extended trip to Montreal and other Eastern points.

Arthur N. Glenville, late of the Boston Clothing Store, Edmonton, has accepted a position with Craig Bros.

W. J. Rutherford is fencing off the south east quarter of the school section, south of town, for a cattle range.

Craig Bros., are holding a mammoth cheap sale of suits on Thursday Friday and Saturday of this week. See their adv. for particulars.

J. Hensberger who was formerly station agent here, and late of Edmonton, passed through town Thursday on his way to his old home in Ontario.

J. D. Hunter, wife and son and G. Shortridge of Caskeyville, north of the Saskatchewan, came into town yesterday and are remaining for a few days.

The first rain of the season fell Monday morning. Though partaking of the nature of light showers it was sufficient to freshen up mother earth and dampen the grain fields. Local showers also fell yesterday.

Members of the Vermilion I.O.O.F. attended the funeral of the late Henry Myers on Friday at Mannville. The services were conducted by the Vermilion Lodge, D. Cameron being chaplain and M. A. Brimacombe, N. G.

A report of the laymen's missionary convention lately held in Toronto was given by the Vermilion delegate, Rev. Dr. Arthur, in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening. A mass meeting in the interests of the temperance question was held in the Methodist church after the services.

Mr. and Mrs. R. McRae are leaving the early part of June for Vancouver and Seattle. At Seattle a visit will be made with a sister of Mrs. McRae's after which they proceed to Prince Rupert for the summer at least. As Mr. McRae still retains his interests in the town he expects to return in a year's time. Their house has been rented by Mr. Young [illegible].

Rev. Mr. Kempton has been suffering from an attack of grippe.

Alf. Jones has put a handsome new fence around his property on First street north.

Arthur A. Berry announces his next monthly auction sale for Saturday, May 29.

Friday last was Arbor Day. The afternoon was observed as a half holiday by the business men of the town.

J. H. Trentman, late of the Mannville Telegram staff, is in charge of the job work department of the STANDARD.

Harry Styles has fully recovered from his severe attack of rheumatism and is able once again to handle all orders in his line.

Owing to the absence of the incumbent, the Rev. W. E. Gilbert, at Vancouver the evening service in the English church was conducted by Mr. C. V. Caesar.

R. A. Pilkie and T. Brown have been appointed lay delegates to the Anglican Synod of the diocese of Saskatchewan which meets at Prince Albert in June.

Steve Snellgrove, who has been in the Edmonton hospital with a long siege of serious illness, has fully recovered and will reside on his homestead in 53-5 for the summer.

Owing to the heavy task of moving and installing our large plant and the extra labor involved in getting up a first issue, many little details have had to be neglected in the endeavor to place the sheet in the hands of the people at as early a date as possible.

Harry Styles has rented his stand on Main street to the STANDARD but does not intend to go out of the tin smithing and plumbing business. He will build an addition in rear of the print shop 18 x 24, two stories, and will, as soon as it is completed, conduct his business on the ground floor.

Roseborough & Co., jewelers, expect to move their stock into the handsome new premises of the firm this week. The new stand is on Main street in a portion of the block occupied by Seed and Youngblut and is being finished in the most modern and attractive design with large plate glass show window.

W. J. Macnab has secured what he considers not one of the best, but the best homestead in the country on 14-48-7, twelve miles south and two west of the town. He intends making extensive improvements on it at once and is fencing the entire quarter, building a house and breaking 50 acres of the land.

Those who took advantage of the spring distribution of trees from the experimental farm for central Alberta at Lacombe, have been receiving their trial bundles in allotments of one hundred during the past week. Many of these have been planted on the homesteads while not a few are being planted in the town.

The following players will represent Vermilion Cricket Club in their first game of the season on Monday next at Lloydminster: W. Morgan, Capt. J. Gulland, Richardson, Williams, Willis, Cooper, Fox, Thornton, McPherson, Ellis, Taylor. This is considered a strong team and the boys are looking for a victory.

The signs of life are now everywhere apparent in nature. The trees are putting forth their buds and the earth once more assuming its mantle of green. Though the wild goose, the duck and our old friend the crow have been with us for some time these have been followed by the lark, woodpecker, blackbird, robin, wood wren and many others of the smaller species.

F. Ball and C. Dover, settlers in 53-6, were callers at the STANDARD office during the week. They reported a prairie fire as having run across that district from the east clearing off a considerable stretch of country, though no buildings were burned badly. The stable on the homestead of A. Gibbs caught fire but was saved by tearing the roof off. Seeding was well advanced, all wheat and the greater percentage of oats being in.

WEST FAVORS EXPOSITION

World's Fair Committee Returns from Western Trip—Expect Grant from Government

Winnipeg, May 12.—Having accomplished wonders in their ten day trip through Western Canada, the Canadian Exposition and Selkirk Centennial, 1912, committee returned to the city Sunday evening, arriving over the Canadian Northern railway from Prince Albert after a splendid run. Every man on board was enthused beyond all bounds at the results of his work in the west and the Canadian spirit which prompted the trip was bursting forth on all sides.

In the itinerary of the party, twenty-eight meetings were held, and the proposition the Winnipeg men had on hand was placed before the citizens of each town in excellent speeches which were inspired by the magnificent country which was passed through. In not a single case was there any trace of opposition and those who did take a skeptical view of the project were readily converted after hearing the business men talk. Besides winning the west over to the exposition proposition, the delegation accomplished much in driving away the petty jealousy that existed between the towns and cities of the west. It was at first looked on as a scheme to boom Winnipeg, but this idea only lasted but a short time and was speedily killed, and by the time the meetings were over, there was not a man in the hall who thought other than that by taking a part in this great project, he was doing something that would place his country in a new and greater light before the eyes of the world.

At every point touched, the delegates were given a most cordial reception, and even though the people knew little of the mission their visitors had come on, they showered upon them all that they could give. The mayor and chief citizens were at the railway station when the train came in and the usual order was a drive.

Clubs were thrown open, the Masonic order extended a brotherly hand to all, whether they were of the craft or not and and in every city, the freedom of that city was conferred upon the Winnipeg business men.

Features during the trip were plentiful and greatly enjoyed. Prominent among these was the run across the huge bridge at Lethbridge, which the visitors crossed, being the first time a passenger train had run across the bridge. Then at Edmonton through the kindness of Supt. William Brown of the C. N. R., a special train was run to the big J. Y. Griffin packing plant where the visitors saw enough meat to feed the Dominion for a month, and the actual process of killing and preparing it too. In Prince Albert its big lumber mills were visited. Medicine Hat demonstrated in splendid fashion what could be done with natural gas, the same city showed an A1 ball team and gave the Winnipeggers the pleasure of witnessing the first baseball game of the season. Every point had something of note to be seen and even in the prosperous little town of Duck Lake, a model Indian school was the admiration of all. Red Deer, with its railway station in Alberta and its main street in Saskatchewan, was where a splendid meeting was held, and Lloydminster with its almost entirely English population, gave a great English welcome. To say that the sights throughout the three great prairie provinces were wonderful, would be but mild.

Ottawa, Ont., May 6.—A caucus of Liberal members of the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was held today to consider the request being made by the delegation which has been in the capital for the past two days to the effect that the government should set aside a quarter of a million acres of land with which to finance the proposed exposition in Winnipeg in 1912.

The matter was given careful consideration and it was decided that it was not in the best interests of the west that lands should be set aside and sold with the object of financing an exposition. The consensus of opinion was that the land should be conserved for the settler. The caucus was not adverse to a cash contribution, but was emphatically opposed to the idea of alienating any portion of the public domain for the purpose proposed.

In view of this decision it is safe to say that any government aid to the exposition will take the form of a money contribution.

Mr. Carl Demers was agreeably surprised last Monday when his father walked in upon him. Mr. Demers intends to locate in Webaisle permanently.

The Merchants Bank of Canada has established a branch in Mannville with Mr. W. Prest formerly of Edmonton as manager. Their opening announcement appears in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Crouch are visiting their father and mother Mr. and Mrs. George Crosby. They come from California and would prove very desirable settlers if they should locate here.

LICENSE COMMISSION MEETS

Petition Presented Praying for a Reduction in Licenses

At the meeting of the license commissioners held at the town hall on Thursday last, objections were raised to the granting of so many licenses for Vermilion. There are at the present time four liquor licenses in the town—one wholesale and three hotel.

A petition signed by nearly four-fifths of the resident ratepayers was presented to the commissioners by Mr. H. N. Stephens supported by quite a large number of townsmen, praying for a reduction of licenses. It was pointed out that in reducing the number here, the commissioners would be following the lead in larger cities such as Toronto and Hamilton. It was further stated that the number of licenses here was greater than public accommodation requires or public sentiment demands.

After considering the question in committee the commissioners recommended the granting of a wholesale license and an hotel license and deferred action regarding the remainder till June 10th.

The granting of a license for Islay was also deferred to that date.

LAND GUIDE REGULATIONS

Government Lays Down Rules to Stop Overcharging

Strathcona, May 21.—There have been a great many complaints lately from newcomers about the exorbitant rates charged them by guides and others conducting them through the new parts of the west. To remedy this the department of the interior, through J. Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration, has issued the following stringent set of orders which is being distributed all western centres.

The appointment by the department of the interior of Canada, of land guides to act as government officers, is made only upon the following conditions, which all persons authorized to act as government land guides must observe.

No government land guide can be recognized without being officially appointed by or with the authority of the ministry of the interior.

Land guides can only act in the district for which they have been appointed.

The usual charge for driving a party of not fewer than three persons is $7.00 per day, including time going and returning. The department recognizes this as a fair and just charge. In addition the members of the party must provide meals and stabling for team and meals for land guide during such trip.

No party of landseekers should pay more than the sum mentioned, viz., $7.00 per day for the whole party, with meals extra, and any demands for a greater sum should be immediately reported to the commissioner of immigration in Winnipeg, with full particulars.

Complaints of overcharges and other irregularities, will be instantly and thoroughly investigated and prompt measures taken to deal with those responsible.

Landseekers should appeal to local immigration agent, or to Dominion land agent, or Dominion sub-land agent when in doubt or difficulty.

MUCH APPRECIATED

To all those who have so kindly encouraged us in placing advertisements in the STANDARD we wish to extend our hearty thanks. We also respectfully solicit a share of the commercial printing of the business men of the town, our job department being now in a position to handle all kinds of printing.

TO PROVIDE INFORMATION

In the province there were 23 local seed fairs held. The exhibits at these fairs represented 59,210 bushels, an average of 2,575 bushels. The average for wheat was 709 bushels, oats, 1,519 and barley 350 bushels.

A provincial seed fair was also held at Calgary after the local fairs were completed, entries being received from individuals the same as at the local fairs.

These seed fairs have been found to be of great benefit in facilitating the exchange of good clean seed among the farmers [illegible] without more publicity than is given through a local fair the influence is necessary limited to a narrow district. To overcome this difficulty and provide farmers and seedsmen with information as to where good seed can be obtained, and at the same time help to create a market for those who have good seed for sale, particulars regarding the commendable exhibits at the seed fairs held in western Canada, under the direction of the seed branch have been published in bulletin form for general distribution.

THE APRIL REPORT

On May 12, the census and statistics office gave out a statement of crops and live stock for April, which states that vegetation is later than usual this year. In Manitoba supplies of fodder and coarse grains were sufficient, and horses showed a condition of 90, milch cows 84.6, other horned cattle 82, and sheep and swine 90.0 per cent. Seeding was generally retarded by cold and backward spring weather and in the districts of Dauphin, Macdonald and Killarney only a little work had been done at the end of the month.

The condition of horses is reported at 90, of milch cows 84, of other horned cattle 83.50, of swine 87.75, and of sheep 89.27 per cent.

No bushels of oats had been sown at the end of April and only a small per centage of wheat. [illegible] Macleod, Calgary and Cardston districts of Alberta, and in [illegible] districts of Red Deer and Strathcona, the condition is placed at 50 per cent. in the region south of Calgary and 85 per cent. in the north region. Seeding operations were general at the end of the month in all parts of the province south of township 52, about 60 per cent. of the wheat, 30 per cent. of the barley and 15 per cent. of oats being sown. Correspondents in many places report that all the wheat has been sown. Fodder and coarse grains have been plentiful, and live stock are well above the average condition. Horses show an average of 94, milch cows 84, other horned cattle 84, swine 90.75 and sheep 88.40 per cent. Sheep are kept more generally in Alberta than in any other of the western provinces.

It is too early to make any predictions regarding the crop yet, but present conditions and the general outlook are exceptionally favorable.

Considerable interest is taken in the poultry industry in the neighborhood and an occasional article along the line may prove of material assistance to such as are in the business for the best results and these are only attained by proper care and attention to details. A few hens are an indispensible adjunct to housekeeping, and always prove a paying proposition, while as an industry many people are taking it up. In time egg and poultry production will be a large industry in Alberta. In another column will be found an article bearing on this subject.

A newspaper, especially the local newspaper is appreciated just as it publishes items of local interest. Editors know this and try to get all the news that they can [illegible]

Everywhere today the men who are wanted for positions within the gift of the people are those who have the [illegible]

[illegible]

The growth of any western towns must be based on the world's first and fundamental industry—the production of food by means of the tilling and sowing of the earth. This means that there must be a well developed agricultural settlement and towards this end efforts are being directed all through the west. Airy nothings are conspicuous by their absence and people have come down out of the clouds and onto the earth, and are working on the basic principle of all permanent, staple and healthy growth.

We have a higher opinion of the intelligence of our readers than to wish to attain common notoriety by using the STANDARD to indulge in personal invective.

PREVENTION AND EXTERMINATION OF PARASITES IN POULTRY

If the poultry house is old and contains many crevices, all the nests, roosts and other fixtures should be removed from it, and the roof and ceiling covered with heavy building paper and limewash. The latter should be applied hot and fairly liquid, so as to enter every crevice in the building. The materials taken from the house should be burned and new roosting quarters and inside fittings put in. These should be simple in construction and easy removable so that the vermin can be destroyed. Before the fowls return to the house they should be thoroughly dusted with insect powder or sulphur. By dusting [illegible]

A RESOURCEFUL LAWYER.

An Inspiration That Won a Case He Considered Hopeless.

A Philadelphia lawyer tells the story that a picture of Fanny Davenport once won a case for him. His client was suing the Pennsylvania Railroad company, of which Wayne MacVeagh was counsel, for $7,500 damages for the death of her husband. "Just a few days before the case was to have come up she happened into my office and announced that she had married again. 'Good Lord, madam,' I gasped, 'why couldn't you have waited until your case came up? It's next to impossible for me to get damages for you now.' She said she didn't care very much and went out, seeming very happy. Well, it just happened that I had a photograph of Fanny Davenport on my desk, and when the next day Wayne MacVeagh happened into my office to discuss quite another matter he picked up the photo and admired it. 'Who's your friend?' he asked. I had a sudden inspiration, and I said: 'Why, that's the lady who is suing your company for $7,500.' 'The deuce you say,' said he. 'Handsome woman, isn't she?' 'She is, indeed,' I replied. 'H'm!' he exclaimed, looking at the picture closely. 'A deuced handsome woman, I should say. A deuced handsome woman.' There was a slight pause. 'What'll you take to settle this case?' he asked. I thought of my client's second marriage, and I fixed the figure at $5,000. The deal was consummated and the case never came to court."

Paid In His Own Coin.

Once in a way Archbishop Temple of Canterbury would get paid back in his own coin. A delightful instance of this is recorded. The church people of a certain parish are said to have strongly urged the bishop to find another sphere for their parson, whom they wished to get rid of. Dr. Temple summoned the obnoxious clergyman to his study and suggested a change of benefice. What was it, the parson wanted to know, that his people had to find fault with? "Well," said the bishop in the peculiarly harsh, strident voice that so sadly marred his preaching, "if you insist on knowing, it's your voice they complain of; they don't like your voice." "How curious!" said the clergyman. "A friend was with me at the cathedral the other day, when your lordship was preaching, and as he went out he said, 'What a fine sermon but what an unfortunate voice!'"

An Accommodating Witness.

The witness on the stand had been bullyragged by the lawyer until his patience was exhausted.

"Now," said the attorney, "you say you saw the prisoner draw his pistol?"

"Yes."

"Remember you are on your oath."

"I'm not forgetting it."

"You are sure you are telling the truth?"

"Sure."

"No mistake about it?"

"None."

"You couldn't be persuaded into any other statement?"

GRENFELL INDIAN WINS

World's Champion 15 Miler was Beaten by Paul Acoose

Despite the smug complacency of the people who thought the champion fifteen miler of the world could not be beaten, the Grenfell Indian in as pretty a race as it was ever the good fortune of Winnipeg lovers of sport to see, defeated Appleby at his own distance, and by a lap on a track that was 11 laps to the mile, in the arena rink. The attendance was about 4,500, as large as any hockey match ever drew to that rink.

At the outset, Appleby set a very fast clip, but Acoose stayed with him. Lap after lap the lively youth let the Englishman set the pace and stuck like a burr. But six or eight feet separated them for the first three miles, or 33 laps. On the 9th lap, Fred spurted but Paul jumped too.

The first mile was announced in 5:00 2-5, very fast for such a short track. Round they raced, no perceptible difference in speed showing till the 22nd lap [illegible]

LOCAL NEWS.

Norman Murray paid a business visit to the capital during the week.

T. D. Collison was in Warman last week end.

J. Landon of Landonville, was purchasing supplies in the town the end of the week.

Principal O'Meara of Wycliffe college, Toronto, will be in town Thursday.

R. J. King of the Welsdale district 33-5, was in town Saturday and reported seeding as in its last stages in that community.

J. Hird bought a nice pack of rat skins, 112 in number, from Ed. Sherwin for which the firm paid $11.80 or an average price of 10 cents per skin.

It is learned that the Rev. A. B. Aldridge, B.A., has received a hearty invitation to accept the pastorate of the Methodist church at Wetaskiwin.

Mr and Mrs. J. A. McAllister of Mannville, were in Vermilion Saturday and gave us a pleasant call. Mr. McAllister reports the wheat crop doing well throughout that district.

Favorable reports are coming in from all sides regarding the crops, many fields of spring wheat are up an inch to an inch and a half. Growth will now be rapid following the warm rains.

A union choir practice will be held this evening in the Presbyterian church in preparation for the approaching Sunday school convention. The musical committee is composed of Mrs. W. E. Gilbert, W. Ratliff and Mr. Davis.

Ed. Sherwin left last Wednesday night for Vancouver en route to Prince Rupert where he expects to remain till fall. Since leaving, the barn on his homestead, a modern building on stone foundation, was unfortunately destroyed by fire.

A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend a union meeting at the Methodist church on Friday night in connection with the annual district meeting. The visiting ministers, including the indian, Mr. Steinhauer, will furnish the programme. The admission is free; a collection will be taken up.

Setting in about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the country enjoyed a four hours downpour of warm rain — the kind which makes things jump. The heat of Sunday brought on copious showers in the evening which continued intermittently throughout the greater part of the night. Farmers are jubilant over present growing conditions.

Rev. Chas. Sheldon addressed the Kansas state board of agriculture some time ago on "What I would do if I was a farmer" in which he said, "First, I would take time to enjoy the scenery; secondly, I would buy a good kodak and take pictures of various things on the farm." If the Rev. Sheldon was a farmer he would have to do pretty much like other farmers or get out of business.

Rev. W. E. Gilbert returned Friday night from Vancouver, B. C., where he spent an enjoyable holiday with a brother. Mr. Gilbert is very favorably impressed with the coast city, climate and other conditions, and it will be learned with regret that he will in all probability shortly remove to that city to continue his ministerial work.

Mrs. A. E. Jones and family visited at Mrs. Frank McLean's homestead in the north district, for a few days returning to town Thursday.

Mr. Collinson, of the firm of Short Cross & Biggar, Edmonton, was in town looking after the interests of the McKenzie Mann Co. in their assessment appeal on unsubdivided property.

A practice match of the Vermilion cricket club will be played on Friday evening next at 6.45. All players are requested to turn out. Any intending players who have not yet paid their membership fee are asked to to do so as soon as possible.

The vicissitudes of life had an exemplification the other day, when an A1 lithographer by trade, in the guise of a 'Weary Willie' struck the town. He was heading for Winnipeg and had been successful in beating it from Vancouver via Calgary and Edmonton to this point. He spoke feelingly of the kindness of the western farmers, from whom no doubt he had received much hospitality.

Our readers are reminded of the dates of the second inter-denominational Sunday school convention of the Vermilion district, Thursday and Friday, June 10th and 11th, in the Presbyterian church, Vermilion, a detailed report of which appeared in our last issue. Billets will be provided for delegates whose names are reported to the secretary, Miss P. M. Brimacombe, Vermilion, within a reasonable time before the convention.

The picnic on the 24th advertised to be held on Ralph Berry's farm, 15-52-6, was much interfered with by the copious showers that fell most of the day. Some, however, both from the town and country, braved the elements and in spite of the rain these seemed to enjoy themselves. A splendid meal was provided by the ladies of the community. A short musical program was given. The financial proceeds were good considering the number present, being $17.00 after all expenses were paid.

Mr. Wm Hill of Moro Farm, recently returned from a trip through the southern portion of the province. While away he visited the large ranch of Mr. Hunter, near Olds, where he personally inspected the colts of the Belgian stallion 'Duke' and was more than satisfied with his get, some of the three year olds weighing about 1400 pounds from small mares, which satisfied Mr. Hill as to the breeding properties of the horse. Mr. Hunter while in Vermilion a short time ago, was trying to sell Mr. Hill a stallion but he withheld from purchasing until satisfied by a personal inspection of the quality of the "Duke's" colts.

A knot of men on the street corner were discussing the annoyance occasioned by dogs in attacks on rigs while driving through the country. A case was instanced of a particular dog which one of them said attacked his rig every time he passed, all efforts to beat it off proving unavailing. Just here another of the group broke in and said the same canine had come out at him, but only once as he had a sure way of stopping it. All were interested to learn how. He explained that he simply pulled up his horse, and stopping, leaned out of the rig and stared at the dog, the effect had been immediate and telling, with one look at his face the animal was cowed, his tail dropped and emitting a very melancholy howl it turned and sped for dear life. "Well," said the first complainant looking critically into the face of the speaker, "you might be able to do that but I couldn't." Then as the point of the joke was caught there was a hearty chorus of laughter in which all good-naturedly joined.

Cricketers Lose at Lloydminster

Owing to the unfavorable condition of the elements only seven of the local cricket team took chances for a game and went down to Lloydminster Victoria day the balance of the eleven being kindly made up by the Lloydminster C. C.

On arrival at their destination they were surprised to learn that no recent rains had fallen there and the weather for the holiday was all that could be desired, as a result a good day's cricket was enjoyed though Lloydminster won, putting together 122 runs to Vermilion's 66. Fox played a good innings for his 17 and carried off the batting honors for Vermilion.

The team was royally entertained by the Lloydminster C. C.

THEY ARE STILL WONDERING

Up in Kansas a number of years ago there was a country editor who invariably got out his weekly after his paper was issued on Friday and went on a stay that way till the following Monday, then steadily the squad got out his paper. One week he and his printer working for him got on a big 'lonesome' and stayed that way till next publication day. They then found themselves in a dilemma—paper day and no type up and the previous week's paper not even distributed—everything was just where they had left the week before. The printer wanted to know what to do. The editor scratched his tousled head a few minutes, grabbed a large composing stick and set in large letters across the page, "By request of three hundred prominent citizens we republish last week's paper." The problem was solved, but everyone is still wondering who were the "300 prominent citizens," and why they wanted the paper republished.

ANNUAL DISTRICT MEETING

All Parts of the Field Represented And Progress Reported

The annual district meeting of the Vermilion district convened in the Methodist church on Thursday and concluded its labors Friday.

Every field within the district was represented. A substantial increase in membership was reported, and the finances of the church have been well sustained. Vegreville leads the way with something over $1,700 for all purposes and Vermilion was second with over $1,000. Lay delegates were appointed to attend Conference, W. F. Raddatz being the nominee for the Vermilion field.

On Friday evening the visiting ministers favored the friends assembled in the church with addresses, duets and solos. Revs. McDonald, Davis and Steinhaur each spoke. Mr. Steinhauer giving a very interesting account of a visit paid the day before to the indian camp north of the town, Mr. Steinhauer himself being a full-blooded indian was able to converse freely with these poor folk and as he told the audience of their ignorance and restlessness, one could scarcely keep from comparing a christian with a pagan indian.

The singing of Mrs. Seller and Mr. Steinhauer in a Cree duet was greatly enjoyed.

VERMILION'S SPORTS DAY

There is a general desire to make July 12 a big day of sports for the town. On that date the Edmonton cricketers are due to play the local team and it has been suggested that tennis, baseball and football competitions be arranged as well as a list of foot races, jumping, etc. Several of the business men have signified their willingness to aid towards this end by contributions and it only remains for the sporting elements to get together and call a meeting to map out the details for the day, appoint committees and so forth to complete all the necessary arrangements as will guarantee a big day's attractions.

COUNCIL MEETING

Minutes of meeting of council May 25, 1909.

Present, Mayor Ryan; Councillors Dunsmore, Rutherford, Craig and Hayward.

The mayor announced that the council now sit as a court of revision and hear Mr. Collinson, who was present, representing the McKenzie-Mann company, but the appeal was not considered formally by the council.

The secretary was advised to write McKenzie & Mann company fully in regard to the assessment and explain the situation in detail.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

CANADIANS WON THE MATCH

A Large Crowd Witness The First Of A Series Of Games

Vermilionites, if anything, are true lovers of sport, and the real spirit was in evidence at the football game Monday night, not only amongst the big crowd which lined the flags, a large number of whom belonged to the fair sex—but between the opposing teams who were so strenuously striving for victory. More than the ordinary amount of interest was evinced in the game from the fact that it was the first of a series of three arranged to be played between representatives of England and Canada in football, baseball and cricket.

Promptly at eight Referee Collins sounded the whistle and the teams lined up as follows:

England—Goal, J. Gullen, backs, W. Morgan, J. MacPherson; half-backs, E. Sutton, H. Harrison, J. McGregor; forwards, T. Williams, W. Ellis, E. Taylor, H. Fyfe, C. Wilson.

The first part of the play was along the side and occasioned many throw ins, honors ran about even for the first ten minutes when Canada rushed the ball through and scored the first goal. From the kick off play became more open and the opposing backs were given the opportunity to demonstrate their kicking powers. Both goals were hard pressed several times, England finally eluding the vigilance of Dunsmore and scoring. At half-time the score stood 1—1.

In the second half Canada started out with a rush and some good play was witnessed the teams doing some excellent work. England made a beautiful shot on Canada's goal which just skimmed over the bar and soon after a goal went to Canada. A few minutes before time they got another and the game ended 3—1, for the Canadians.

The game was a hard one and keenly contested throughout. The play was clean and close checking broke up much of the combination play. Referee Collins kept the teams well in hand and gave general satisfaction.

The baseball match will be played to-night and cricket tomorrow (Thursday night.

DAIRYING AND THE CREAMERY

For the furtherance of the dairying industry which is one of the greatest industries in Canada and for that matter one of the great industries of the world, no better means can be placed at our door than the creamery. The creamery is here not only to facilitate the handling of his product for the farmer but to obtain for him the highest market value for the same, and to enable such results to be obtained the creamery must have the united co-operation and support of the dairying farmer.

In Alberta the dairy industry has increased steadily and substantially and we believe that today there are some 50 creameries and 10 or so cheese factories in our province, and there is every indication that Northern Alberta will become one of the best dairy sections in Canada. The present stage has not been attained without its preliminary set-backs, but under the present system of government supervision all that is demanded—and it is the essential—is the patronage of each and every farmer in the district whether he has 5 cows or 50 cows, and the creamery is an assured success. With insufficient patronage the cost of production for the few is as great as if the creamery were producing at its full capacity and the consequent result must necessarily be lower returns. In a district so bountifully blessed for mixed farming as this, it will undoubtedly be shortsighted policy and one which in a year or two will react to his great disadvantage, if widespread indifference is manifested among the farmers towards the creamery.

Give the creamery a united support and note the outcome. In a year or so it will be seen in fact that not only is the top-notch price being obtained but also that it is only through the instrumentality of a creamery that it is possible to successfully conduct the dairy branch of the farm.

RANCH NORTH OF EDMONTON

Man Who Bought Out Roosevelt Going Into Grand Prairie Country

Edmonton, May 25.—W. H. Williams, who seventeen years ago purchased from ex-President Roosevelt his huge ranch at Medora, Montana, will pass through Edmonton with 300 thoroughbred cattle and will trail to Grand Prairie, where he will establish one of the biggest ranches north of the boundary. Incidentally, Williams with other prospectors, will conduct expeditions into the north Peace River country to investigate the gold, asphalt and coal deposits, said to exist in abundance.

Williams will bring all his big bunch of thoroughbreds that have been grazing on the Roosevelt ranges and will trail them north via Athabasca Landing and the Lesser Slave Lake and Peace River trails. He states that the Grand Prairie country is far ahead of the famous ranching country of Montana.

NEW CITIES IN THE WEST

Next Generation Will See Many New Towns Arise on Western Plains

Winnipeg, May 23.—Now that the inauspicious month of April is past and forgotten, optimism is again the keynote, and people in all parts of the country seem to have made up their minds that it is going to be a good year anyway, and are converting this belief into values of brick and mortar, dry goods and haberdashery from the East, and enlarged orders everywhere in preparation for the "growing time." Happily, however, it is clear enough that the sharp lesson taught by the depression and slump in values of a year or so back has not been thrown away, and there appears no undue disposition to start "booms" or to reap the profits of good times before they have arrived. Of course, where so much new railway construction is going on, the inevitable speculators are busy locating townsites which they promise credulous investors will become in marvellous short periods second Winnipegs, and so on. Exploitations of this kind may do some good in the way of general advertisement of the country, but the ultimate harm in the shape of disgruntled investors who find themselves loaded up with worthless townsite lots in the long run far outweighs any such benefits. It is well for the investing public to call in the advice of a reputable western firm before accepting at its face value the alluring prospectus of the townsite promoter.

Yet there is something fascinating in the confident belief that somewhere on the empty map of to-day must spring up in the prairie west cities as great as or greater than the Winnipeg of to-day. There appears no reason to doubt that ultimately the country lying between the Red River and the Rockies will be filled up by a population of from ten to twenty or thirty millions, for it is practically certain that it can support that number comfortably, and emigration to the Canadian North-West is already following the line of least resistance, as is shown by the remarkable exodus going on this season from the American Middle West. Certainly such a population will require three or four great centres at least, and it becomes interesting to conjecture where they will be situate and to what qualities, conditions or accident they will owe their greatness. Winnipeg itself is an accident, but an accident conforming to a natural law. To be delicate about a matter that already more nearly touches the dead than the living, the selection of Winnipeg as the site for a great city was injudicious and dictated by interest rather than a due regard to economical laws. Selkirk was the natural site and a very much healthier one at that time, but it so happens that Winnipeg, or Fort Garry, as it was then, commands the narrow neck of land through which all Canadian transcontinental lines are compelled to pass, and dominating that strip, it came to dominate the distributing business of the Prairie West.

Edmonton holds quite as advantageous and strategical position as being at the gate of the Yellow Head Pass, while it also dominates all the great agricultural territory opening up to the north in the Peace River country and beyond. One need not have a predilection for Edmonton, which, by the way, gains but little by being the capital of Alberta, to concede that it is destined to rank second to Winnipeg. Calgary at present dominates the southern portion of that province, though it is not so free from rivals as is Edmonton. In Saskatchewan it is all sixes and sevens, and with no geographical restrictions in that wide open province, it is hard to see whether Regina will maintain its historic lead, be displaced by Saskatoon, by Moose Jaw, Prince Albert or even Weyburn, or whether a new city will spring full-armed to the conflict from out the mileage of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Then again it is certain that Fort William and Port Arthur will emerge a great lake-head city, and how about the Hudson Bay and Fort Churchill or Port Nelson? Or is that too much of a chimera for even these conjectures? A lot of map-making will be done in this country during next generation.

It is a long cry back to the days of Lord Selkirk, whose centennial it is proposed to celebrate three years hence. "Old Timers" in this country date from the "Red River days," or the late seventies and early eighties. Distinction attaches to the man, who like Hon. Frank Oliver in Edmonton, arrived in a Red River Valley cart, belaboring his oxen with a stick and fluent vocabulary, and something less to him who took part in the '85 Rebellion, but occasionally a side-wind, such as the death of a pioneer or such a reunion as was recently held by the historic families of Kildonan, blow back the leaf of history and reveals a period far anterior—a time before confederation, when as yet the Hudson's Bay Company was lord of the land and its factors traded in fur and dealt out even-handed justice from Cape Fullerton to Fort Garry. Those times and traditions are the closest remaining links to the brave days of Selkirk and his following who so gallantly pushed in the heart of a continent, and were not content with that. It is their pious memory that the good citizens of Winnipeg intend to celebrate three years hence, and at the same time show the outside world that Selkirk planted better than he knew.

Last year a newspaper started in Wainwright on the G.T.P., and shortly before Christmas a job plant office also went into business. Of course the editor of the Wainwright paper hadn't been there long enough to claim but that for him, Wainwright would have remained nothing but a grease mark on the map.

Methodist Conference

The Alberta conference of the Methodist church will meet at Strathcona from June 2nd to June 8th. Among notable officials who are expected to attend are Rev. Dr. Carman, general superintendent, Dr. [illegible], educational secretary, Rev. C. Manning, missionary secretary, and Rev. J. A. Doyle, secretary of the Epworth League and Sunday schools.

Crossfield, Alta., May 31.—Within the next two or three weeks work will be commenced on the new building for the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Crossfield.

Interrogatory

Do you know that your printed matter is an unfailing index to your way of doing business? That if it be slovenly, indifferent or common place, those who receive it will unconsciously get the impression that you are also careless in your general business methods?

Effectiveness

The continual use of good printing secures that "accumulative effect in advertising" which thousands of real live merchants are endeavoring to oppose.

That is your side of the story.

Original Ideas

We do not experiment with work except along the lines suggested by a desire for originality and individuality. We THINK, we SUGGEST, we CREATE and DESIGN, and take a deep personal interest in originating work best suited to your trade. We do nothing in a perfunctory manner.

WESTERN WHEAT REPORT

Winnipeg Paper Issues its First Monthly Report on Seeding Conditions

Winnipeg, Man., May 24.—The Manitoba Free Press has issued its first monthly report on seeding conditions. In its preface this journal explains the rather unusually early date of issuing this report by saying that it was in order to satisfy the known anxiety in business circles as to the extent by which seeding had been delayed by cold and unfavorable weather.

The net result of the reports of the several hundred correspondents communicated with is that from 80 to 90 per cent. of Western Canadian spring wheat is in the ground, but so far very little of it shows above surface, owing to cold and inclement conditions which have accompanied actual seeding operations.

However, the bright sunny weather of the past few days has been ideal to rush along germinations.

The report goes on to say that the lateness in growth is fully offset by the condition of the seedbed which is ideal.

There has been plenty of moisture all over the country, and the prime requisite now is warm weather and plenty of it.

Wheat seeding is fully two weeks later than in 1908 but from five to ten days earlier than in 1907, and grain has gone in under more favorable circumstances than in either of the years mentioned.

The most striking feature of the report which is bound to meet the most hostile criticism is that there is no increase in the acreage of land seeded to wheat in the Canadian West.

No doubt good grounds exist for the contention, but on the other hand, bearing in mind the large new acreage brought under the plough for the first time, as well as the incentive to seed wheat neglectful of all cereals by reason of its abnormally high price, there must be a miscalculation somewhere.

This report alluded to greater acreage seeded to coarser grains, especially oats, but therein lies no explanation of the unquestionably large increase in acreage under cultivation, and there seems little reason to doubt that wheat seeded will show at least ten per cent. increase over last year, while the general prospects of the crop, are, as this report states, very excellent.

Winnipeg, Man., May 24.—A highly satisfactory crop report has been issued by the Canadian Northern Railway. It states that almost all the wheat is in and the farmers have made considerable progress with coarse grains. No district has suffered from backward weather to any appreciable degree. The weather has been uniformly fair throughout the spring wheat belt during the past week, and the first stage of the crop of the present year has nearly passed.

All along the main line of the Canadian Northern seeding has made splendid progress. At Portage at Prairie wheat seeding has been completed, and eighty per cent. of the acreage in oats is sown. At Gladstone, Plumas, Dana, South Battleford, Islay and Chipman, all the wheat is in, and a dozen other points report it nearly all in.

At Canora the blade is two inches high. At Raddisson, North Battleford, St. Agathe, Dideville, and many other points all over the west, wheat is appearing. Many points report the acreage about the same as last year, though in the newer districts there are material increases.

Chailey Notes

Seeding is almost completed in this district.

The bachelors have formed a bachelor's club in this district, the object being to keep the young men from being decoyed by the wiles of the fair sex.

Miss Shirley Bellamy has returned after a visit south of Mannville.

We hear that Sharkey is going East and will return in July with bride; another poor fellow gone wrong.

Mr. E. Walker was looking for cows over East Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Letson was looking for a stray calf Sunday.

It is too bad you have no cows to stray off Jack, you had better let the hens loose.

Osmo's cows have wandered north again.

Gilbert is looking for his horse and has not returned.

We think that Bill will get the soldering iron home some day.

Mr. Wm. Machin has purchased a new trotter and expects to win the Mannville races the first of July.

Mr. Sutton has taken up his residence on his place again.

There are a great many of the bachelors looking for cattle lately. They generally find the girls home.

We hear that Charley is going to leave us. Sorry to see you go, Charley, may good luck go with you.

Mr. Ronnie McNitt, of Paskeyville, was a visitor at Mr. Shovar's last week.

Mr. J. Walton will not receive until after seeding.

The jinglers will soon jingle—another ten spot for the club.

Mr. Steve Williams has found work in town; lucky boy Steve.

G. D. Chute is not in favor of rural delivery.

Mr. Wm. Machin is going to show the Chailettes how to put up hay this coming season.

Items From 53 6

Alf. J. Thompson, who has been holding down a quarter in 53-6 for the past three years, and who left for the Clover Bar coal mines this year, has been appointed foreman and bookkeeper at the mine. Alf. intends to run over to the Old Country this fall and will return with Mrs. Alf. J. Thompson, when they will take up permanent residence on the homestead.

Contractor Parsons is reaching the finishing stages on the new frame school for this district. The school is on Sec. 3 and with its pretty belfry is a bright and cheerful land mark to the settlers.

A heavy log bridge is being built across the little creek on Sec. 1, which when finished will be considered a blessing by settlers and travellers alike. Numerous have been the mishaps occasioned in this crossing and many hours have been spent in extricating loads from this innocent looking stream.

Mr. Gates, of Vermilion, who has a homestead in 18-53-3 passed through to inspect his quarter this week. He intends making considerable improvements on it this season.

Mr. G. Crosby and family who came in this spring were fortunate in locating on the N. E. quarter of 36 in 53-5. A good log stable and large two storey frame house have been put up and the work of turning the prairie sod has begun.

Now is the Time to Make Preparations for Spring Rains

A few dollars spent in repairing your Granary roof will perhaps save you many times its cost by preventing damage to your grain from water.

We have all kinds of ready Roofing, from $1.50 per 400 square feet to $4.00 per hundred square feet for the best.

If you decide on a lumber and shingle roof now is good time to buy as shingles are liable to raise in price.

We are headquarters for tar and building paper at lowest prices.

THE Alberta Northern Lumber Co.

LIMITED

The heavy rains have had a beneficial effect on the grain and wheat is coming along well. A large per cent. of the grain is in and there will be a big acreage under crop this season in the township.

Potatoes for seed are again scarce owing to the pits being frozen last winter. Two or three were fortunate in escaping the frost and had a few bushels to dispose of to their less fortunate neighbors. Owing to the high price of seed potatoes the crop will be restricted.

Every available quarter in 53-6 is said to be taken up. Three years ago there were only two or three settlers located where today the country is a hive of industry.

The improvement of our roads will now receive attention from the representatives of our new local improvement district.

Western News Notes

A G. T. P. locomotive is supposed to be the cause of great fire devastation at Elstow, Bradwell, Sunny Plain and Davidson.

Edmonton has $326,846.96 invested in its educational institutions.

According to a police census, the population of East Calgary is 2,000.

The purchase of additional property for school purposes, to the extent of over $20,000 was authorized at the meeting of the Edmonton school board.

Edmonton Hospital Site

Edmonton, May 26.—J. W. Anderson, Hudson Bay land commissioner, is here to negotiate with the public hospital board for the sale of a big site on the Hudson Bay reserve for $150,000 on which a hospital is to be erected and also with the city for the sale of a huge plot for park purposes.

Canadian Northern Branch in Alberta.

Edmonton, May 23.—Twenty-five miles will be constructed this summer by the C. N. R. on the extension from Morinville north toward Athabasca Landing. Malcolm McCrimmon, of Edmonton, the railway contractor, has been awarded the contract for grading and this will commence this week. He already has a grading outfit and gangs on the ground at St. Emile. Twenty-five miles will be the extent of the construction on the Athabasca Landing line this year and will be the first of a branch line to be constructed under the government guarantee of bonds.

The C.N.R. will confine its efforts this summer chiefly to the construction of the Vegreville-Camrose-Calgary line of which they expect to complete 100 miles before fall. The Northern Construction Co., of Winnipeg, have been awarded the contract for the Vegreville line work which will be commenced within a week. The train service now operating to Morinville will be extended to the northern limit of the 25 mile extension. This will carry the line into the Bridge Lakes district, a particularly rich farming section and will give a train service over half the distance from the city to the Landing.

The line will be completed into the Landing next year.

A New Farm Implement

Saskatoon, May 24.—The latest device in farm machinery is now in operation on the farm of Fred Eagen on 17-36-5, about half a dozen miles from the city. It consists of a steam engine pulling a set of 10 gang plows behind which is a 4,000 pound sectional cement roller, followed by a seeder, on the teeth of which are chains for the purpose of covering the seed which has been sown. Thus the outfit breaks, rolls, seeds and harrows, under one operation. Working 20 hours per day, it prepares and seeds 50 acres. What was raw prairie the day before becomes a field full of promise for the harvest. Certain improvements were invented by Mr. Lund, a brother-in-law of Mr. Eagen, for which a patent was secured by the inventor. The entire section is to be sown with flax.

Killed At Wainwright

Wainwright, May 31.—John Brown, of Irvinsdale, about 18 miles north of here, was kicked on the head by a horse Thursday and his neck broken, death being instantaneous. He leaves a wife and four children.

New Town Started

Stettler, May 21.—The new town of Castor, which is about 50 miles east of Stettler, is all the rage just now. Already the Traders bank and the Merchants bank of Stettler have opened branches there.

LOCAL NEWS.

R. L. Craig returned from the south on Saturday.

Herbert Ellis of Edmonton is visiting his brothers, Fred and W. F.

Fred Ellis of Gilt Edge, was a visitor in town last week, and lent a kindly hand on the STANDARD.

A return football match, England vs Canada, will be played on the campus Monday evening next.

Fort Saskatchewan cricket club will be in Vermilion on June 24th to play their first match with the home club.

We are informed that Harry Palmer, Campbell Lake, has lost two valuable mares during the foaling period.

Sam Walker and family have moved to the homestead southwest of the town. Their house was moved yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Macnab were in from their homestead, fourteen miles southwest of Vermilion, the end of the week returning Sunday.

Mrs. W. E. Gilbert was taken suddenly ill shortly after the evening service in St. Saviour's church Sunday, her condition requiring medical attendance.

P. G. Pilkie reports that oats he seeded Wednesday last had sprouted by Friday. This gives an idea of how it is that the crops mature so rapidly in this country.

Roseborough and Co, jewelers, are moving into their new premises on Main street the end of the week, where they will be pleased to supply the wants of the public in their line.

Islay will hold their second annual Dominion day celebration on July 1, when a full list of sports will be run. A baseball tournament is arranged and a big day is anticipated. See posters later.

R. J. McClinton, First street south has greatly enhanced the appearance of the bakery and confectionery store by having the old front pulled down and larger show windows put in, also an additional light in the west front.

Rev. W. Simons left Friday for Hamilton, Ont., to attend the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church. He was accompanied by his wife and family and will spend some time at Lake Beauport, P. Q. He expects to be absent about five weeks.

Auctioneer A. A. Berry will sell the W. F. H. Thompson stock of general merchandise Thursday at 11 a. m. He also holds a big monthly sale Saturday, full particulars of which are given on the large posters, when a large list of goods and stock will be sold. The sale will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon on the property opposite Hird's hardware store Main Street.

The meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance held in the Methodist church on Tuesday night of last week was fairly well attended. Rev. Rochester gave a forcible address, specially emphasizing the facts that the first day of the week is the rest day according to the law of the land and that on national grounds it is a prime necessity to have a rest day for all the people.

Sunday services in the Methodist church were specially interesting, that of the morning being addressed by Mrs. Sellar, who has had charge of the Indian day school at Saddle Lake. By means of blackboard illustration Mrs. Sellar explained the Cree language characters in a very instructive fashion. Mr. Sellar, the missionary at Saddle Lake spoke in the evening.

A. Campbell, M. P. P., for Vermilion District, spent Friday in town.

A. Bowtell of Onion Lake visited in town for a few days last week.

The Lloydminster squadron will go into camp at that place on June 22nd.

Jack Cullen, who has been working at Kitscoty during the last month, visited in town on Saturday.

Wm. Hepburn, who has been working for J. Hope during the last year, left for Edmonton Thursday.

Final attention is called to the Sunday school convention, Thursday and Friday of next week, to be held in Vermilion. Reports to hand give promise of a most successful convention.

The construction has started on the C.N.R. line from Prince Albert. About 100 men and teams began work on Tuesday morning. This line is chartered to come to Battleford but only thirty miles will be built this year.

Rev. D. McVicar of Mannville will occupy the pulpit of the Presbyterian church at both the morning and evening service. The services were conducted last Sunday by Rev. Mr. McClennan of Wainwright.

The new creamery building under the hands of the contractor, Mr. Ben Rodd, is progressing rapidly, and it is hoped that it will be ready to commence operation by the end of June. A good water supply has been struck. —Lloydminster Times.

The St. George Club have decided to hold a picnic at Sullivan's Lake on June 17th. Tickets are 35 cents obtainable at Pilkie Bros. and Woodward & Morgan's stores. The club will supply rigs and convey all parties desirous of going to the grounds at a small fee. Refreshments will be provided, boating on the lake and a list of sports. A splendid time is assured and no doubt a big crowd will take advantage of the day's outing.

Some of the boys who have made a success in life were at one time country correspondents for country newspapers. There are few better ways that a person can help to develop his or her better education than by corresponding for a newspaper. When We Fail

To suit a customer after doing all we can to make the sale, there's no harm done. We understand that it is hard to please everybody and a very difficult task to please some.

Still, difficult as the task may be, we succeed well in pleasing our customers generally, for they return to us and ask for the same grade or make of Shoe they already bought. Indeed, it is a common thing to have parents come into this store and ask for "Shoes for the children the same as the last we bought here." and even INSIST on getting new ones the same as the old ones were when they bought them months before.

A CANADIAN NAVY LIKELY

Preliminary Plans For Expenditure on Above Under Way

Ottawa, June 5—An interesting announcement is made here today in connection with the new Canadian navy, though the details of the programme must await the result of the imperial defence conference in London in July, at which Admiral Kingsmill, the commander of the Canadian marine service, and Major-General Sir Percy Lake, chief military adviser to the minister of militia, will be present as advisers to Hon. R. P. Brodeur and Sir Frederick Borden, the Canadian delegates.

There is every indication that the outcome will involve the organization of a Canadian naval militia and the construction of a Canadian auxiliary fleet involving an expenditure of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 spread over four or five years.

Already representatives of Newcastle-on-Tyne ship-building firms have begun negotiations with the Canadian government, one firm having sent over a special envoy to give prices for torpedo boat destroyers and similar craft.

ISLAY AND ITS DOINGS

Big Celebration July 1. Many New Residents Coming In

Mr. S. R. Giles has taken up his residence in town, having taken over an implement agency.

The Rev. Mr. McLellan (Presbyterian) has completed his house adjoining the church and has just brought his wife and family in.

Mr. Dixon, lately from Ontario, is erecting a large residence here, which will make another improvement to the town. Mr. Dixon has, we understand, turned over the livery barn to his sons.

Rev. Mr. French, church of England, was a visitor in town on Whit Monday.

An interesting ceremony took place on Wednesday, June 2nd at the home of J. Mcnary, when Mr. J. T. Fyte was married to Miss K. Williamson. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. McLennan.

Mr. Thomas Nichols arrived from the East on Saturday, bringing with him his wife and daughter. They intend to stay for the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Nichols sons, south of the town.

Mrs. Hennig, wife of the hotel proprietor, and family arrived in town this week.

July 1st will be celebrated here in good style, all kinds of sports will be run and a great day is anticipated. Look out for the posters and make a point of being in Islay on Dominion Day.

To Join Benedicts

The engagement has just been announced of Miss Jean M. Duff, eldest daughter of W. M. Duff, of Bridgewater, and Churchill L. Freeman, LL.B., of Vermilion, Alberta, late of Bridgewater. The marriage will take place at Winnipeg, Manitoba, at the residence of W. F. Duff about the later part of June. A wedding trip East will follow.—Bridgewater Bulletin

Vermilion's Opportunity

Ottawa June 3—Deputy Minister of Agricultural O'Halloran is leaving to-day on a tour of inspection of the experimental farms of western Canada. It is understood that during the present summer an expert will secure options on a number of sites in the prairie provinces and British Columbia for additional experimental farm stations which are required. From these Superintendent Saunders will subsequently make a selection of suitable stations.

British America Elevator Co. Is Building At Vermilion

The British America Elevator Co., have secured a site near the immigration hall and will erect a large elevator immediately.

The same company have just completed the building of an elevator at Mannville and will also build at Kitscoty.

Provincial Appointments

Among the provincial appointments, etc. recently made by the Lieutenant-Governor by and with the advice of the executive committee are the following of interest to this locality:

Orbin Bradenberg Sproule of Orbindale has been appointed a Justice of the Peace.

Neville Robertson of Vermilion has been appointed a Commissioner for taking affidavits.

Among the resignations and retirements is the name of James Common, of Vermilion, Justice of the Peace.

The Stockdale school district has been empowered to borrow $300 to improve the school site.

MANNVILLE MARKET DAY

Board of Trade Announces Saturday June 12 for First Market

The Mannville board of trade has taken steps to establish a regular monthly market day, the first of which is to be held Saturday next in that town.

The method adopted is to have the parties who have such articles as live stock, machinery, furniture, etc to sell to list them with Mr. C. Reeck the secretary of the board of trade, prior to the date of the regular monthly market day. The merchants of the town will offer special sales, closing out bargains, etc and are looking to the co-operation of the entire community in making it one of mutual interest and profit.

Welldale Doings

Welldale in June—How restfully beautiful is nature, as the sun nears the western horizon, and the long day is almost over! Then again as we rise in the early morning, how sweet and refreshing the air, bearing, as it seems, the odor of the fresh and tender growth about us, and how inspiring the scene. We look this way, and stretching for miles along is a beautiful flat, interspersed with lakes and ponds, which gleam in the sun or shimmer in the moonlight. Turning our eyes in another direction we are charmed by the view of water, hills and bluff, in terraced order, forming a picture which would take the artist to his brush. We wonder if we ever before saw grass so green, flowers so cheering, bluffs so beautiful, or water so restful, could the air be purer or the song of the birds sweeter! In short, could nature wear a more beautiful garb than she does in the month of June at Welldale.

Mrs. H. Lawes two sisters and brother in law arrived from England last week. We are pleased to welcome them to our neighborhood.

Mrs. A. Headley of Edmonton is expected to join her husband on the homestead this week.

Mr. E. Kempton thinks there is no place like Welldale for gardens. His potatoes are well up and he has beans almost ready to bloom. Vermilion merchants will know where to send orders for early vegetables.

The ladies "First Aid" society held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. F. Lawes. "Toothache" and "Felons" were subjects discussed. The next meeting is to be with Mrs. H. A. Crosby, when the subject for discussion will be "Wounds and Bandaging." The society now has about $12 worth of medicines and supplies for the use of its members. Being situated so far from town, this is a great convenience.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM

In another column it will be seen that it is the intention of the department of agriculture at Ottawa to secure options on a number of sites in the prairie provinces for additional experimental farms, from which later on the superintendent will make selection of suitable stations. That Vermilion should have one of these experimental farm stations established in its vicinity is obvious. It is the natural point in which to carry on the valuable work of the experimental farm for this particular portion of Northern Alberta.

Its claims are strong and without opposition and it is safe to say that the Vermilion Board of Trade will take this matter up and see that assurances are given by the department that the expert, whom they will send out this summer, will make exhaustive investigations at Vermilion with this most desirable object in view.

DAIRYING AND THE CREAMERY

Anent the creamery, we have rubbed shoulders for several years with the people of a district who have marketed as high as 325,000 bushels of wheat in a season—but such inroads has the dairy business made, that last year the amount of wheat marked had dropped to 150,000 bushels. With few exceptions every farmer was shipping from their market town to a creamery about 60 miles distant the cream from five, ten or a dozen or more cows, and this company was able to make it more profitable for the farmer than exclusive wheat growing, from the mere fact that it recieved shipfrom many points the output of hundreds of cows. The farmer formerly drew his cream cans to the shipping point but in the last year or two, the creamery company have put on collectors without lowering the price being paid by them to the producer.

No further statements of actual facts than these should be required to convert the most indifferent as to where his best interests lie, and then one more thing can be said in favor of the dairy industry and that is that while with the aid of the cow we produce through our dairies something like $100,000,000 annually, the soil is not impoverished in the process but is left in better condition every year to produce another $100,000,000.

A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

What about the rights of posterity? As a rule the present is so absorbed in its own affairs that it gives little heed to the future; and so it comes about that if people do not actually say, they at least think and act—"after us the deluge." That is why we slash down our timber and burn each year about as much as we use; that is why in many parts of this rich and comparatively new continent there are large areas which, cropped year after year without giving anything being given back to it, finally refuses to further reward the unworthy husbandman. The same spirit has led to the depletion of some of our fisheries and the wasting of much of our coal. The needs of the present seem all-important; and too often they are supplied in such a reckless, prodigal manner as to make it almost certain that the needs of the future will not be so easily met.

The possessor of an estate encumbered with a mortgage must not dissipate the capital, for instance, he must not cut and sell the timber. The position of the people of to-day with respect to the national resources is somewhat analogus. They should take only what they require, using the great national estate like prudent administrators, and passing it on in such a condition that it will be useful to those who succeed.

"We Canadians have on our shoulders the responsibility of half a continent—a larger responsibility than is, I think, on the shoulders of any equal number of people on the face of the earth. There is the greater necessity, therefore, to make the most of our heritage." So spoke the Minister of Agriculture the other day in an address delivered to the Canadian Club at Montreal.

Mr. Fisher had only lately returned from the Conference held in Washington respecting the conservation of the natural resources of North America. He was full of his subject, and he said many things that it would be well if people of to-day, well for the people of to-morrow who, so far as natural resources are concerned, will have only what the people of to-day leave them.

"Experts", said Mr. Fisher, claim that we are woefully wasting our resources and recklessly placing them in the hands of private individuals and corporations, for which in the near future our descendants will have to pay enormous sums and exercise great ingenuity to recover."—Montreal Standard.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

Series Of Interesting Games Take Place During The Week

The baseball game between England and Canada was played on Wednesday evening and resulted in a win for the Canadians by the decisive score of 22—2. Despite the disparity in the score the play was of a thoroughly interesting nature, while the banter and rooting of the big crowd which witnessed the match was received good-naturedly by the players. The batteries were Fox and Morgan for England; Brimacombe and Norton for Canada.

Having lost in two of the games of the series England was determined to show their superiority in the great national game of the Old Land, cricket, which was played Thursday evening. The attendance as usual was large and the noise equal to previous occasions. The Canadians were first to bat and were disposed of for 42 runs, the bowling of Williams proving most effective, he being successful in disposing of no less than 7 men. When nicely set Stephens was given out lbw for 8, Fox was bowled at 9 and Jackson had the honor of carrying his bat for 6 not out.

Great Britain put up a strong game, the stand of Williams (17) and Gulland (22 not out) being the features of the innings; Ellis with 11 not out played a good game. Darkness stopped the play with the score at 70 for 9 wickets down, Great Britain winning by 1 wicket and 28 runs. Freeman and Cooper did the bowling for Canada.

Below is given the full score:

CANADA
Owens, caught & bowled Williams	0
Dimmell, c Gulland b Williams	3
Freeman, c Morgan b Williams	5
Stephens, lbw b Bryden	8
Fox, b Richardson	9

Total for 9 wickets	70

In an intensely interesting and hotly contested baseball game Friday night the town nine defeated the C. N. R. team by the narrow margin of 13 to 10. Owing to a sore arm Brimacombe was unable to twirl for the town, Jackson going into the box and doing satisfactory work with Norton behind the bat. Jones and Irwin kept things going for the railroaders. Mackenzie of the C.N.R. team was struck on the side of the head by one of Jackson's curves and knocked down, while Irwin peeled some skin off the forehead of Walker, fortunately neither of the players were badly hurt and pluckily kept in the game.

Masonic Church Parade

On Sunday, June 20th at 2 P. M. the Vermilion Lodge of the A. F. & A. M. will attend the Church of England for Divine service.

Attention is directed to the new ads this issue of Craig & Falkins, A. F. Armstrong and Miss A. Seefoote.

Watch the paper for the date of the Strawberry Festival to be held under the auspices of the Presbyterian church.

One of our citizens who occasionally wipes the dishes for his wife, became tired of the job and refused, saying that "it is not a man's work." Not feeling disposed to lose his help she brought the Bible out to convince him of his error and read as follows from II Kings 21:13: "And will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down." It is needless to say that he is still doing his occasional stunt.

Campbell Lake Events

Campbell Lake annual picnic will be held Friday, June 25. Baseball match, basket ball, races of all kind for both young and old and brass band to be in attendance. Everybody come and have a good time but don't forget your basket. An all day picnic.

Mrs. Spencer and children have arrived from England, we welcome them to our midst.

Miss Harriet Bartle has gone to Lamont, she will be missed by her friends and associates.

Allandale school is progressing favorably under the able management of Miss J. Allen.

Mr. R. W. Falkner of Athens, Ont., was a caller at the Lake on Saturday last.

Mr. Herbert Worden and daughter of Brockville, Ont., have arrived to stay. Welcome to the Northwest!

A couple of our bachelors are preparing to build new houses. We wonder if they intend to still batch.

The town gardens are making prodigious headway these days.

The growing time. Ideal weather with an occasional shower or two.

A. F. Silverback of Pegois P. O. district in 54-7, spent a few days in town during the week.

The W. A. of the church of England purpose giving an Ice Cream Social on Thursday evening June 24th. Further particulars later.

We have received Volume 1, No. 1, of the Vermilion Standard, a new independent weekly paper. S. R. P. Cooper is the editor and we wish him success in his venture.—Asquith Empire.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hodgins of the Welsdale district were in town for a couple of days last week. Mr. Hodgins is chairman of the new local improvement district recently organized north of Campbell Lake.

Mr. Jos. McKone informs us that he has had word from Alex. Simson of Seattle, and as anticipated he is the long lost member of the family. He is now married and is anxious for Joe to go out to the Seattle exposition.

Interrogatory

Do you know that your printed matter is an unfailing index to your way of doing business? That if it be slovenly, indifferent or common place, those who receive it will unconsciously get the impression that you are also careless in your general business methods?

Effectiveness

The continual use of good printing secures that "accumulative effect in advertising" which thousands of real live merchants are endeavoring to oppose.

That is your side of the story.

Original Ideas

We do not experiment with work except along the lines suggested by a desire for originality and individuality. We THINK, we SUGGEST, we CREATE and DESIGN, and take a deep personal interest in originating work best suited to your trade. We do nothing in a perfunctory manner.

Secures Dockyard And Ship Plant

Port Arthur, Ont., May 28—Port Arthur is to have the biggest dry dock and ship-building plant in the Canadian side of the great lakes. An agreement was signed to-day on behalf of the city with a new company known as the Western Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., composed principally of Cleveland capitalists and including A. F. Bowman of Southampton, who is representing them in negotiations here. The agreement calls for the construction, equipment and operation of a dry dock capable of receiving the largest vessels on the great lakes, and a ship-building plant capable of building such vessels.

River Driver Drowned

Hudson Bay Junction, June 4—Wm. Curry was drowned in the Etomami river, a few miles above this place, last evening. He had been employed by the Red Deer Lumber company on their river drive, and while attempting to break a jam was carried by the current on a single log out of the reach of his comrades, and being unable to swim, was drowned before those attempting a rescue could reach him. Very little is known of the deceased, but he is supposed to have come from near Owen Sound, Ont. The body has not yet been found, though searching parties are constantly at work.

Cattle Rustlers Sentenced

Red Deer, Alta., May 30—The adjourned sitting of the supreme court, Judge Stuart presiding, terminated yesterday and resulted in the conviction of the five men charged with cattle stealing. Irwin Holt got 9 years, Lewis Salway 5 years, Jas. Holt 2 years, Jack Dubois 9 months, and Joe Cardinal 3 months.

Douks Migrating To Coast

Broadview, Sask., June 3—A second party of Doukhobors numbering 472, mostly women and children, arrived here yesterday in prairie schooners to entrain for Waterloo, B.C., to join their friends who have preceded them. The party evoked favorable comment for their intelligent appearance and cleanliness and for the system and order apparent in the transaction of their business. The drivers and teamsters return to Yorkton today.

Survey Parties Ready

Edmonton, May 31—Arrangements are complete for the placing of survey parties in the field to run preliminary lines of the Alberta and Great Waterway railway from Edmonton to Fort McMurray. The engineers and men are engaged, pack horses secured and all are in readiness to start, when E. A. James, general manager, and Dr. Waddell, consulting engineer of the company arrive in Edmonton this week or next. R. H. Richford, engineer of Winnipeg is now in the city and will have charge of the first party that will leave for the north. He reached Edmonton on Saturday.

Pugsley Coming West

Ottawa, May 29—Hon. Wm. Pugsley stated today that he would proceed west in about ten days and that he would visit all the great public works of the west right through to the coast. His visit of inspection he anticipates, will occupy about six weeks.

Prince Rupert Lot Sale

Vancouver, B. C., May 25—With a couple of thousand bidders and spectators present the sale of Prince Rupert lots commenced this morning. In the first hour and a quarter one hundred thousand dollars worth of property was sold at lively bidding. Westonhaven Brothers of Seattle, bought the first lot, being 25 feet frontage on Second avenue for eight thousand. The record price up to noon was paid for two lots on the corner of MacBride and Second streets in the centre of the new town, which were bid up to sixteen thousand five hundred dollars.

Prince Rupert Sale

Vancouver, May 27—The total of the Prince Rupert sale up to tonight is one million dollars.

United States And Canada An Example To Whole World

Lake Mohonk, N.Y., May 20—J. Allen Baker, Liberal member of the British parliament for East Finsbury, the last formal speaker at to-day's session of the Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration, emphasized the continued neighborliness and good fellowship of the United States and Canada as an example to the nations of what the absence of armaments and fortifications on an international boundary will do to promote peace.

"I largely endorse," said Mr. Baker, "what President Butler has said as to the emotional insanity of the present mad race for battleships in Great Britain and Germany. Our house of Commons is the chief sinner in having started the crazy competition in building dreadnoughts. But you must remember that we have a yellow press in Great Britain and you must not believe all that it says about the so-called German war scare."

In conclusion Mr. Baker declared that the peace of the world today lay in the hands of the United States, Germany and Great Britain, and that the United States can absolutely join the hands of Great Britain and Germany, prevent possible warfare and "stop the crazy competition in building Dreadnoughts" and he invited President Taft to take the lead in so doing.

Bloomington Jottings

Mr. John Lynn, Sr., now wears the smile that wont come off. The stork visited his home the 2nd inst. bringing a little girl.

Miss Annie Campbell who is staying with her sister Mrs. John Lynn, purposes going to Edmonton next Friday.

Messrs. Jos. Hunt, Al. Townsend and G. M. Cundal went to Vegreville last Saturday with the Mannville baseball team. They report a very pleasant time. A double-header was played that day resulting in a win for each team.

Mrs. G. M. Cundal and Mrs. N. H. Adams went to Vegreville last Saturday to see the ball games.

G. M. Cundal had the misfortune to have his hand spiked while making a slide for a base; although painful, the wound is healing nicely.

Mr. S. V. Lee and Miss B. Mark of the Mannville post office staff, visited with Miss Mark's mother on Sunday.

Mr. Riddley, the new Methodist minister, preached his first sermon here last Sunday. He appears to be a bright energetic young man, certainly he is a fluent speaker.

On Tuesday the 15th inst. a picnic will be held at the Bloomington school house. It is not decided what attractions there will be but it is almost certain that there will be a baseball game. Everyone come, we are bound to have a good time.

Some of the things we are thankful for—that the farmers are done seeding, that the crops are growing nicely, that the cattle are getting fat on the grass, that the horses will soon get fat now that spring work is over, that there are only a few dozen mosquitoes so far and that as long as they last we'll have summer.

Railroad Negligent

Edmonton, May 23—That the G.T.P. has been guilty of serious contraventions of the public works health regulations on the grade between Edmonton and Pembina in not having proper medical and hospital facilities in the grade camps, is the conclusion reached Saturday evening by the jury which gave a verdict for $5,000 damages to George White, for insufficient treatment of a broken leg, caused in an accident last summer.

Court Notes

Before P. G. Pilkie, J. P., the following cases were heard:

Macdonald vs Connors—Wage case, decision reserved till Saturday.

Farrell vs Dow—Assault case, dismissed.

Before Inspector Macdonald of Fort Saskatchewan:

King vs McGinnis—Perjury, honorably discharged.

Before Messrs. Pilkie and Robinson, J. P's:

King vs Searf—Bad wire case, discharged.

Will Visit Peace River

MIGHTY HERD PASSED THROUGH

Many People Get a Glimpse of the Buffalo on Route to New Grounds

A special train conveying the herd of buffalo from Lamont to their new quarters near Wainwright, passed through on the C. N. R. Friday about mid-night. A large number had congregated at the depot to get a glimpse of these mighty denizens of the plains and waited from around 10.30, the hour the train was reported to reach here, until it finally arrived. Though only a short stop was made, sufficient opportunity was afforded to size up the vast array of animals which were the subject of varied and numerous exclamations of surprise. Certainly there are some monstrous buffalo in the herd and all appear to be in splendid shape and condition.

They were conveyed to their new feeding grounds via Saskatoon and back west over the G.T.P.

FOR A SCHOOL LIBRARY

Concert and Social Friday Evening for a Library Fund

A concert and social to be held at the Alexandra school, Vermilion, is announced for Friday evening, June 18th, the proceeds from which are to be devoted towards a School Library.

A baseball match will be held at the school grounds at 7 o'clock p. m. and other games will also take place. At 8.30 a concert to be given by the best local talent assisted by the school is to be given and refreshments will be served.

Principal Hartley and his staff are taking every step possible in making the affair a grand success from all points of view, and it is safe to say that their efforts and the laudable object which it is to serve will meet with undivided response from every citizen of the town.

C.N.R. SUMMER TIME CARD

Edmonton Schedule Cut Down Two Hours

By the summer time card which went into effect on the Canadian Northern Railway at midnight on the 13th inst. Vermilion still continues to have a night service. The features of this schedule of chief interest to our readers are subjoined:

The main line west train to Edmonton will leave Winnipeg at 9 o'clock p.m. daily, instead of at 6.15 as at present; will arrive at Portage la Prairie at 11 p.m., Dauphin at 3.45 a.m., Kamsack at 8.30, Humboldt at 6.10, Warman at 4.05 p.m., North Battleford at 7.25, Vermilion at 1.15 a.m., and arrive at Edmonton at 7 a.m., thus making the run in 35 hours, a reduction of two hours over the present schedule. This train leaves Edmonton at 9 p.m., Vermilion at 2.40 a.m., North Battleford at 8.20 Warman at 11.20, Humboldt at 2.25 p.m., Kamsack at 8.15 p.m., Dauphin at 2.05 a.m., Portage at 7, and arrives at Winnipeg at 11.10 a.m., which is almost a reduction of two hours over the present card.

On the Regina-Prince Albert line close connections will be made in both directions with the Edmonton main line express daily except Sunday. There will also be a special passenger service between Saskatoon and Warman, where connection will be made with the main line trains.

FARMERS' MEETING AT VERMILION

C. C. Castle To Speak On Manitoba Grain Act

Under the auspices of the United Farmers' Association a meeting will be held in Vermilion on Saturday, June 26 at 2 o'clock p.m.

Mr. C. C. Castle, warehouse commissioner, Winnipeg, will address the meeting explaining the Manitoba Grain Act in detail, and he will be pleased to discuss any questions respecting the handling and shipping of grain.

All those interested in selling grain are invited to attend.

WILL BE A GREAT EVENT

Islay's Celebration July 1. Board Of Trade To Be Formed

The Dominion Day celebration at Islay on July 1st promises to be a great event. The posters are now out and give a long list of events which will take place. The Calithumpian parade will take place at 10 a.m. and should prove to be a big source of amusement. The baseball tournament commences at 1.30 p.m. and following that a big list of sports, including horse races, pony races, bucking contest, Indian pony race, flat races, ox race, obstacle race, greasy pig race, etc., etc. There will be a concert in the Presbyterian church, and later in the evening a dance in the school house under the auspices of the I. A. A.

Mr. H. A. Edwards, church of England catechist, left town on Friday for Prince Albert, where he will represent this mission at the Synod. He expects to return about the 17th and will conduct the service here on Sunday the 20th at 11 a.m.

Crops are looking good in this district and the recent showers have done much good.

It is expected a Board of Trade will be formed here shortly.

Thought the Town was Wet Enough

Big black clouds loomed up Saturday afternoon in skirmishing order without shedding any dew drops on the town. Rains visited different portions of this part of the province Sunday though only a light shower fell here.

Mrs. P. G. Pilkie was a passenger for Edmonton the first of the week.

Mr. F. C. Underwood of Edmonton, spent Sunday with his friend C. H. Glanville.

19 to 4 in favor of Mannville was the result of the match Friday night against Vegreville.

A regular weekly Saturday afternoon sale has been inaugurated by Auctioneer A. A. Berry. All having articles or stock to dispose of are invited to see him.

The S.S. convention held last week was a splendid success and we regret that a full report of proceedings is not to hand. The attendance was good and evident interest taken in the discussions.

H. H. Collins, our local tailor, has secured a large order for the uniforms for the Citizens' Band of one of our neighboring towns. H. H.'s ability along this line of work has been demonstrated heretofore and if the real thing in uniforms can be turned out, he is the man who can do it.

A cricket match was played last evening Town vs Homesteaders and resulted in a draw. The Town put together 60 runs of which Thornton's 26 were made in dashing form. Gulland 13 and Reed 11 not out got into the doubles. The Homesteaders had compiled 63 runs for 9 wickets when darkness stopped the play. Morgan's 30 was the chief contribution and the top score of the match. It was a good practice match.

GOOD ROADS

Up to the present time this part of labor has not received much attention in face of the enormous task which lies before us, and the prairie trails, and new ones at that, are the main means of conveyance to and from our market towns. With the organization of the rural areas into local improvement districts, the first real advancement will be made in the direction of systematic, and in so far as conditions permit, permanent road making.

Apart from the foremost requirement of good roads to give easy means of transportation to the farmer to his market town, they are just as important as good farming, and as good farming improves a locality there is nothing that will so materially increase the value of land and of the district it is situated in than good roads.

The main work of our different local improvement districts for some time at least, will of necessity be in the direction of leading roads. It is imperative, if the settlers in the outlying territory are to draw loads to market, that at the very outset a well defined system of leading roads should be inaugurated, and the work laid out in each improvement district to connect with that in adjoining ones, only in this way can the work be harmonized. Work along this line will be further facilitated by the aid given by the provincial government towards road building.

In loading for market unless there is a continuous good road we can only load for the worst parts of such road no odds how good the rest may be, and as we have now reached that particular stage of development where heavy teaming is anticipated to their market towns from farms many miles out, strenuous efforts must be put forth to make, as a start, fairly passable roads for the marketing of grain this fall. Good trafficable roads are only attained after many years of intelligent construction and the expenditure of large sums of money, but a great deal of lost time may be saved if, where grading is to be done it be done with due regards to drainage and the shedding of water.

The filling in of the worst spots placing of culverts and a few small bridges, is, in a new country with new settlement, a long move towards the desireable end—good roads.

AN EARLY NORTHERN CORN

The Minnesota Agricultural Experimental station has completed tests on a new variety of corn suitable for growth in the northern part of that state. The growing season in western Canada is longer and more favorable to corn crops than that of northern Minnesota, so this corn should prove of great value to our farmers.

This variety, called Minnesota No. 23, is especially adapted to short growing seasons. It possesses an early maturing quality, and is at the same time a comparatively high yielding variety. The variety was widely tested in Northern Minnesota during the past season and good results obtained.

Minnesota No. 23 has been tested and improved at the various agricultural stations in the northern part of that state for the past fifteen years, and the experts think that the seed has now been brought to a proper state for distribution to the farmers.

The average sized ear of this corn is 6.5 inches long and 5.0 inches in circumference. Selected ears have an average of 84.5 per cent. of corn to the ear, the form of the ear tends slightly towards the tapering. In color it is a white-capped yellow dent. The space between the rows of kernels is slight, just enough to show the rich yellow of the body of the kernels. The kernels are not what might be termed deep, but are well formed, with straight sides and square shoulders. They are a little on the thin and broad order and bear about 16 per cent. of the ear weight, thus leaving 84 per cent. of shelled grain. The stocks are small, clean cut, well leafed and usually free from suckers.

The names of growers of Minnesota No. 23, in northern Minnesota will be furnished on request to C. P. Bull, assistant agriculturist, St Anthony Park, Minn.

RAISING FARM POULTRY

Poultry raising on western farms is rapidly increasing and farmers are beginning to realize that such an industry is a profitable investment.

The farmer keeping fowls under the conditions found on the ordinary farm wants fowls that will rustle, will get out into the fields and meadows and pick up a part of their living. He wants a breed that is not in any way an oddity. To have large crests and heavily feathered legs and monstrous combs are objectionable, because he does not see that they serve any useful purpose. He feels that such superfluities are out of place on the farm. As on most farms, chickens are hatched and raised in the natural way, the farmer's hens must be sitters. The farmer's breed must be suitable for meat as well as eggs, so that the surplus poultry may be disposed of at a profit in the fall. In addition, in this cold climate, where the fowls are exposed to intense cold in the winter, the breed must not possess too large combs or wattles. The breeds of fowl that are pre-eminently the farmer's fowls are the Plymouth Rocks, the Wyandottes, the Rhode Island Reds and the Orpingtons.

SPORTS JULY 12

A meeting was held in the town hall last evening to arrange for a celebration and day of sports to be held in Vermilion on Monday, July 12th. Committees were appointed to arrange a list of events as follows:

READY FOR NORTHERN LINE

Hudson Bay And Pacific Railway Company Gives Notice To File Location Plans

Prince Albert, Sask., June 10—On his return home W. W. Ruttan, M. P. for Prince Albert, found awaiting him a notice from the department of railways to the effect that on June 19 the Hudson Bay and Pacific railway would file location plans with the department.

This announcement means a good deal not only to Prince Albert but to all that great empire to the north, vaguely termed "the north." The Hudson Bay and Pacific Railway company did not attract much attention when their charter first came up. It looked just like an application for another of those charters which cover Saskatchewan like a spider's web. About the same time, however, the Prince Albert bill for a line to the bay was coming up and so the application was looked into a little. The western members, it is said, found the Hudson Bay and the Pacific Railroad company about the strongest aggregation that ever applied for a company is about $50,000,000, and the promoters claim that it is nearly all subscribed and part paid up.

The company according to information furnished here, have had surveys made of their two lines, and they have had soundings made of the harbor of Port Churchill. They showed, furthermore, that once the rails are at the lake front the White Star steamship line will start an up-to-date service. The company's representatives exhibited contracts already made.

The company has charters for two lines. The first runs directly due west from Churchill through Athabasca lake to the Pacific ocean via the Yellowhead pass. The second line runs from Churchill in a southerly direction to the northwest corner of Lake Winnipeg. The line follows the north bank of the river to the Pas and to Prince Albert.

The company guaranteed that within a short time of their location line being approved and other things completed, to start construction work at three different points in the road, of which Prince Albert will be one. They offered to abandon their line of route and use the government surveys and line and to give all the same privileges as to running powers for other roads as a government road would want a guarantee of bonds or a land grant, and if they got a land grant they would be perfectly willing to take the land along their northern route, that is between Churchill and Athabasca lake, and help to open up that great country. "There is no doubt that this looks more like the real thing than any other railroad charter that has been granted," said Mr. Rutan.

Campbell Lake Events

On account of another picnic being held on the 25th, it has been decided to change the date of the Campbell lake picnic to the 2nd of July. In addition to the other sports there will be a tug-o'-war between Vermilion and Campbell Lake.

Rev. W. E. Gilbert held his farewell service in Holy Trinity church on Sunday last. We regret his departure and wish him success in his new field of labor.

Miss Edna Ounsess has returned after spending a few days south of Vermilion.

Miss Allen was the guest of Miss Stephenson on Sunday last.

One of our bachelors has purchased a fine new driving team and a dandy new buggy.

The Burns' Brothers have purchased a fine new buggy.

Bloomington Jottings

Messrs Albert Townsend, Jos. Hunt and G. M. Cundal were in Mannville on Friday evening last playing baseball with Mannville against Vegreville.

We understand that our teacher, Mr. G. M. Cundal, is leaving here and going to teach in Mannville after mid-summer holidays.

After due deliberation the trustees of the Bloomington district decided on Tuesday evening June 8, to keep school open this fall. A wise decision certainly.

Mr. Tim Connors of Fort Saskatchewan, came down on his homestead last Friday.

To Prevent Mosquito Bites

Boil quassia chips in water and wet the hands and face with the water, allowing it to dry on. This will keep away mosquitoes and gnats for several hours.

Interrogatory

Do you know that your printed matter is an unfailing index to your way of doing business? That if it be slovenly, indifferent or commonplace, those who receive it will unconsciously get the impression that you are also carless in your general business methods?

Effectiveness

The continual use of good printing secures that "accumulative effect in advertising" which thousands of real live merchants are endeavoring to oppose.

That is your side of the story.

Original Ideas

We do not experiment with work except along the lines suggested by a desire for originality and individuality. We THINK, we SUGGEST, we CREATE and DESIGN, and take a deep personal interest in originating work best suited to your trade. We do nothing in a perfunctory manner.

Incidents of a Railway Trip

The smoking compartment of a Pullman or first or second class carriage is the situation par excellence of the story-teller, the yarn spinner or the confidential liar. With an audience that is gradually being changed every few dozen miles and the influence of being wheeled along at the rate of forty miles an hour, the story teller has little fear of criticism or contradiction.

The railway journey is the chosen spot for the confidential liar from the young commercial traveller who refers familiarly to the head of the firm which he represents, the head whose slightest frown means sorrow to his heart, as "the old man" and the house or firm generally as "We" or "Us" to the man who insists on reading you extracts from his private correspondence and showing you the photograph of his last "girl."

There is the immigrant or the new comer, who listens with nervous earnestness to the conversation of those who seem familiar with the unknown land and life he is entering, his quiet questions, his eager receptivity, and, if of English tongue from other lands, his bewilderment at the localisms and allusions.

Throughout a Western Canadian railway journey, with its sometimes weary length and monotonous succession of prairie towns, villages and homesteads, broad vistas of verdure or snow-clad prairie, wooded river banks and picturesque bluffs, there is ever present the all-pervading sense of humor, intensified as the way becomes long and the lights and shadows to be seen from the car windows tire.

Men talk glibly and as carelessly read about the progress and development of Western Canada without a full realization of what that progress and development means. More than glowing accounts or impressive figures are the impressions and convictions afforded by an annual trip around the railway triangle of Western Canada. Few can realize that within the memory of middle-aged men the journey would have taken by ordinary means of transportation nearly a year of time and the surmounting of countless difficulties. There is a difference between the attentions of obsequious dining car waiters and the attentions of the mosquitoes and "bull-dogs" during the meals in the shadow of the Red River cart on the bank of the slough or creek only a few years ago.

It may be that one of the many reasons why he of the west is broader minded than his fellow Canadian of the East is that these marvellous things have come about in his time, that the prairies are bounded by the horizon, and the railway journeys are frequently long and many and varied peoples are met thereon. Sleepers, dining cars and comfortable coaches have driven the ox-cart, the wagon and the epitome of luxury of the olden days, the buck-board, off the long drawn out trails of the past. The world of travel has changed more than any other one feature of Western Canadian life, and largely through it the West has changed. It yet largely controls the situation in the West. The dominance of the half-breed driver of the old time cart is merely exchanged for the sense of importance of the colored sleeping car porter.

A Good Story

A good story of a train, fighting with all the resourcefulness of steam, mechanical ingenuity and railway men's brains, the fierceness of the snow storm, came to a standstill before a drift that towered above the searchlight of the locomotive. Time and again the drift was charged without effect, and a telegraphic message was sent for help from a little station a few miles away. With nerves racked by the delays and disappointments of the day, the occupants of the sleeping car sought their berths late that night in a vain endeavor to sleep. The dead stillness of the snow-covered prairie was broken by the passenger who had last retired, a plethoric, important looking gentleman whose benevolent features gave little indication of his capacity to inflict agony on an already long suffering carload of Christian people. He was the only passenger who had a minute of sleep. The mantle of night had fallen and the curtains of the berths were closed when high and clear rose the clarion notes of the plethoric gentleman's snore full and trumpet-like in the quietness of the night. Nothing was said. The audience seemed spell-bound for a time by the marvellous gift of the plethoric, amiable looking passenger. The baby in the berth near the centre of the car once awakened only to have her infantile cries smothered by the regular resonant roars that caused the curtains of the Pullman to wave with the currents of sound. Men, usually long suffering, patient men, at last protested and threw other men's boots at the berth of the stentorian sleeper. Men usually of polite language, said things that are unprintable, all directed in the one direction. Sleep became impossible and the snow blockade became a matter secondary to the present evil. Men rose from their berths with murder in their hearts, dishevelled hair and a fell purpose in their sleepy eyes. They were arranging the details of the forcible interview proposed at the end of the car when their plans were interrupted by the man of infinite snoring capacity, feeling even in his sleep that he had favored the little world around him with one musical note long enough, changed his position on the pillow and as a finale of the key gave vent to a weird trumpet note that struck the plotting group dumb. The silence that followed could be felt when the curtains of the berth opposite slowly parted and the long grey chin whisker of a new settler from the Western States appeared. Stroking his beard for a few seconds reflectively as no further sound could be heard, he quietly drawled in the accent of Illinois, "Wal'al, I guess he's dead now."

Alexandra School Notes

Concert and social—We expect the Mannville baseball team, one of the best along the line, to play against the locals on Friday evening, and a good game may be looked for.

There will be an ice cream and lemonade booth on the school grounds.

Basketball and croquet will be on hand for those who prefer them to the more vigorous game.

As the object of this entertainment is a good one, we feel assured of a good turn-out and full co-operation on the part of the public generally. A good library, well-graded, is an absolute necessity in a school.

Rev. Mr. Aldridge, B.A., chairman of the school board will occupy the chair. Your correspondent regrets very much the approaching removal of the reverend gentleman from Vermilion. His interest in education is too well-known to require comment, and he will be missed by many admirers, some of them neither Methodists nor Conservatives.

Vermilion District Appointments

In the final draft of stations in connection with the Methodist church the following were made for the Vermilion district:

Vermilion—E. J. Hodgins.

Wellsdale—Chas. Schofield.

Islay—(F. C.)

Dewberry—(E. B.)

Kitscoty—Robert H. Davis, C. Alton.

Paradise Valley—One wanted.

Mannville—Stewart Cummings and (L. W. R.)

Innisfree—John W. Robinson.

Lavoy—One wanted.

Warwick—R. W. Wawtin.

Vegreville—Lauchlin R. Macdonald.

Whitefish and Goodfish Lakes—Robert B. Steinhauer.

Saddle Lake—J. Artemus Seller, Clarkvil'—J. C. Kirk.

The Revenue Grows

Ottawa, June 11—The unrevised debt and revenue statement of the Dominion for April and May, the first two months of the fiscal year, shows a revenue of $13,613,974, as against $11,899,341 for the same period last year, or a betterment of $1,714,593. This is an average of $857,246 a month, and if the average is maintained throughout the twelve months it would mean that the revenue collections of 1908-09 will exceed those of 1907-08 by between ten and eleven millions. The chief source of increase to the receipts is in customs and miscellaneous. The post office department collected fifty thousand dollars more than it did in May, 1908. Expenditure for the month of May was $3,560,630, as compared with $2,545,404 in May, 1908.

Dropped Dead

A wire received late last night by the editor of this paper, conveyed the sad intelligence of the sudden death of his father, the Venerable Archdeacon of Keewatin of Dryden, Ont. The wire announces that he dropped dead at Fort William on his way to Toronto. Deceased was in his 71st year.

Goes to Wetaskiwin

The final report of the stationing committee of the Alberta Methodist conference confirmed the appointment of the Rev. A. R. Aldridge, B. A., to Wetaskiwin. Some weeks ago, as was mentioned in this paper, Mr. Aldridge had received a cordial invitation from the people of Wetaskiwin to become their pastor.

Evidences of the wonderful growth and development of this district come daily to hand, the latest is a husky gobbler, sold by Vic Duncan, 18-52-5, to the Brunswick hotel Saturday which was classified among the heavy weights. It tipped the scales at 29½ pounds.

Wm. Hill, of Mere Farm, was up north as far as Cold Lake last week sizing up the country with the object of locating several parcels of script of which he is the possessor. He found an excellent stretch of country and made selections of several parcels of land from which he expects to locate his holdings.

A new and attractive spot for the citizens of Vermilion and adjacent country to visit, is the store of Roseborough & Co., the jewelers on Main Street. Their window is acknowledged, by those who are judges, to be the catchiest in town while the system of electric lighting makes a brilliant display every evening, especially when decorated with fine cut glass and silverware. Their stock of watches and jewelry is quite superior to the fancy goods often displayed for decorative purposes, and an article of note attracting considerable attention is a miniature model of the "Grand-father's Clock" entirely designed in fretwork. A fine English barometer in the window tells you when to dress cool or carry your waterproof.

Fred Whitmarsh, carriage painter and boat builder, who opened up his stand in the waiting rooms of the skating rink a short time ago, has turned out several first-class jobs, the workmanship being a decided credit to him and a delight to those who have so far had occasion to utilize his services along the line mentioned above. If you've got an old buggy, democrat or wagon, that would look better for some scientific renovations call around and have a chat with our friend Mr Whitmarsh, he is a genial individual, has seen about every part of the globe worth seeing, is a good conversationalist and you can spend an entertaining ten minutes even if you don't give him a twenty-five dollar job.

ELEVATOR WORK PROGRESS

Vermilion's 30,000 Bushel Grain Elevator well Under Way

The British America Elevator Co., who are erecting a large elevator at Vermilion, are well advanced with the work and will have the building completed in course of a week or so. From twelve to fourteen days is generally the time allotted for the erection of an elevator with a full gang on. There are engaged in the work here twenty men who work from 4 to 11 a. m., 12 to 5 p. m. and 5.30 to 7 p. m. daily which accounts in a measure for the rapidity of construction. The company carries all its own supplies, tents, cook, etc., and the work of siding and painting is started just as soon as the structure is up some 20 feet, the whole building being finished at practically the same time.

The base of the elevator here is 30x31 and the main walls will be 40 and 46 feet, the total height being 70 feet. There will be 13 bins with a combined grain capacity of 30,000 bushels. All the necessary machinery is on the ground for the equipment, the elevating power being furnished by a 5 h.p. Fairbanks Morse gasoline engine.

The entire building is on the same plans which this company is following in their elevator erection work throughout the province and at other points. It is understood that the company intend to build no less than 54 elevators this season, eight elevators are allotted to each gang and there are six or seven of these at the work.

A BIG DAY NOW ARRANGED

Vermilion Will Hold Biggest Celebration in History of the Town On July 12

[illegible]

These [illegible] the business men of the town with the enterprise [illegible] a hearty and generous [illegible] will aggregate several hundreds [illegible] be induced to visit the town in hundreds from all the surrounding country and are assured a great day.

AN ENJOYABLE OUTING

Picnic to Beautiful Sullivan Lake Was a Grand Success

The first affair given by the St. George Club, recently organized in Vermilion can be characterized as a complete success. It was held Thursday last at Sullivan's Lake, a beautiful little body of water situate a short drive of five and a half miles north of the town, the rendezvous of the picnickers being on the picturesque homestead of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] which redounds in sylvan beauty and embraces some fifteen acres of the rippling waters of the lake.

The weather [illegible] and the [illegible] breeze tempered the atmosphere to a delicious degree and made the drive both to and from the grounds one of the most enjoyable features of the day.

The [illegible] members of the club, Messrs. C. West and R. A. Pilkie [illegible]

[illegible] before the assemblage began to separate over eighty had gathered to the grounds.

Local Masons Attend Service

On Sunday the members of the local Masonic lodge attended divine service [illegible] when services were conducted by the Rev. W. [illegible]

[illegible]

Masonic order and M[illegible] there was one thing more than another that it stood for it was TRUTH—it was founded on true and noble principles. Its acts were ones of deeds rather than words, and it stood for the upbuilding of true and noble character in life. The text foreshadowed the teaching of Christ—the main object of man was to act rather than to boast, it was deeds that counted rather than words.

Sale of Indian Lands

Yorkton, Sask., June 16.—W. M. Graham, provincial inspector of Indian agencies, held a sale of lands of the Little Bone Indian reserve here to-day. The land is situated near Crescent lake and is principally hay land. Out of 93 quarters offered 21 were disposed of at the upset price, which ran from $8 to $11 per acre. The Indians in this reserve surrendered their land to the government and moved to the Crooked lake reserve.

Institute And Directors Meeting

An institute meeting was held Saturday at which open discussion took place on matters brought forward by those present. A resolution was passed to memorialize the local government through our member, Arch. Campbell, M. P. P., re ways and means for destruction of gophers on unoccupied lands. Several other matters were informally discussed as well as the absence of a cleaner in the new elevator being built here.

A meeting of directors followed and the prize list occupied their attention [illegible], when a committee composed of J. Cummins, P. R. Pilkie and A. W. Roseborough was appointed to complete its revision, when tenders will be asked for the printing of the same at an early date in order that sufficient time may be had to thoroughly circulate it.

VERMILION ALTA., JUNE 23rd 1909

One of those little British expeditions which are always somewhere at work in the interests of law and order and [illegible] has recently come back from the unknown and made its report to the Southern Nigerian Government. Its march of 1,100 miles along the borders of Northern Nigeria has opened and placed under British dominance some 5,000 square miles of unknown country. The majority of the tribesmen encountered had never seen a white man before, and although there was much sniping, no white men were wounded and no battles fought. The tribes have been given to understand that they must give up human sacrifice and cannibalism, and a number of centres of cannibalistic rites were broken up. The natives appeared fairly friendly after they had held council with Colonel Trenchard, who was in command of the expedition.—Free Press, Winnipeg.

DISTRICT COURT

Sorenson vs Minard—C. L. Freeman for plaintiff. Judgment for plaintiff by default.

Stanley vs Hanking—C. L. Freeman for plaintiff, Norman Murray for defendant. Judgment for plaintiff for $45.25. Judgment for defendant on counter claim for $11.50.

Renwick vs Vermilion Centre School District. C. L. Freeman for plaintiff, W. A. D. Lees for defendants. Judgment [illegible]

Souder vs Allandale School District—Norman Murray for plaintiff, C. L. Freeman for defendants. Judgment for plaintiff for $101.61 and costs.

Sibura vs Malech. Norman Murray for plaintiff, E. B. Williams for defendant. Judgment for plaintiff for $16[illegible]

Mix vs Davies—C. L. Freeman for plaintiff, E. B. Williams for defendant. Action dismissed with costs.

The matter of the appeal of the McKenzie Mann Co. from the assessment of the town of Vermilion was taken up, and after hearing the evidence and viewing the land the Judge reserved his decision.

OBITUARY

Harry Lawes, one of the early settlers in [illegible], passed away at his home at 9 a.m. on Friday last, June 18th at the age of 39 years, of consumption, and was buried in St. Mary's churchyard, Wellsdale, at 3 p.m. Saturday June 19th. Services were held at St. Mary's church by the Rev. W. E. Gilbert. The funeral was attended by a large number of sympathetic friends. General sympathy is expressed for Mrs. Lawes in her sad bereavement.

The deceased had been a resident of the district for nearly three years and was esteemed and respected by all, his thoroughness and earnestness in all matters was well known and in his death the district loses a staunch friend and helper. Only on the Saturday before he passed away he had been the choice of the L.I.D. board for secretary treasurer of the district, which news was conveyed to him by the chairman, Mr. Chas. Hodgins, on the same day. The word seemed to both cheer and please him and it was hoped that he would soon recover his strength. The news of his demise came as a shock to all.

Bloomington Jottings

The picnic held here on Tuesday last was a great success. The day, although hot, was otherwise ideal for a picnic. For a wonder there were no mosquitoes. There was a great crowd, the people coming from ranges 7, 8 and 9, and from south of Mannville to 10 miles north. The sports were pulled off about 4.30, [illegible] Mr. Candal taking charge of the course, judges J. Winters and Al Townsend. There were races for the little tots, up to young ladies, married ladies and young men. Miss Ethel Symington won the young ladies race and Mrs. A. Richards the married ladies race. Watch these [illegible] beat the Mannville steppers on July 1st. Jas. Summers won the 100 yard dash. Be sure and take a little money with you to Mannville and double [illegible] Jim. Jim Hunt had the misfortune to hurt a muscle of his leg in that race. However it didn't hinder him going to Vermilion on the following Friday and help out up the ball teams of that town. After the sports were disposed of the real picnicing began, that is, disposing of all the nice things in the cooking line for which the ladies of that locality are famous. While everyone was around the table and before commencing to eat Mr. Radley took a couple of pictures of the merry crowd. After this came the ball game between ranges 7 and 8, resulting in a win for range 8 by a score of 3—2. It certainly was a great game, according to the scores of games Mannville has been in, this game at Bloomington must have been a great one to see. Mannville has since signed three or four Bloomington players. Last but not least came the ball. The seats in the school were lifted and the floor waxed making an ideal dancing floor. Jos. L. Summers and his daughters furnished the music. Printed programmes of dances were distributed around and R. B. Hughes surpassed himself as floor manager. The ball broke up about 1 o'clock and everyone voted the Bloomington picnic the best ever.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cameron was the scene of a pretty wedding last Wednesday evening June 16th, when their eldest daughter Miss Maud May Cameron was united in marriage to Mr. John Wm. Bristow. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. E. Gilbert. Only the immediate relatives and friends were present.

The bride looked charming in a Persian lawn gown with lace trimmings and was supported by her sister Miss Annie Cameron who was similarly dressed. Mr. H. J. Walker was best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a liberal sum of money and a beautiful gold watch and chain to the bridesmaid.

After partaking of a dainty repast music and games were indulged in.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. A. Snape, Mr. Roy Walker, Mr. Geo. Carroll, Mr. R. Davis, and Mrs. Gilbert.

Mr. and Mrs. Bristow left the following day for the East taking with them the hearty good wishes of their numerous [illegible]

S. S. CONVENTION REPORT

Representatives From Fourteen Different Schools Present

The Second Annual Convention of the Vermilion County Sunday School Association was held on June 10th and 11th as announced and proved a great success.

The convention opened on Thursday evening with the president, H. N. Stephens in the chair.

In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Simons, Mr. H. McClellan conducted the devotional exercises.

Mr. H. F. Kenny, the general secretary for the province, then took up the subject of Bible study in relation to character. In the course of his remarks he said, in return for the many great things which we receive God expects a toll, and the toll which He expects is character. Everything should tend to the building of character, and Bible study is the essential thing in character building. The speaker gave ten strong reasons why the Bible should be studied.

The second session opened on Friday morning, devotional exercises being conducted by Rev. W. E. Gilbert. The session was taken up with reports of schools, secretary-treasurer's report and other business.

In the absence of Rev. H. L. Kempton, the afternoon session was opened by Mr. F. Miller who conducted the devotional exercises. The theme for the afternoon was winning the scholars and was taken up under four heads:

I.—Winning the primary scholars, an excellent paper being written on this subject by Miss Stephenson, Campbell Lake and was read by Miss Hayward. One of the best thoughts brought out in the paper was that the child should be taught that its highest ideals will be realized in heaven.

II.—Topic, winning the intermediate scholars, was taken up by Mr. Fred Miller. The speaker emphasized the thought of hero worship as characteristic of this period and the importance of bringing before them the best heroes.

III.—Topic, winning the young people, was ably handled by Rev. S. Cunings, of Mannville. The paper was full of good thoughts. The speaker emphasized the fact that we are teaching the future leaders of both church and state and that we need as teachers men of immaculate purity who will catch up and diffuse in a practical way the light of the gospel.

IV.—Topic, winning the men and women, was taken up and ably discussed by F. H. Barber. The speaker emphasized strongly the importance of the organized bible class and the home department as factors in the work of winning men and women.

The devotional exercises in the closing session were conducted by Mr. Geoghegan after which the subject "The opportunity of the Sunday school in winning this generation" was discussed by Mr. Cash. One of the points brought out by the speaker was the important place which the Sunday school will hold in bringing about a union among christian people.

The crowning feature of the convention was the inspiring address by the general secretary Mr. H. F. Kenney on "The great commission of the modern Sunday school." The speaker began with infancy and followed on through the various stages of development to old age, and gave a number of strong helpful suggestions relative to each period. He said that the great commission of the modern Sunday school was "to go into all the homes and get the people to study the Bible."

With a few well chosen words by the president, H. N. Stephens, the convention was brought to a close.

The President Mr. H. N. Stephens, Vice-President Mr. J. B. Hunt and Sec.-Treas. Miss Patience M. Brimacombe, were re-elected to office for another year.

The convention, which was a success throughout, had representatives from fourteen schools which was a decided increase over last year.

The general secretary whom we believe, by the way, to be the right man in the right place, will spend a week in August visiting in the district.

The united efforts of the church choirs of the town added greatly to the success of the convention.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School Association,

PATIENCE M. BRIMACOMBE,
Sec.-Treas.

Alexandra School Notes

The public school leaving examination is in progress this week, beginning on Wednesday morning and ending Saturday evening.

Candidates write at their own schools, the teacher presiding. The papers are set by the department of education and the answer papers of candidates are also sent to Edmonton to be examined.

We have five candidates to write. As the present principal has only been in charge for six months he cannot expect large results from his work so soon. We hope however that some of these candidates may pass. Those who are successful should form a nucleus for a High School class. There may be others in town who would like to take up High School work or there may be some in neighboring districts.

Any students desiring to join such a class should be in attendance at the opening of school after the summer vacation.

Geo. Powell made a shipment of 140 head of export cattle to Edmonton last week.

K. McLay had a horse back into a well at the homestead yesterday. By the aid of neighbors and some assistance from town it was rescued none the worse for the mishap.

Rev. A. R. Aldridge preaches next Sunday at Pelican lake school, Breckenridge's church and Vermilion. He leaves for Wetaskiwin in time to take up work there for July 4th.

SCHOOL SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT A SUCCESS

A Large Attendance and Excellent Programme.—Nearly Seventy Dollars Cleared for School Library Fund.

The school concert and social Friday last was the most successful affair of its kind yet held under the auspices of the school. It was an unparalleled success from every viewpoint and most gratifying to those who undertook the responsibility of the undertaking.

The evening commenced with a baseball match between the crack Mannville team and the locals which partook of the nature of the real thing. Mannville showed excellent form and splendid team play, their base running was a feature and every man was up to his position. The locals made a good start but were off color, not putting up the game that they are capable of doing and some loose fielding and mis-judgement in throwing gave the visitors the opportunity of pulling in several runs. Owing to darkness the game was stopped at the end of seventh innings with the Mannville boys away in the lead. An enormous crowd witnessed the match and Mannville supporters were present in large numbers. The locals are confident of turning the tables in the return game when they will be in better shape.

The programme at the school opened at 8.30 with Rev. Mr. Aldridge in the chair and all the numbers were excellently rendered to an appreciative audience, the hall being filled to its utmost capacity. The following programme being rendered:—

On the day of her death, deceased complained of not feeling well and medical aid was summoned from Wainwright. Death came at about 4 p. m. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved husband in his sudden and heavy bereavement.

Jas. A. Adams of the Imperial Oil Co., was in town this week and appointed W. H. McClinton their distributing agent for this district. Mr. McClinton assumes the agency August 1, and has rented the company a building in the east end of the town. Next spring the company will erect large premises of their own at a cost of $2,500. Last year the turnover for this district alone was nearly 800 barrels of oils and trade is increasing at a 50 per cent rate.

Rains which thoroughly soaked the ground fell here throughout Monday and most of yesterday. They were just what was required for the country and have made farmers feel buoyant. While the early sown grain was coming on fast other grain was not making the necessary rapid headway required. Bright warm weather has followed and an early and bumper crop is almost a certainty.

At the adjourned meeting of the board of license commissioners held in the town hall on Wednesday last to consider the licenses of the Islay hotel and the Alberta and Vermilion hotels of this town, the commissioners granted a renewal of license to the Alberta hotel for a year, the Vermilion for three months and that at Islay for the same period of time.

W. P. McAlpine, originally of McAlpine Station near Montreal, has bought two farms in this immediate neighborhood, one the Thomas Kelly farm lying eight miles south of town with 90 acres broken and to crop, the other the Wm. Roberton farm four miles east of here on which 20 acres are broken and to crop. Mr. McAlpine has spent sometime in travelling throughout the west and in southern Alberta and on seeing this district he was emphatic in declaring it the best he has yet seen, hence his decision to buy and settle here. He intends to break up all the arable land on these two splendid farms. He also brought with him ten work horses with outfits and is settling on the land at once.

A BURNT BARRIER.

The Lover Laid His Pride at His Sweetheart's Feet.

By MARIE MONTROSE.

[Copyrighted, 1901, by Associated Literary Press.]

Down the dusty white country road sped Dacy, perspiring and panic stricken, her eyes bent on a certain cloud of dust that was rising up from the sheep dotted pasture. She went "cross lots" and came to the clearing reaching to the road. Here she knew a lot of bachelors, lefties and wood-cutting, gathered round the jovial jolly maid of pre-war days, and to-day of all days she must be late!

Dacy was not a beautiful woman, but she was of the type that time touched gently. Her eyes were soft and gray and expressive of a past but undergone, the time it took to overcome fatalness was not wasting in the hour of trouble.

"If don't see how you managed to save so much money," she said to Lorrie Hood, one of whom of the rescuers approved, "when you've had married from the future."

"Now, Miss Dacy, that's a bad compliment; thinking a man can save his bread. I haven't got a red to my name, was you back, so I grabbed it first thing."

"Oh, Jim, there is $50 in it!"

"Well, I'm glad to come tonight, Jud!" she asked quietly, but with beating heart.

"Why? Because everything brought me I could keep away."

Dacy looked up with a startling personality. "Because you know that at last you could come and claim your own, for now you know the bonnie was go."

"Why, he said with a long breath "I'm dog tired, but I'll walk don't think any."

But he felt a strong arm about her. She was tired and rested over the long autumn day, and she felt as if she where the drowning had been. He had a sense of safety and rest that he had not had since he was a child. He had not had since he was a child. He had not had since he was a child. He had not had since he was a child.

"I say," cried the voice of Lorrie from a distance, "I've just found a ten dollar bill in the old dinner. He says he'll bet it's the one he lost ten years ago."

A Case For Conscience.

Not all that glitters is gold and not all who wear coat of the cloth of the house of the absence of life is not to take too much for granted. However, of the luminous mentioned by F. J. H. Smith in "The Hidden of Adversity" the sympathy was so genuine as if the object had been more interesting.

Night was falling as Hutchison paced the street. On he went, unconscious that he had gone home. One lady remained in the store, seeing over the rail, gazing after the man. Hutchison never just made out her sentiment in the book. As he drew near the house he heard sounds a heartrending groan startled his ears. He looked back and saw the graceful figure shrouded in its long garment. He could make out the face, but could see the forming water in exquisite feminine grace. If he could only help her.

Back and forth he paced. She was evidently suffering from the worst form of mental agony. It never did to think of her as a stone with no one to comfort her. Isolation deluded. Perhaps she preferred to be left alone.

The hour suddenly grew a red and plunged white. The figure was a shriek, followed by a terrific groan. Hutchison could stand it no longer. He went to her, and spoke respectfully, "Can I do anything for you?"

There was no answer.

"The nearest house to you," he said to himself and left his hand gently on her shoulder. Then he started, for he felt it was a female and the garments were made by the tailor which sprang from the rudder to the steering house.

Mother Love Defined.

What is maternity, brothers? Is it a tangible something or be it love, the desire to protect? The wonderful mother love what would it not do? Pour fire and sword upon the heads of persecution or other subjects is known to the house where a new member enters. The four was of a the house. Mrs. sudden, glorified in the arms of the little newcomer the mother love of motherhood was born. Its wealth. Powerful positions we were used to look up to as forgotten, persons that flood our life gone art, inheritance that were part of us, associated with our very name we have their gone! All said aside as of no account. Mother love, mother love, when "baby" is not so dependent on our every thought we will agree that there exists. Just how they might be we are not here to say, so temporarily we give ourselves to this new life.

MODERN TROGLODYTES.

The Matmatas, the Cave Dwellers of Tunisia, Africa.

One of the strangest of recent tribes is that of the troglodytes, or Matmatas, the cave dwellers of Tunisia, Africa. It contains about 2,000 souls, and they live in the rear of the artificial caves in to dig into the earth rather than to build upon it. These troglodytes are to be found between the town of Gabes on the Mediterranean, and the sand hills of the Sahara. The region is a rocky plateau, about 600 ft. above sea level and swept by the cold winds from the desert. Instead of the dwelling he chooses the spot, traces a circle and then digs until he has reached the desired depth, this is the rule according to the manner of stories he requires.

The rooms consist of extra hollows of the circle which form a patio, or bottom of which forms a patio, or court-yard, which is the usual feature of a Moorish house. Besides the rooms, a passage is also dug, communicating with the outside world, and a door is placed at the entrance.

The cell, which is a kind of subterranean house, is furnished in the simplest well to excavation, the roof of each room being supported by pillars left in it unbroken. These underground dwellings are not damp.—Chicago News.

POSITION FOR SLEEP.

A Variety of Opinions Among Eminent Physicians.

A number of eminent French medical men have given their opinion to the Academy of Medicine in Paris upon the best-thought position for sleep.

Dr. Letulle says that the heart is in the left side. Dr. Letulle of the Medical Academy maintains emphatically that the best position is on the back.

Never did rhapsody use more glowing terms in describing her dress. While out making exercise she warded off the many admirers attracted to the streets by young heroes until George Hackett appeared on the scene and the young man ushered of point in the street. Well bred, well groomed, well dressed, George Hackett is a fine diplomacy proof.

Hackett addressed himself to their party of two, he proved distressingly reserved. Hackett was a gentleman. He knew by heart and steered his country women from temptation. Then he got Southampton was set and Mrs. Burns declared that the ladies were more than ever bent on having a good time. She was having a much jollier time when Hackett disappeared, whereupon Mrs. Burns read her charge the first long letter. She was not surprised when she found that it would do any good, she argued, for how could any heart whose gin withstand Cupid's darts?

When the ship in Paris drew to a halt Mrs. Burns was pleased with the fact that Hackett was accompanying them to the hotel. Hackett and London was but Paris repeated. Mr. Hackett was their guide, philosopher and friend. They would enjoy and what she should not. Mrs. Burns was more than flattered at his entire heterogeneity.

Mrs. Burns was the guest of the

FAREWELL TO REV. ALDRIDGE

Methodist Congregation Made A Presentation To Pastor

A number of the congregation of Vermilion Methodist church met last evening to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Aldridge before taking their departure for their new field of labor at Wetaskiwin, and presented them with a purse of money.

The presentation was made by Mayor Dr. Ryan, who presided over the meeting, and was feelingly responded to by Rev. Aldridge who regretted having to leave the people of Vermilion and district after having spent four years of labor in their midst. After a short programme was rendered, the ladies of the church took charge of the meeting and provided a dainty lunch which was justly dealt with and the balance of the evening was spent in social intercourse and saying good-bye to their pastor and family and wishing them success and prosperity in their new field of labor.

The gathering had been arranged for to-night but Mr. Aldridge had been asked to perform a marriage ceremony at Mannville before leaving and hence the change of date.

TO-MORROW AT ISLAY

Everything Points To A Successful Day

Monday was a busy day in Islay, a number of teams were busy all day on the grounds where the Dominion Day celebration is to be held, making a track for the horse races. The grader was doing good work, and it looks as if a first-class track will be ready for July 1. The calethumpian parade commences at 10.30 a.m. and ought to prove a great attraction. It is expected it will be headed by the Vermilion Band.

The trotting races will be run at 1.30 p.m. and following that will be the long list of running races, including open horse race, pony races, ox race, bucking contest, greasy pig race, flat races, obstacle race, boys and girls races, jumping, tug-of-war, etc.

The bareback race will be a great event and should not be missed. The [illegible] will no doubt be quite an attraction to many. If the weather is favorable, this should be quite a successful celebration.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS

Warehouse Commissioner Addresses Vermilion Farmers

By invitation of the United Farmers of Alberta, C. C. Castle, Warehouse Commissioner of Winnipeg, addressed a well-attended meeting at Vermilion Saturday afternoon, dealing comprehensively with the marketing, transportation and inspection of grain.

Regret was expressed by the speaker, that a large number of farmers in Alberta and the west were not as conversant with the grain act as they should be. The few remaining copies the commissioner had with him were distributed and he urged that the act be thoroughly studied. Copies could be secured by dropping a card to him at Winnipeg as he had ordered 50,000 copies printed in order that everyone might be supplied. The Manitoba Grain Act as it stood today conferred great benefits in that every farmer now has absolute control of his grain, he could load through an elevator, sell through an elevator, store in an elevator, or from loading platforms, [illegible] the disposal of his grain.

To practically demonstrate the completeness of the workings of the act, the speaker took two cars of grain, one loaded through an elevator the other from a loading platform, and traced them till they reached Fort William and ... [illegible] to the provisions in the act made for the protection of the farmer. In all its details the system of [illegible]

... coming to them for their grain, cattle or hogs—no more.

The speaker's address throughout was followed with close attention and at the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. A. T. Newbury, who acted as chairman, extended to Mr. Castle the hearty thanks of the association.

This was the last of the meetings arranged for the province and Mr. Castle is highly satisfied with the series.

THE WALL THAT WAS NOT.

A Story of a Girl's Treachery to Her Sister.

By HELEN RANSDELL.

(Copyrighted, 1905, by Associated Literary Press.)

In the very light of the setting sun Miss Dardee, the order of the day, was gathering her sewing preparatory to going home. Miss Darcy for some days past, while watching her sister, unconsciously her sewing fell idle in her lap, evidently she thought of something.

"Sister dear," Rachel, that th[illegible] you had you are on your mind, your soul needs rest."

"Yes, sister, I do that rest I [illegible]," answered Miss Darcy, "but you know we can afford neither the time nor the money to go away from home. We are so dependent upon our daily work for our support, and I am so used to it that I would not know how to spend my time if I had the time."

Miss Darcy arose and walked over to the house speaking very well.

"I don't want them to hear me. As she [illegible] trying to deceive me, but I always trust my friends," I only read one side of a letter. I have been used to that since we both were in a pension, never suspected."

"Never spoken—yes! I should say that's the way she got him."

Mr. Darcy sighed wistfully.

"I don't see why you hate them so," she replied.

"You don't? Humph! Well, you just have your fling here and [illegible] town, and—you couldn't be my sister any longer."

At that moment a girl some twelve years of age came out of the house to [illegible] was gathering her sewing. She had been weeding much too low for their neighbors to hear what they said, and the sweet ignorance the girl re and ever though [illegible] as if half suspicious of the scene she was completely failed to understand.

"Aren't you gathering your seeds awful early Miss Bedder? It's better to let them get ripe. They're the finest sunflowers you've ever seen. We've never had any quite so large."

To the girl Miss Rachel was always pretty kind, never she replied, in tones of contented indignation too low for the girl to hear:

"It'll be a cold day when I [illegible] here to live on dry bread."

"Well, Rachel, how it would look—"

"We can never our side with titles."

"Prior to [illegible] the times would be good, but the same as the Sisters."

Without waiting Miss Rachel gathered up her [illegible] of great staring seed ears and ascended the stairs to her room. Here she went straight to an old fashioned sewing desk, and, opening it, turned the package of seeds in one of its many compartments.

Once it was out of her sight the hard look in her [illegible] face vanished, and gradually as they faded her natural expression was restored, revealing years of suffering and of genuine kindness as well.

For a long time she sat there absorbed in her reveries, and as the rays faded into darkness she [illegible] Miss Rachel's face from within, and, had it been [illegible] of persons as are she opened a small [illegible] drawer and took out a [illegible] of fold[illegible] fragrant sandalwood.

It had grown too dark to see its contents, but Miss Rachel did not need to see them. She knew every line of the faded letters that lay there, every detail of the [illegible] fragrance and [illegible] that [illegible] had [illegible] to her.

Suddenly she sank over it and more as a joy her passionate [illegible] and [illegible] her trembling frame for [illegible] she had [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

....The.... Singing Lady.

By MARTHA C. SANFORD

Copyrighted 1908 by Associated Literary Press.

John Tyndal Seymour Jr. had been tucked into his little sliding brass bed at precisely 7 [illegible]

[illegible] John junior would never forget it. But at last the beautiful singing lady just gathered him up in her arms, and [illegible] and her eyes [illegible] sang the song he loved best in the world.

Wild Man of the Woods Causes Excitement In Old Land.

The "Wild Man from Borneo" is a less awe-inspiring individual than the wild man from nearer home. Almost any holiday-maker who has had the good or bad fortune to come across the wild man of the woods will readily agree with this.

The latter has given many a holiday-maker a scare. Down to a few years ago Hadley Woods, a holiday resort of many Londoners, boasted a wild man. His name was William [illegible] and he appears to have had the idea that Hadley Common was his by right.

[illegible] made the woods his home all the year round. Clothed in little more than rags he roved amongst the trees by day and at night slept in a sack with nothing but the sky for a roof.

The simple life, however, has its limits and finally the complaints of holiday-makers and others caused the police to pay the wild man a surprise visit.

They found him in a terribly neglected condition, covered with dirt, his coat of extraordinary length and his hair and beard like tangled rope. He was loth to leave the solitude of the woods in which he had roamed so long, and the police had considerable difficulty in effecting his removal.

Some time ago a wild man of the woods was unearthed in the neighborhood of Carlisle. At one time he had occupied a good position, and in those days he answered to the name [illegible]

Fixing Things For Arthur.

By HENRY BERLINGOFF

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Arthur Lynwood looked longingly after Irma Shelby, and Dick his small brother glanced up shrewdly into his clean-cut face.

"Mushy," he said shrewdly, "why don't you marry her?"

"You scamp!" began Arthur. Then he paused. Dick was only twelve but more than once the busy little brain under the thatch of red hair had helped the big brother through a tight place.

"I wish I knew her, old chap," he went on in a different voice. "I'm not mushy, but—well, you know how it is yourself. I can't very well force myself on her, and when we have no women folks to call on her I don't see how we are going to make it."

"They certainly are hard folks to get next to," admitted Dick. "They've been here a month and two days now, and even gabby Mrs. Pitkin can't get in with them. I guess there isn't any chance for us, Art, just the three of us men."

Arthur smiled at the phrase "us men." But, after all, Dick was one of [illegible]

"I WANT HIM TO MARRY A TOP NOTCHER LIKE YOU"

[illegible] "I had to chase him four blocks to get in one punch."

"Do you understand that you will be thrashed if you lay hands on young Shelby again?" demanded Arthur seriously.

"I'll lick him if he is he about you," declared Dick truculently. He then proceeded to address his remarks to Miss Shelby.

"Art's just the best ever," he explained. "Ever since mother died he's done everything for me and I ain't going to have any boy call him names and say that any girl is good enough for him to marry. When he marries I want him to marry a top notcher like you."

The girl's face went crimson at the praise and the suggestion, but she smiled into the freckled face before she turned to Arthur.

"I shall see that [illegible] is punished if he repeats his offense," she promised, "and I [illegible] little hero [illegible] for defending his big brother. [illegible]," she added [illegible] as she let her eyes rest for an instant on the grave handsome face. "I shall be glad to see you [illegible]

[illegible]

"I shall be glad to run in this evening if I may," was the quick response, and Arthur was [illegible] to observe the elaborate wink with which Dick favored him.

Delegate to International Council of Women Has Worked Hard to Get Post Graduate Courses for Women at Oxford—She Is a Hard Worker in the Ranks of the Women's Movements.

Among women concerned with the more serious side of things there is a good deal of interest taken in the Congress of the International Council of Women in Toronto. To the more frivolous mind the number of subjects to be discussed is almost overwhelming. There is one, however, brought forward by Dr. Ogilvie Gordon, corresponding secretary, which should receive the hearty support of the delegates from the Canadian Councils.

It is the scheme which originated with Madame Thayer, an enthusiast by nature, an American by birth, a Canadian by marriage, and a Londoner by adoption. Two or three years ago this energetic woman who was for years one of the teaching staff of [illegible]

A Broad Discrimination.

There is an elder of a certain church up-State who thinks that things are only half done or not well started in which he has no voice. At a prayer meeting he offered thanks for the safe return from their vacation of the minister and his wife. With proper dignity and in a loud voice he said: "O Lord, we thank Thee for bringing our pastor safe home, and his dear wife, too. O Lord, for Thou preservest man and beast."—Success Magazine.

An Always Ready Pill.—To those of regular habit medicine is of little concern, but the great majority of men are not of regular habit. The worry and cares of business prevent it, and out of the irregularity of life comes dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles as a protest. [illegible]

A VERY BUSY MAN.

Charming Experience With an Overworked Irish Watchmaker.

I fell in with a delightful man at a little town in County Fermanagh. I wanted a little thing done to my watch, and I asked him how long it would take to do it. He assured me that he was driven to death with work and was up till late every night trying to get ahead, but that he would try to find time to mend my watch some time before 7 o'clock, when he nominally closed. Then he followed me to the door of his shop and began to ask me questions about America. He pointed out different passersby and told me their life histories. And every once in a while he would say: "I've not had a day off for nearly a year, not even bank holiday. Never a minute for anything but work. I've an order now that's going to keep me busy, except for the time I'll give to your watch, all the rest of the day. And dinner eaten in my workshop to save time."

I bade him good day and didn't go near there until 7 o'clock in the evening. I found him outside the shop discussing the strike of the constabulary at Belfast with a neighbor.

"Awfully sorry, sir, but I've been so busy today that I've been unable to finish that job. It'll not take over twenty minutes when I get to it. Can you come in the morning?"

Next morning I was at his shop at 9 o'clock, and he was just taking down the shutters. Said he worked until 10 o'clock the night before, but seemed farther behind than before. If I'd come up into his workroom he'd fix my watch while I waited.

Up there he had some photographs to show me that he had taken a year ago and had only just found time to develop. We talked photography for twenty minutes, and then he fixed my watch in a jiffy when he got to work.—From "Just Irish," by Charles Battell Loomis.

EXCITED HOLLAND.

Some amusing stories are told of the popular excitement in Holland prior to the birth of the queen's baby. In more than one place false alarms were given by the premature distribution of handbills printed in advance for issue as soon as the birth occurred. Some of these got into circulation even at The Hague. A stationer who had a stock of them ready was called up on the telephone. "Who is there?" he asked. The reply came, "Prins," a fairly common name in Holland.

He did not stop to hear any more. His mind, running constantly on the event awaited at the palace, jumped to the conclusion that this was the announcement all Holland was expecting so eagerly. He rushed off to a cupboard, pulled out the handbills on which was printed in bold letters "Prins" (prince) and began giving them away. Ten minutes later a sad stationer was locking up that cupboard again and reflecting on the Dutch proverb which says, "Make sure the bell is ringing before you start for church."

In a little town of north Holland an even greater confusion was caused. A bundle of these handbills was dispatched to a shopkeeper from Amsterdam. There were three different kinds. One said "Prince," another "Princess" and a third "Twins." The shopkeeper opened the parcel unsuspectingly and saw that the top bill announced the birth of a male heir. Instantly he seized an armful of the papers and ran out, distributing them as he went. For a few minutes all was joy and exhilaration. But then there arose disputes. "Long live our little prince!" cried one. "Prince?" said another. "Why, man, it's a princess." "What are you talking about?" inquired a third in amazement. "It's twins. Look here."

IMPROVING THE HERD

The success of the [illegible] in this part of the province [illegible] stimulated [illegible] giving more attention to the [illegible] ing [illegible] the [illegible] of improvement [illegible] somewhat varied. In some cases purchases have been made of pure bred dairy stock. Regarding [illegible] warning against buying anything but extra good pure bred cattle. A pedigree does not make a cow; the individual qualities of the animal itself is what [illegible] farmer is [illegible] stock for profit [illegible] only animals [illegible] that [illegible] good returns. Scrub animals with pedigrees are about the most unprofitable a man can have on his farm. Far better have good grades which you can readily improve by using a good pure bred [illegible]. In this particular it is difficult to estimate how much farmers [illegible] every year by the use of poor bulls. It is too bad to see a herd of cows producing [illegible] to themselves when a corresponding improvement might be made by proper breeding.

"The first thing to do to your dairy herd is to weed it out. [illegible] test of a dairy cow is at the [illegible] and if she is not profitable [illegible] she should go to the block. Having got a bunch of good milking cows they should be bred so [illegible] improve the milking qualities of the next generation. The question to decide then is what breed you want to improve with. The best double-purpose cow is the [illegible] strain of Shorthorn [illegible] [illegible] milking purposes alone [illegible]

The large farmer in the corn belt of the United States is selling his quarter, his half or his section of land for big prices, he takes that money and puts it into Canadian land, and thereby doubles, trebles, and more often quadruples his holdings. He is making [illegible] [illegible] settlement of Canadian soil. He is preparing [illegible] to reap a profit [illegible] [illegible] can see into the future better than [illegible] Americans, and it is for that reason, it appears to us, that so many are at present moving on to Canadian soil."

[illegible]

[illegible] which the government propose establishing in the west, the work [illegible] Anderson of the department of agriculture [illegible] a few weeks ago referred editorially to this selection [illegible] would be a [illegible] be the end of the [illegible] an experimental farm in the country for Northern Alberta. We are pleased to see that the article fell on good ground and Mr Anderson [illegible] spent a few days in the district studying conditions, etc., and from what can be learned he is more than favorably impressed. If, as it was announced in [illegible] the intention of the Dominion government to establish an experimental farm for Northern Alberta—beyond the shadow of a doubt it should be located at Vermilion. We [illegible] had many shadows in the past [illegible] [illegible] see now at last, [illegible]

The Michigan editors were so impressed with Vermilion and its advantages that we may confidently expect to have half the [illegible] of the state they [illegible] coming into our district next spring.

Islay News

Owing to the heavy rain on July 1st, the Dominion day celebration had to be postponed. The callithumpians paraded the town about one o'clock and were the cause of much amusement. There was little to choose between the various characters, each one being well represented. At the conclusion of the parade the large crowd assembled on the sports grounds to witness the proceedings, but unfortunately, before the races could commence a heavy thunderstorm settled over the town and district and a rush was made for shelter. After a very heavy storm the sky cleared somewhat, and preparations were made for another start, but again the rain poured down; this time making racing quite impossible. There were a large number of people in for the day's sports and though they were disappointed in being unable to witness the same, they were more than compensated by the benefit the crops would receive from the rain. The whole day's sport was postponed until Friday, July 9th. Given favorable weather, July 9th will be a great day in Islay.

Canada To Ship Wheat

Vancouver, B. C., June 30—Owing to the severe drought conditions in Mexico the government of that country has entirely abolished the duty on wheat until September 15, according to advices received here today in Vancouver. This means that the export of Alberta grain to Mexico via Vancouver this season will be large. As much grain is being shipped as can be landed at the Mexican ports prior to that date on which the duty again becomes operative. Shipping and grain men here look upon September 15th as too early a date for the re-imposition of the duty and it is believed that it will be possible to have the open season extended another 60 days, provided Mexico has been unable by September 15 to secure sufficient grain to tide her over till her next crop is available. It is said that the dry season is the worst that has been experienced in Mexico in eight years. The crops have literally withered [illegible]

Meet at Medicine Hat

Toronto, May 29—The ninth annual convention of the union of Canadian municipalities will be held July 26 and 27 at Medicine Hat, and the final meeting will be held the next day, July 28 at Calgary.

Mr. J. G. Arthur Badly Injured

Mr J. G. Arthur is lying at the Brunswick suffering from severe injuries received in an attack by a bull. The regrettable occurrence happened at his farm north of here Saturday evening. While leading his stock bull, a perfectly docile animal, to water he gave it a gentle tap to move it along, which apparently was resented for the bull unexpectedly attacked and tossed him. Mr Arthur fell across its back, he was tossed a second time and lost consciousness. On coming to his senses he was lying on the ground on his back the bull's neck being pressed against his face and chest. From this precarious position he was fortunately able to extricate himself though suffering intensely from bruises and the severe crushing of the animal.

Mr. Arthur was brought into town and is doing as well as can be expected. His many friends trust for his speedy recovery.

CRICKETERS SPEND SPLENDID EVENING

Mr. C. L. Freeman Entertains Opposing Teams at Brunswick

Last Wednesday night the members of the two teams which played the Thursday before were entertained by Mr. C. L. Freeman at the Brunswick to a supper which was a bright and brilliant social gathering.

Some two dozen guests assembled round the boards and did justice to the sumptuous repast provided for the occasion. President H. N. Stephens occupied the chair and to his right was seated the host of the evening and on the left Mr. Williams who also was responsible for a share of the evenings festivities.

Following the supper the chairman announced a toast list as follows:

"Old Timers," coupled with the names of Ex-Mayor Brimacombe and Mr. M. Bryden.

"Mercantile interests," Mr. Seed and Mr. Richardson.

"Cricket," Mr. Morgan and Mr. Thornton.

"Town Fathers," Mr. W. C. Craig.

"The Press," Mr. S. R. P. Cooper.

"Noble Professions," Mr. Murray and Dr. Proctor.

"The Ladies," Mr. Williams and Mr. Macpherson.

"Our Host," Mr. C. L. Freeman.

All the toasts were responded to in a brief and felicitous manner, many kind and deserving things being said of the evening's host, who was greeted with "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" on rising to respond. The chairman's remarks and introductories were both pleasing and happy and the two social hours spent together passed all too quickly.

It is trusted that this will not be the last of similar pleasant gatherings.

Caskeyville Items

Mission services have been organized in the Elk Point, Caskeyville, and Hopkins settlement, and will (D.V.) be held each Sabbath throughout the summer.

The services are held at the houses of Mr. Lambright (Sabbath school 2 p.m., service at 3)—and Mr. J. B. Caskey (Sabbath school 10 a.m., service at 11) respectively—and on alternate Sabbaths at Mr. Diehl's (service 11 a.m., Sabbath school 10 a.m. every Sabb.)

A picnic under the auspices of the Presbyterian mission to celebrate the 4th of July, has been arranged, and will (D.V.) take place on Saturday next, July 3rd, on No. 1 section, near Dog Rump Creek.

Mr. John Keets eldest child, Jennie Elizabeth aged 1 year and 10 months, on Friday evening the 25th June fell into the lake near the shack and was drowned. Funeral services were held at the house Sabbath morning at ten by the Presbyterian missionary, after which the remains were borne to the adjacent hill-top and with brief burial service committed to the grave. Thus, the first death in the settlement, has been widely felt, and general sympathy is extended to the sorrowing parents.

Mr. Jack Howard has the sympathy of the settlement during the illness of Mrs. Howard, who for the past week has been laid up with an attack of ague.

Mr. Smith, with Mrs. Smith and children, has left Elk Point for Vegreville, where he is to be engaged on the railroad grade during the summer.

CLAY'S FIRST SPEECH.

It Began in Confusion, but Ended in a Triumph.

Henry Clay as a young man was extremely bashful, although he possessed uncommon brightness of intellect and fascinating address, without effort making the little he knew pass for much more. In the early part of his career he settled in Lexington, Va., where he found the society most congenial, though the clients seemed somewhat recalcitrant to the young lawyer. He joined a debating society at length, but for several meetings he remained a silent listener.

One evening after a lengthy debate the subject was being put to a vote when Clay was heard to observe softly to a friend that the matter in question was by no means exhausted. He was at once asked to speak and after some hesitation rose to his feet. Finding himself thus unexpectedly confronted by an audience, he was covered with confusion and began, as he had frequently done, in imaginary appeals to the court, "Gentlemen of the jury."

A titter that ran through the audience only served to heighten his embarrassment, and the obnoxious phrase fell from his lips again. Then he gathered himself together and launched into a peroration so brilliantly lucid and impassioned that it carried the house by storm and laid the cornerstone to his future greatness, his first case coming to him as a result of this speech, which some consider the finest he ever made.

THE QUEER RUSSIANS.

They Are Kindly and Cruel at One and the Same Time.

No one can be long associated with Russians without reaching a condition of utter amazement at the extraordinary inconsistency of their mental makeup. The kindliest of men seem to receive placidly the most blood curdling doctrines. They enforce the cruelest of laws in the gentlest way, so to say. An odd tale illustrating their queer ideas of discipline is told by a revolutionist who has just come to this country. By those who ought to know it is said to be typical of a singular simplicity of mind which is also said to be peculiar to the Russians.

A follower of Tolstoy was called on for military service. He presented himself to the army officers, as required, and explained that he could not serve because of his beliefs.

"Ah," said the officer in charge politely, "but you understand that this means prison?"

"Of course."

"You will be sent," continued the officer, "to the [illegible]," naming a prison of dreadful repute. "The guard will have to start at once with you."

He turned to several other officers and discussed the matter of the guard for a few minutes. Then he had a happy thought.

"Why send a guard at all?" he said. "You," turning to the young man—"you can find your way there alone, can't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, that saves a lot of trouble," exclaimed the officers, delighted. So they wrote him a careful letter of introduction to the governor of the prison, explaining that the bearer was to be locked up as soon as he arrived in a most unpleasant cell.

"That's all right," they said to great satisfaction. "We hope your journey won't be too tiresome." And they parted with great cordiality.

The young man did as he was told and is now in prison. [illegible]

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

"AWAKE, O SLEEPER!"

PASTOR RUSSELL SPEAKS ON THE RESURRECTION.

Present Life Can Only Be a Period of Schooling For Something to Come—The Awakening Is to the Really Important Things About Us—Advancement of Our Age Has Brought Many Discontentments.

New Britain, Conn., June 30.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle, addressed large audiences twice here today. The topic for one was "Where are the dead?" We report the other one from the text given. He said:

Text, "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light" (Ephesians v, 14).

The figures of Scripture are forceful as well as true. Our Creator speaks of the whole world being dead—because under sentence of death. More than this, through the fall our reasoning faculties are more or less unbalanced, some in one particular, others in another. Some have Hope disproportionately large, and are continually overestimating their possibilities. Others have the quantity of Hope proportionately small and are continually discouraged and hindered from making the best use of their faculties. And thus it is with all of our talents. None of them could really be too large if the others were proportionately large. It is the mental balance or poise that constitutes a sound mind and judgment.

Viewed from the Creator's standpoint our race is sadly unbalanced, greatly changed through the 6000 years of the fall. Originally in the divine likeness, many of its gracious qualities and much of its balance have departed, and hence the scriptural assumption that the world is nine-tenths dead as respects its best qualities of mind and heart. And [illegible]

[illegible] is our only hope of life beyond the tomb, according to the Scriptures, but the thought of that resurrection is carried forward and the word resurrected used in a figurative sense in respect to the phenomenal change which may come to those who hear the Lord's voice in the present time and are awakened thereby. These may, through the operation of their wills, undergo such a transformation, such a change, as is well represented figuratively by the expressions, "arise from the dead," "resurrection," etc.

Thus the Apostle suggests, "If then ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above" (Colossians iii, 1). Again he says, "But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you" (Romans viii, 11). In this last text the Apostle likens the great transformation of the present life to a resurrection from the dead and explains that none of us could have such a transformation of character except as we should receive the begetting of the holy Spirit, the spirit of Christ. That spirit, that holy mind or disposition, accepted by our wills should rule in our mortal bodies, however imperfect, however fallen, however dead they may be to the perfections and righteousness in which we were created as a race.

Because Christ died for human sins—"for the sins of the whole world"—therefore eventually an awakening from the dead will come to all mankind. Thus it is written, The [illegible] shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear [illegible] (John v, 25). The masses of mankind do not hear the voice of the Lord at all in the present life, many of them die in infancy, and the majority are in heathenism. The time when all such shall hear will be during the Millennial Age, when all that are in their graves shall hear the command of the Son of Man and come forth—just as Jesus at the door of Lazarus' tomb commanded, "Lazarus, come forth." And he that was dead came forth." As the world is [illegible] be granted to the elect at Christ's second coming.

There is, however, only the one way to enter the school of Christ, to become his pupils. In the Scriptures it is called the "narrow way" [illegible]

Vermilion's Big 12th of July Celebration

In Spite of Rain and Threatening Weather Big Crowds Attend and All Events are Pulled Off.

Vermilion's big 12th July celebration was a genuine success from all points of view and this in face of a rain which commencing at 5 a.m. continued till well on to noon, and though the showers ceased the day continued cloudy and threatening, a drizzling rain setting in again shortly after 6 p.m. The sentiment of the town was shown in profusely decorated stores, streets and public buildings. Though the rain of the morning kept many away there was a large crowd in attendance, the town's reputation for putting up a good day's sport drawing people out in spite of the unpropitious nature of the elements. Crowds were in town from Mannville, Islay, and all the adjoining countryside, and the celebration was a prolonged day of pleasure. It was bigger and better than ever before. The Citizen's Band and the two fife and drum bands of the Orangemen furnished music throughout the day. The ball tournaments were well contested and the spectators treated to extra good games. The horse racing was the best ever seen here and the heats were keenly and closely contested. The foot races and other athletic events at the track proved [a] great feature. The cricket match between Edmonton and Vermilion was a great attraction [illegible]

Richardson contributed 12 and Thornton 14 not out. In following on in the second innings they scored 45, Cooper's 19 not out being the only double. Edmonton won by an innings and 42 runs.

The Orangemen paraded in the morning and afternoon and lined up seventy-five strong. Banners and the fife and drum bands lent a stirring air to the parade.

A PREVIOUS ENGAGEMENT.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.
[Copyrighted, 1907, by Associated Literary Press.]

Betty began to think that she was no longer curious. Ever since the situation had come for it Knowledge of wedding gifts—the engagement had been so short, I never supposed there would be any—the fact that someone had sent a present—the fact that someone else had not—the fact that Betty's tender conscience was perfectly easy on the latter point—

"I always thought that the week her teenage—I mean when I was a child—I was almost drowned once just how very much I cared for Tom Chandler," she confessed.

After which she sat very still and very thoughtful for several minutes, the distressing uncertainty of a conscientious engaged girl as to—

"I SHALL SEE HIM THAT SOON, YOU KNOW," SHE SAID.

—just what she ought to do with the gift—disappeared.

Betty's mother was the first to be informed. Then the week's mail brought to the mother's daughter a letter which made Betty's heart stand still. Then she opened it and read it. Then she read it again. Then she sat and only looked at the envelope, while her mother read the letter.

"Mother, what shall I do?" she asked, when Mrs. Hamilton had finished. "I shall see him that soon, you know—"

"Of course you will," said Mrs. Hamilton, with a positive air of having made a decision. "Of course you will. Why, Betty, you must write him at once that you will be glad to see him. Tell him that you will be glad to see him. Tell him that you will be glad to see him. Tell him

SPECIAL INFORMATION

J. Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration, on being asked with regard to the special information which he had regarding the conditions prevailing in the prairie provinces, and the progress being made by the immigrants who have recently arrived, said:

"Having just returned from an extended trip over the Canadian Northern railway, the Regina and Moose Jaw districts, the Qu'Appelle valley, the Saskatoon, Rosthern and Battleford districts, the Vermilion valley, Edmonton and Calgary and the main line east from that point to Winnipeg, I may say in the whole province of Manitoba, there is every evidence of an abundant harvest. A generous rainfall at propitious intervals to ensure the best results, has favored the country, and I can safely say that, never has such a good prospect awaited those who are engaged in the pursuit of agriculture in western Canada.

"That portion of Saskatchewan tributary to Swift Current town and extending on either side for many miles, gives promise of an abundant yield of grain.

"A larger per centage of immigration is going into southern Alberta and southern Saskatchewan, and while a reasonable number of our people have been moving northward, still I think the south has been more attractive to settlers during the present immigration season. This fact I attribute to the phenomenal yields of winter wheat through the cultivated portions of the southern area, and possibly the function of the pre-emption clause which applies to those districts.

"There is great activity in railway construction. The Canadian Northern are constructing their line from Saskatoon to Calgary and this fall hope to have 150 miles of that road in operation. They are also building from Prince Albert to North Battleford, 50 miles of which will be in operation this fall. They have commenced construction from N. Battleford to Athabasca Landing, the gateway to the great Peace River regions. [illegible] when completed, should open up a vast area [illegible]

"The various settlements [illegible] is awakening in them [illegible] the crop is excellent [illegible] of the country [illegible] our people are [illegible] hopeful providence has scattered plenty o'er a smiling land and you can read its history in a nation's eyes."

ISLAY CELEBRATION

Postponed Sports Pulled Off on Friday, July 9th

The Dominion Day Celebration, which was to have been held on July 1st but was postponed on account of wet weather, took place on Friday, July 9th. The weather was all that could be wished for and was the means of bringing in a large number of people. There was an excellent list of sports, and for many of the events the entries were large. A special feature of the day was Messrs. Elliott & Merrell's exhibition of bareback riding—standing up on the horses backs. They gave a splendid exhibition and were to be commended for their excellent performance.

The free-for-all horse race, in which six entries were made, was well contested; the first and second horses running almost side by side until on the home stretch, when Miss McRae urged on her horse and beat by a head. The pony races were also very good, some of the ponies showing great speed.

The bucking contest was an exciting event, two of the horses doing some pretty heavy bucking. The riders, Messrs. Atkinson and Asher gave a splendid exhibition and proved themselves to be experts in the work of breaking bronchos. The greasy pig caused much amusement, though he did not appear to draw the crowd very much in the chase. After a good run, he was, however, captured by Mr. C. Atkinson.

The football match in the evening—Islay vs. Extra Gang—was a close game, neither side scoring until near the finish, when Islay gained a goal, making them the winners.

The day was a success in every way, all present being convinced that the Islay sports are well worth attending.

Following is a list of prize winners:

Trotting Race (double) 1st H. Landells, 2nd E. T. Brakenaker.
Pony Race, 1st J. Dixon, 2nd Hayward.
Ladies Pony Race, 1st Miss Allen, 2nd Miss McRae.
Bucking Contest, 1st Asher.
100 yds. Flat Race, 1st G. M. Cundall, 2nd C. Atkinson.

Railway Routes Approved

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, minister of railways, has now signed route maps of railway extensions in Alberta, to which he gave his approval a week ago, and the following details are now available:

The routes approved now are: Canadian Pacific line from Langdon to a point 45 miles north and then to a point on their line between Penhold and Red Deer, and of the Canadian Northern from Strathcona southwest crossing the Calgary and Edmonton line just north of Red Deer, passing near Red Deer, and south to Calgary, and also of the G.T.P. from Ryley on the main, southerly to near Pond Hill through Camrose, passing near but west of Content and close to Three Hills, south to Calgary. The Canadian Northern route map through Camrose was withdrawn.

This, in all probability, means that the C. N. R. Vegreville to Camrose line will not be completed and that we will not have the connecting line running northeast from Ryley as expected. M. H. McLeod general manager of the C. N. R. states in a wire to the Strathcona Board of Trade that the line from Strathcona to Camrose has not been abandoned.

Our friends of Vegreville and Ryley will certainly be disappointed in the withdrawal of the C.N.R. from the completion of the construction between those centres. Ryley, however, will rejoice in the possibility of the construction of a branch line running south of the G.T.P. Tofield certainly welcomes the announcement as it assures us a connection south.—Tofield Standard.

Mr. J. A. Rowbarough has to date made the sale of three complete threshing outfits of 20 h.p. each. Two of these go into the Paradise Valley country. The purchasers are Norman McClellan and David Brown, a Sawyer Massey outfit, Wm. Bradshaw, a J. I. Case outfit, and John Davis and Mr. Hetherington a J. I. Case outfit. Mr. Rowbarough has another sale on the tapis for this week. With the other sales made by other dealers there is bound to be something doing in the threshing way this fall.

Grain Rates To Coast Reduced

Vancouver, B.C., July 8—Announcement is made by the C.P.R. that rates for grain shipment from Calgary to Vancouver will be 19½ cents, a reduction of 3 cents from the former rate. The C.P.R. is making every preparation to handle the crop here this season, and there is every probability that the company will construct at the eastern end of its line of wharves a pier to be devoted exclusively devoted to the handling of grain.

Rusylvia Notes

The new school in this district is nearly completed, it is expected to be opened about Sept. 1.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mr. Christian, N.E. 10-54-6, on Monday, July 5th; the occasion being Miss Christian's birthday.

The Pelican Lake school district intends holding a picnic on July 16th. There will be a full list of sports including a dance in the schoolhouse in the evening.

Miss Louise Moore, from the Isle of Man, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Christian. Miss Moore intends to remain in the country.

Crops are looking well here. Spring wheat in places measures 28 inches. Other grains are equally good.

Work on the roads is progressing favorably and some of the worst places have been fixed.

Mr. Oskel Yahnson from Water Glen, Alta., passed through here on his way north in search of homesteads for himself and friends.

Mr. Albert Gibbs was a visitor in the district on Sunday last.

Mr. Frank Howie expects his mother from the East next week.

Norman Murray paid a business visit to Edmonton on Thursday last.

Wainwright's First Anniversary

Wainwright, Sask., July 6—The first birthday of the town was celebrated here on Dominion Day by a day of sports, consisting of baseball, football and tennis matches, athletic events and horse races, finishing up with a grand ball in the evening.

The town was en fete for the occasion, and upwards of 1000 visitors spent an enjoyable time in the Buffalo town.

The baseball tournament was won by Wainwright from the runners up Irma, by a score of 8—7, in a very evenly contested game. Wainwright also won the football cup and Medals from Edgerton by a score of 1—0. Great interest was taken in the tug-of-war, the Battle River team won the final against the strong Strawberry Plains team in a magnificent contest. The five-mile road race was won by Deforest Chyne, with J. Latourney second.

A SAD DROWNING FATALITY

Young Man Drowns In Sight Of Mother And Brother

A sad fatality took place at the homestead of Mr. Alex. May, 20-48-7 sixteen miles south of here on Friday at 3 p.m. when his son Robert, aged 18 years, was drowned in a slough a short distance from the house. The deceased had been shooting on the slough and was swimming out to get the game when seized with cramps, he gave one cry and sank. His mother and a brother had been eye witnesses of the fatality and hurried to neighbors for assistance. Search for the body of the drowned youth continued all night by torchlight, success rewarding their efforts at 9 o'clock Saturday morning when the body was found in six feet of water in a drawn up position. The funeral was held Monday to the N.W. 2-48-7, services being conducted by Mr. Morrison. General sympathy is felt for the family in their bereavement.

Peguis District Notes

Part of the material is now on hand for the Stanley school and there is every hope of the hills resounding, not with song, but with the sound of hammer hitting nail, in a few days.

Another fence is going across the trail at John Gervais, this will mean an extra mile or two, a big lake being in the way. Hurry on the airships, someone please.

Friend Tillson of 55-6 made good trade in this district the other evening, a horse for a pair of fine bulls.

Messrs. Bennett and Silverlock are busy breaking on the latter's place.

All roads lead to Vermilion July 12th. According to reports the mosquitoes will have sole possession in the district on that date.

Charlie Anderson and John Gervais went fishing in the Saskatchewan, but the fish weren't hungry and wouldn't bite.

H. Bennett also went fishing, he was more successful and got lots of bites, (musquito)

Maughan Budget

The Queenie Creek school celebrated the 1st of July by holding their first annual picnic and in spite of the unfavorable weather Messrs. Marns, Cartwright, Dempe and Maughan managed to provide a most enjoyable program. The ball game was well contested and ended in a victory for the visitors by one, score 10—11.

The principal event of the day was the half-mile horse race in which there were [illegible] competitors, the 1st prize [illegible] awarded to A. Boudry, 2nd P. Gervais 3rd C. Neville; also ran Messrs. Taylor, Robertson, Maxwell, B[illegible], Stevens, Bird Bros., and Miss Bird.

W. F. Ellis spent last week on his brother's homestead at Gilt Edge, and took in the celebration at Wainwright on the 1st.

Mrs. Russell from Washington, Penn., accompanied by her young daughter, arrived here this week and left this morning to join her sons on their homesteads 35 miles north of town.

The regular monthly meeting of the vestry of St. Saviour's church was held Thursday evening and besides other important matters, arrangements were made, until the new incumbent arrives to continue the regular Sunday evening services.

The many friends of Miss Clay regret extremely to hear of her unfortunate accident. While driving home from town last Wednesday evening she was thrown from the rig sustaining a broken arm. She is doing as nicely as can be expected and all trust for her speedy recovery.

Fred Whitmarsh has set up a gold saving machine for which he holds both a Canadian and U. S. patent. They sell at $75 apiece and show mechanical skill and the miners experience in system of construction. Mr. Whitmarsh got the patent in 1894 and renewed in 1904 having his rights protected until 1914. The machine is being shipped up to the Big Bend on the Saskatchewan, where washing is going on extensively.

IN HIGH ALTITUDES.

The Most Common Ways in Which the Heart is Affected.

Dr. I. N. Hall, writing in the American Journal of the Medical Sciences, says that the dangers to the heart in high altitudes are the same as in other places, but are greatly exaggerated in some directions. The troubles most common and serious, he says, relate to inflammation of the heart muscle, hardening of the arteries and dilation of the heart.

The principle applied is this: The heart and lungs have an increase of [illegible] work with each added degree of elevation and the consequent decrease in atmospheric pressure. To meet the increased demand on the circulation the heart must enlarge if the [illegible] of exercise is taken. It is most unusual for acute dilatation of the heart to occur after slight effort on the part of those whose arteries have [illegible] and who have long been accustomed to atmospheric pressure at the sea level. The trouble with those who suffer in high altitudes [illegible] is that they try to do [illegible] when they feel [illegible] by the bracing atmosphere.

Dr. Hall holds that even [illegible] a narrow margin of heart strength [illegible] to the present observer [illegible] rheumatism. In such a climate he is less susceptible to acute rheumatism.

A LUCKY SHOT.

Exciting Incident of a Lion Hunt in East Africa.

In the Wide World Magazine there [illegible]

[illegible]

The lioness, attracted by the sight of the Boers, swerved off suddenly and made after the fugitive. The man had not more than twenty yards start, and the great brute rapidly overtook him. Miss H fired again, and we then both fired as well, but we were not near enough to make a good running shot. The wretched man, with a courage born of desperation, turned at the last moment and hit at the lioness with his rifle. The blow fell a bit short, and the enraged brute, snapping at it [illegible] caught the weapon in her mouth at the muzzle. The piece of which she was trying was so great that Hassan was buried backward, and in falling his finger caught the trigger, letting off both barrels. By the most extraordinary piece of luck the rifle was pointing straight down the beast's throat at the moment, and down she went, with her head nearly shot away, right on top of him.

Notorious Women Gamblers.

[illegible] gamblers of the eighteenth century was Miss Pelham, the daughter of the English prime minister. She not only ruined herself at cards, but would have beggared her sister Mary as well, and not their friends intervened and insisted on the sisters separating. Horace Walpole gives a pitiful account of "poor Miss Pelham sitting up all night at the club without a woman, losing hundreds a night and her temper, beating her head and making a scene before the young men and the waiters." Another writer says that the unhappy woman "even played cards with the tears streaming down her cheeks."

Lady Mary Compton, an old maiden lady, a contemporary [illegible] was likewise addicted to gambling, and the same propensity to tears. When she lost "we are told she wept bitterly [illegible]" she was careful to explain, "but for the unkindness of the cards."

PERILS OF EXPLORERS.

A Tragic Journey Across a Desert of [illegible]

One of the most trying of the central Asian adventures of Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, was this: In February, 1895, Sven Hedin started eastward, exploring the country between the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers, proceeding in April to cross the Takla Makan desert, between the Yarkand and Khotan rivers. Never before had any known traveler attempted to exploit a course amid the eternal sea of shifting sand hills from river to river. The tale of that little, travel worn, bedraggled group, far beyond the last watering place, enveloped in dust, stumbling along through the dreary but agitated desert sea by crooks and roundabout ways, with desolation spread around and every trace of life departed, was a weird and pathetic one. "Not even a fly was to be heard in the air, not even a yellow leaf broke the monotony."

And ever at their head was the sturdy figure of the Swedish explorer, compass in hand, still enthusiastic, guiding them as best he could through the death shrouded wilderness. At length the camels had to eat their straw saddles, and the last of the bread was gone. Horrors followed. As men and camels dropped out of the line they were immediately enveloped in the whirling sand shroud and never seen again.

The end came on May 5, when Sven Hedin, crawling on all fours, dragged himself across the dry bed of the Khotan river. "All of a sudden a duck flew into the air and water splashed," he wrote. Two of his followers were all that survived, and it is doubtful whether even those two would have lived to tell the tale had not Sven Hedin carried back water for them in his boots.

MARKED THEIR TRAIL.

Two Brave Women Who Outwitted a Band of Indians.

One summer afternoon in 1776 Jemima Boone and two sisters named Callaway while boating on the Kentucky allowed their canoe to drift close to the opposite bank. Here, behind a bush, five Shawnee warriors were in hiding, and, although the spot was not more than a quarter of a mile from Boonesborough, one of the Shawnees struck boldly out into the water, seized the canoe and dragged it to shore with its screaming occupants.

Once in the power of the Indians, however, these youthful daughters of the wilderness betrayed a wonderful self possession and resourcefulness. They knew enough of Indian customs to realize that if their strength failed them and they should prove unequal to the long march to the Shawnee towns on the Ohio they would be slaughtered mercilessly. So they [illegible] sobs and calmly accompanied their captors without protest or struggle. At every opportunity, though, they secretly tore little pieces from their clothing and attached them to bushes on the trail. Nothing more was needed to inform Boone and his fellow settlers, who had quickly started in pursuit, that they were on the right track, and on the second day of the captivity they caught up with the Indians. A volley laid two Shawnees low, the rest fled, and by the close of another day the girls were safe in the arms of their thankful mothers.—H. Addington Bruce in Smith's Magazine.

Stories of W. S. Gilbert.

When Sir Henry Irving and [illegible] Booth were acting together in London at doubled prices, the story goes that Mr. Sherman Wells, meeting W. S. Gilbert in the street, asked him whether he had been to this quite exceptional show. "No," said Mr. Gilbert, "I have sometimes paid half a guinea to see one bad actor, but I will not pay a guinea to see two."

Mr. Beerbohm Tree was playing the part of Falstaff at the London Haymarket [illegible] made him perspire profusely. Mr. Gilbert, who was in the theater, went behind the scenes to see the actor, who may well have been expected to be congratulated on the excellence of his impersonation.

CHINESE DWARFS.

Their Ancestry Dates Back to the Building of the Great Wall.

Pygmy human beings who live like animals and seem lower in the scale than African baboons were discovered in [illegible] China by Dr. W. E. Geil, an American explorer and writer, who has just returned to this country. The discovery was made in the course of a caravan journey along the entire extent of the great wall of China, 1,800 miles, and it confirmed the legend that far in the interior dwelt a race of hairy dwarfs, the kind of beings described by Marco Polo and Baron Munchausen with damage to their reputations for veracity. But the dwarfs exist, and ancient inscriptions on the Great wall, deciphered for Dr. Geil by Chinese scholars, profess to explain their origin. Back in 210 B. C. the Emperor Chin decided that his country needed protection from the fierce Tartar tribes on the west and north, and he ordered the building of a horseshoe shaped barrier thousands of miles in length to inclose the empire from sea to sea. A work more monumental than the erection of all the Egyptian pyramids and temples was begun. Millions of Chinese toiled at the Great wall, cutting and laying granite blocks for the first courses and making brick for the superstructure. The towers were built first, and they served as military blockhouses while the connecting walls were put up.

Kept at their job by strict compulsion, the millions of laborers were inspired by the fear of an unusual penalty for error or rebellion. The workman who made a mistake or listened to agitators was promptly incorporated in the wall as so much building material. Burying alive proved to be good discipline with a majority of the laborers, obviating strikes and discontent [illegible] of them ran away to [illegible] Tibetan border. They took their wives and children with them. So affected were they by their terrible experience that some of them went crazy [illegible] such a hard fight for existence that they deteriorated physically, transmitting dwarfishness to their present day descendants. The Chinese legend to this effect may not be entirely astray, since it is likely that deserters from the army of labor fled to the forests and that the hardships of a wild isolated life should have had effect on them after many generations. The dwarfs have long [illegible] faces and resemble apes. Dr. Geil believes that the Great wall has never been entirely explored in modern times previous to his expedition last year. He found a stretch of 200 miles that had not been mapped. At places the great wall climbed to a height of two miles above sea level. There were evidences of monumental barriers antedating Emperor Chin's celebrated measure.—New York Tribune.

Zam-Buk Cures Sunburn.

Don't have your vacation spoiled by the pain of sunburn, and don't have your skin permanently freckled from the same cause.

Zam-Buk contains herbal extracts and juices which not only ease the pain of sunburn, but prevent unpleasant results from it. Zam-Buk applied to a bad burn gives speedy ease. It also soothes blisters, aching feet, chafed places, insect stings, etc. See that you take it with you to the country.

Mothers should know that for baby's chafed places it is better than powder. Also for heat rashes, eczema, prickly heat, etc. Sufferers from piles will find it indispensable. All druggists and stores.

WILL HER LOVE SURVIVE?

She loves me dearly, she declares,
This maid so sweet and pure.
All joys and griefs with me she shares,
Of that I am quite sure.
But as Time urges his career
From day to week and month to year
A small voice whispers in mine ear,
Say, will her love endure?

Me she cajoles with all the wiles
Her woman's wits contrive—
Embraces, kisses, tears and smiles—
But will her love survive?
Alas, I fear the years to be
Will change her attitude to me,
For at the present day, you see,
I'm fifty—she's just five!

WHAT to DO WHEN POISONED by IVY

Applying Remedy with Absorbent Cotton.

Mixing Sugar of Lead and Cold Cream.

Painting Around the Inflammation.

To many people the fear of poisoning is the curse of the summer time. To these unfortunates the country has no charms for behind any tree or bush may lurk their enemy, poison ivy—called in the South, oak.

To add to their terror, tradition has it that, once poisoned, the skin becomes irritated in the same way at the same season for three successive years. Whether this is a superstition or not is hard to say, but certain it is that I know a child whom strawberry leaves poisoned, and although, once being caught, she thereafter carefully avoided the strawberry patch, for three years the eruption of the skin returned at strawberry season.

To some the irritation caused by poison ivy is not painful, to others the suffering is acute. All that can be done is to take the inflammation away, and for this there are several remedies.

MANNVILLE, ALBERTA

LOCAL NEWS.

This week haying will become general throughout the district.

Mr and Mrs. Geo. C Powell were visitors in Wainwright last week.

The Massey Harris Co. have unloaded two car loads of binders at their distributing warehouse here.

Heavy rains set in during Wednesday night, lasting for several hours and thoroughly drenching the ground.

Large quantities of grain are reported in the heading stage and the harvest is likely to be early.

A letter from Rev. A.R. Aldridge intimates that they like their new home, though Vermilion is still all right.

It is reported that Mr. Harmon has sold his quarter at Campbell Lake for $3,200. This is one of the best farms in that locality.

Craig & Falkins are holding another big auction sale of dairy stock, horses, machinery and household goods at Wood's corrals on Saturday afternoon of July 24.

Work is well advanced on Mr. D. Berry's new residence on First Street north. The main part of the building is 16x22, two storeys high with cottage roof and has a lean-to 16x22. It is built on a concrete foundation. The completed building will present a very fine appearance.

Full sheet posters were printed yesterday for Mannville's big market day, Saturday next July 17. An auction sale of horses, cattle, furniture, machinery, etc., will be held. All wanting to buy and those having stuff to sell are requested to attend. J. R. Thomas is the auctioneer.

Mr Wm. Campbell, general merchant of Dunstream, Ont., who has been spending a pleasant visit with his daughter, Mrs. R. J. McClinton of town, for the past two weeks, has continued his trip to the coast and Seattle. Twenty years ago the editor of this paper attended the old Dunstream school, and was much pleased to meet Mr Campbell and see him little changed after the lapse of so many years.

Mr. S. E. Taylor handed into this office Saturday a sample bunch of Flax pulled from a ten acre field on his homestead, N.E. 24-20-7, two miles south of town. The flax, which is [illegible] of May and has only been in the [illegible] Mr Taylor [illegible] growth has been simply phenomenal and the entire ten acres presents the same advanced appearance. The same party has 16 acres in flax all [illegible]

W. J. Rutherford shipped two cars of fat cattle to Edmonton on Wednesday last for which he received five cents per pound. Mr. Rutherford has shipped thirty car loads of cattle from Vermilion this season.

W. A. Connelley is breaking with a 35 h.p. outfit on his lands south. In one day 41 acres of virgin prairie was turned over. Mr. Connelly has two sections of land which he is preparing for grain growing, located a few miles south of town.

Mr. C. West has left at this office a sample bunch of the famous Alaska wheat of fabulous yield. A great deal appeared in the press about this wheat. Mr. West procured a half bushel of seed from the States and the sample heads explain the phenomenal yield. They are cigar shaped and appear to be made up of strata of smaller heads each containing 8 to 10 wheat kernels and as there are some 16 of these on the main head it would mean anywhere from 140 to 160 wheat grains in a single fully matured head certainly an amazing number. The wheat is of the soft variety. [illegible]

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Bryden, Mannville, was the scene of a very festive occasion when on Wednesday, June 30th at sunset, their daughter Miss Anna May was united in marriage to Mr. Neil McKinnon, contractor of Mannville. Only the immediate friends of the newly married couple were present, though their numerous friends of the Mannville district will unite in good wishes for their welfare. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. R. Aldridge, B. A. according to the chaste but beautiful service of the Methodist discipline. Miss Grace Bryden and Mr. Randolph Hayward signed the marriage certificate as witnesses. Mr and Mrs. McKinnon left on the night train for Edmonton and points west, and upon their return will reside at the homestead north west of Mannville.

INDIGESTION CURED EVIDENCE IN PLENTY

Your Neighbors Can Tell You of Cures by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Every one of us has neighbors who have been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Ask any of them about it. Here is one case: Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Lyndhurst, Ont., says: "I was troubled with indigestion for about two years. I had a bad taste in my mouth, and a coated tongue. I had a dull pain in the back of my head, and was very much run down. I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using a few boxes I found they were helping me. I continued using them for about two months, when I was completely cured. I have recommended them to many friends, and will always do so when I have the opportunity."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood builder and nerve restorer. They make rich, red blood, which drives out disease. That is why they cure anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney disease, and the ailments of growing girls and women. Sold by all druggists, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SERGEANTS' MESS SOLD.

One of London's Landmarks Disposed of Under the Hammer

A London cable says: The historic Sergeants' Mess of the Coldstream Guards, which has been a landmark in Pall Mall for many years, was sold by auction yesterday. The building, which is a fine example of the Adam style of architecture, was erected in 1765 by Robert Adam, the famous architect, and was originally the residence of Lord Melbourne. It was purchased by the Coldstream Guards in 1835, and has been used as the sergeants' mess ever since. The building was sold for £10,000 to a syndicate which intends to convert it into a restaurant.

How Birds Are Trapped, Cured For and Transported by Thousands.

A recent consignment of 100 live Lesser Kestrel hawks from Egypt to Mr. Meredith & Drew, Leadenhall street, London, E.C., has given rise to a question in the House of Commons, which had the effect of eliciting from the Board of Trade the following information:

The hawks are intended for use in connection with the sport of hawking, which is still carried on in certain parts of the country. The birds are trapped in Egypt during the spring migration, and are then kept in captivity for a few months, during which they are fed on small birds, mice, and raw meat. They are then transported to this country in cages, each containing about 12 birds, and are sold by auction in London. The cages are specially constructed for the purpose, and the birds are carefully looked after during the journey. The mortality among them is very small, and the birds are in good condition when they arrive in this country.

CHINESE DWARFS.

Their Ancestry Dates Back to the Building of the Great Wall.

Prying among heroes who live like animals and seem lower in the scale than African baboons were discovered in the mountain solitudes of northern China by Dr. W. E. Geil, an American explorer and writer, who has just returned to this country. The discovery was made in the course of a caravan journey along the entire extent of the great wall of China, 1,900 miles, and it confirmed the legend that far in the interior dwelt a race of hairy dwarfs, the kind of beings described by Marco Polo and Baron Munchausen with changes to their proportions for variety in that the dwarfs exist, and ancient inscriptions on the Great wall, deciphered for Dr Geil by Chinese scholars, profess to explain their origin. Back in 210 B. A work more monumental than the erection of the Egyptian pyramids and temples was begun. Millions of Chinese toiled at the great wall, cutting and laying granite blocks for the five centuries and making bricks for the superstructure. The towers were built first, and they served as cottages block-houses while the connecting links were put up.

Kept at their job by strict compulsion, the millions of laborers were inspired by the fear of an unequal penalty for error or relief. The work was not to be made a mistake or intended to agitators was promptly inconvenienced by the wall was being building mainly. Burying alive proved to be good discipline with a view to the keeping of laborers, striking strikes and discontent, but some of them ran away to the remote forests on the Tibetan border. They took their wives and children with them. So effected were they by their terrible experience that some of them went crazy and the rest had such a hard fight for existence that they degenerated physically, transmitting the deterioration to their children and grandchildren. The process speeded up in the course of centuries, and the effect now is that there is a race of dwarfs that deserves from the army of laborers of the Emperor and that the dwarfs of a solid inherited the abnormal characteristics of their ancestors. The dwarfs have long since ceased to grow, and are now about the size of children of 10 years, but they are full grown men and women in appearance and intelligence. They are of a dark color, and their hair is long and shaggy. They live in caves and subsist on the coarsest food, such as roots and grass. They are not cannibals, as has been asserted, but they are little above the animals in their habits. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life.

Xam-Buk Cures Sunburn.

Don't have your vacation spoiled by the pain of sunburn and don't have your skin permanently freckled from the same cause.

Xam-Buk contains herbal extracts and juices which not only cause the pain of sunburn but prevent unsightly freckles from appearing. Xam-Buk applied to the hot burning parts speedily relieves the pain. It also draws away the poisons and heat, and leaves the skin cool and healthy.

You should know that Xam-Buk is a skin food. It is not a greasy ointment, but a pure herbal medicine, containing only such ingredients as will feed and build up tissue. All druggists and stores sell it.

WILL HER LOVE SURVIVE?

It's a queer old world—it's the strangest thing
That a man can't tell what a woman will do;
And the queerest part of the queer old world
Is the part that belongs to you.

You may think you've read her through and through,
But you'll find you've only begun
When you've turned the last page in the book of her life,
And you've come to the end—and one.

For the end is the end, and the book is closed,
And you've learned the last that she can know,
And you've found the place that you've sought for long,
And you've reached the end—and so

You've come to the end of the road you've trod,
And you've come to the end of the quest,
And you've found the thing that you've dreamed about,
And you've found the best.

And you've come to the end of the book of life,
And you've come to the end of the page,
And you've found the woman who's all your own,
And you've come to the end—and age.

Roy Adams, paddling about among the water lilies with Ruby Lane, had just come near proposing to her and she to reflecting him, this being their customary, daily diversion. Now he was watching her lazily. That was what typified Ruby to Roy—laziness. He was large and blond, with placid, expressionless blue eyes and a face like Tartar tribes on the west and north, and he ordered the land of being thrilled by Marco Polo and Baron Munchausen with changes to their proportions for variety in that the dwarfs exist, and ancient inscriptions on the Great wall, deciphered for Dr Geil by Chinese scholars, profess to explain their origin. Back in 210 B. The towers were built first, and they served as cottages block-houses while the connecting links were put up.

Kept at their job by strict compulsion, the millions of laborers were inspired by the fear of an unequal penalty for error or relief. The work was not to be made a mistake or intended to agitators was promptly inconvenienced by the wall was being building mainly. Burying alive proved to be good discipline with a view to the keeping of laborers, striking strikes and discontent, but some of them ran away to the remote forests on the Tibetan border. They took their wives and children with them. So effected were they by their terrible experience that some of them went crazy and the rest had such a hard fight for existence that they degenerated physically, transmitting the deterioration to their children and grandchildren. The process speeded up in the course of centuries, and the effect now is that there is a race of dwarfs that deserves from the army of laborers of the Emperor and that the dwarfs of a solid inherited the abnormal characteristics of their ancestors. The dwarfs have long since ceased to grow, and are now about the size of children of 10 years, but they are full grown men and women in appearance and intelligence. They are of a dark color, and their hair is long and shaggy. They live in caves and subsist on the coarsest food, such as roots and grass. They are not cannibals, as has been asserted, but they are little above the animals in their habits. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life. They are not known to have any religion, and they have no idea of a future life.

"Why, Ruby," he replied presently, her tone implying a comparison between a man thus profitably employed and one who killed his time away at a summer hotel.

"Perhaps he has an object in view," Ruby intimated.

"Perhaps," Roy admitted demurely. "Anyhow, the object has to be attained soon?"

Ruby let her eyes drop toward the top ruffle of her lace organdie.

"I—don't know exactly, and before next spring." She was dabbling her hand in the water, splashing pretty drops of it on Roy's face.

"Ah! Chaperonize him and everything. Shall we row over to that island where the lovers of William and Dora sit?"

"I'm so tired," Ruby answered. "Isn't it time we went home for luncheon?"

"Yes," Roy assented. "But I hardly think he'll care about leaving any more."

"No? Why not?"

"I presently told him I was—engaged."

"Dear me! And to whom?"

"A person I invented."

"You unprincipled wretch! What did you do it for?"

"Just to test his effect it would have."

"And what effect did it have?"

"None at all. You couldn't stir him up to move a eyelash whatever you did. He's too wonderfully cool. He's too irritoper."

Mrs. Lane shook her head gently.

"You're off the track," she reminded, and, nevertheless greatly vexed, "the easy perhaps he guilty of always keeping his temper and self you, a married woman would consider that a very good thing, but as for being her—Alberta friends say that, although he has his easy way and looks as if he were letting things go to smash he has his own ideas and his eye on every thing and every move he makes counts. I shouldn't wonder if you've yet your silly foot in it for once with your invented man."

Mrs. Lane pressed her lorgnette to her head herself talking to a disciting view of the remarks reflected in a couple of whistling sub ends and re turned to her row boating.

Roy appeared before Ruby early the next day in his usual calm frame of mind and his bowling rig.

"Thank be to goodness, I'm not going out on the lake with me just once more," he added. "I'm going away early in the morning."

"What?" she asked.

"Have to," he responded. "Various reasons to an end tonight. Can you go?"

He reckoned dismally that she would either confirm her little romance of yesterday by an undoubted one or bid goodby forever to this evanescent fling once and for all, and he knew now that the latter was something she could not do and retain any shred of happiness. She waited however until they were out on the lake and well beyond the lake. Then she rushed into it.

"He couldn't object, you know," she said, referring to his remark of some time before "because he's only a fictitious—"

"A dream man?" he asked.

She nodded, blushing tow-mortifically.

He hastened a her of "When a Dream Man True" and settled back to easily Ruby looked down in silence. She was waiting for him to say some thing wise and he was carelessly musing on the way one and then and appropriate thinking of nothing at all. She noticed for the first time how strong his brown hands looked. They were not the hands of a love man.

They drifted about aimlessly.

"It was a silly story to tell," Ruby said at last.

"No, I don't know," he answered bedelicately. "I rather thought you were entertaining. But you might explain him yet, you know?"

"I don't want to be." Her voice was a little uneven.

"Your dream man! I sympathize with him, I'm sure. Like to have that pond lily?"

"Thank you. I don't care for it. Let's go back."

He agreed amiably. "I ought to get back early," he said. "I promised Hubert to go over and fish with him this afternoon, so we may not see each other again. Now, isn't this a day for fishing, though?"

Ruby answered tangled as the walked silently beside him through the light, and all the way to the hotel. Then, while he stalked cheerfully along, making entertaining remarks about the scenery.

They came to a standstill at the summer house on the lawn. It was cool and pretty, and Roy did not want to walk into the crowd on the hotel porch.

"I'm tired," she said. "I'll rest awhile, and we can say goodby here."

He made no comment and had stepped here closely for a minute before. "If you should have occasion to turn with the dream man don't forget to let me know."

She watched him going across as od the lawn, and fell from the big willow chair and began to rock. Then she became vaguely aware of the misty hills. They were dimmer than the hazy summer atmosphere.

"Only a summer flirtation—only a summer flirtation," crooked the rhythm of the rocker.

She turned her eyes to the field where Roy had gone and saw him loitering along. When it should disappear from sight things would have come. He stopped, seemed to pick up something, then he put on his hat and began his easy stride back toward the house. Ruby watched him until he reached the door and looked in, then she leaned against the big willow stalk, just a fringe of pale blue petals overhung from a long golden cord.

"See, I found the first aster and came back to bring it to you," he said, and Ruby accepted it silently. He looked curiously at her eyes. The room grew shadowy. He folded his arms and leaned against the door casing.

"Have you seen the dream man?" he asked after a casual survey of the interior.

"Didn't I tell you there wasn't any?" Ruby pitched her voice to a high pitch, if there really isn't—"

"Couldn't you reconsider things and take me, after all?"

A Discovery by Chance.

Pitsperry, the inventor of early engraving, delighted in doing deeds of charity. One day, while he was engaged in washing a piece of zinc in a solution of nitric acid, a customer had the misfortune to run it into her hand. The wound was deep, and for then half of it was left imbedded in the flesh. Pitsperry gave her a plaster and

FAITH AND FARMING

(Weekly Free Press)

Farming is at [illegible] man has a guarantee [illegible] dence that he will get [illegible] There is a general [illegible] seed time and harvest [illegible] cease, and another [illegible] is sown will be [illegible] cannot be accepted [illegible] applied [illegible] lar cases. [illegible] months hundreds of farm[illegible] west who sowed clean [illegible] prepared land will be [illegible] These men did not sow [illegible] it due to any flaw [illegible] ing. On some spot of the [illegible] surface each year, harvest time comes round with no harvest.

For those famine-stricken people the promise that seed time and harvest shall not cease must appear a mockery.

But we know that in the main these two promises are kept and the belief that they will be kept is the basis upon which agriculture rests. Every farmer assumes that under the law of averages these promises will only fail at occasional intervals so far as he is concerned, even though they fail of fulfilment every day in some place. Thus we farm in faith. It is known that certain treatment of the soil and the addition to it of some seed will usually result in a crop, and we apply the treatment, add the seed and await the result in faith. The trouble, however, is that our faith is not strong enough. The more elementary processes of farming have been tested so often in so many places that it is a mathematical certainty what the results will be in the long run and little faith is required. What we need in our farming to-day is faith that Nat[illegible] repay us in yields if we spend [illegible] and labor on the soil. [illegible] sures us that she will [illegible] both to take Science's word for it.

If some of [illegible]

stock our farms [illegible] our faith is not strong enough to try the matter out for a period of five years, trusting that Nat[illegible]

[illegible]

There are others of us [illegible] would certainly practice such a rotation as — (1) wheat, (2) wheat, (3) oats or barley [illegible] (4) hay, (5) [illegible] of manure, (6) oats, [illegible] to realize the level secured if we could obtain a guarantee from Nature that she would reward our intelligence, faith and fidelity with undiminished fertility and increased yields but our faith will only last from spring time to harvest, and by that time we must see the substance of things hoped for! It requires more faith to farm on a system that may not justify itself for several years than to farm in the hand to mouth style that demands results and rewards every year at any cost. Results will be obtained every year, but the reward will be proportioned, in the long run, to the amount of faith exercised.

None of the best things in other [illegible] of life are obtained with[illegible] faith. We are ordained to live in hope and work in faith. The policy of the man who would [illegible] his fellows in the sphere of agriculture, and become a respected power and influential leader in his district must be to first convince his intelligence that a certain course will be justified by [illegible] in the long run and then, [illegible] doubts and fears, exer[illegible] of faith be can [illegible] that course.

Surplus of $1,500,000

[illegible], July 14. The books of the [illegible] the last fiscal year were fully closed on Saturday last and [illegible] of the Dominion finances for the year was handed out today. The total revenue was $85,093,[illegible] total expenditure on consolidated [illegible] was $84,071,245. The net [illegible] of revenue over expenditure was therefore, $1,022,162. In Mr. Fielding's budget speech of Mar[illegible] estimated [illegible] revenue at $84,[illegible] and the expenditure at $84,[illegible] thus giving a surplus of a million and a half.

As will be seen, the revenue exceeded [illegible] estimate by a half million and the expenditure was [illegible] owing to some unforseen items in two or three departments.

The expenditure on capital account was $46,638,295, of which amount the National Transcontinental railway was responsible for $23,000,000, and the assumption of the liabilities of the Quebec Bridge company for $6,678,000. Railway subsidies amounting to $1,785,867 were paid, and bounties called for $2,067,[illegible]. The remaining ten millions of capital expenditure was for the most part spent on public works and in extensive improvements on the Intercolonial railway.

The increase in the national debt was $45,969,300, or a little less than Mr. Fielding's budget estimate. The total net debt on March 31 was $323,930,250. Of the liabilities, loans payable in England amounted to $277,[illegible], and there were in addition temporary loans payable in England amounting to $13,[illegible],333.

The principal items of revenue include the following: Customs, $47,415,325; excise, $14,937,764; post office, $7,[illegible],223.

Since the beginning of the present fiscal year there has been a steady and rapid growth in the revenue as compared with last year, and if the present rate of increase is maintained for the balance of the year the revenue will come close to ninety three [illegible] millions and the surplus which Mr. Fielding should be able to announce in his next budget [illegible] to the record of the year [illegible]

REMARKABLE NAVAL DISPLAY

Hundred and Forty-Eight Fighting [illegible]

London, July 16.—One hundred and forty-eight British warships will drop anchor in the Thames tonight, the array extending from the estuary at the south end of the river to Westminster bridge, in the heart of London. The total tonnage of the fleet is 750,000, its cost is £62,000,000 sterling ($310,000,000), and it is officered and manned by 42,000 of the picked sons of the nation. More warships—165 to be exact—assembled for the naval review at Spithead in 1897, but at least thirty of those could neither steam nor fight, and were there simply for show purposes.

The fleet now on the Thames is without a useless or obsolete unit. Every one of the 148 vessels could go into battle at a moment's notice and give a good account of itself. What is the object of this extended and and superb display of Britain's fighting power afloat? First, it is an anti-panic show. Uneasiness prevails in every quarter of Britain. Anxiety in the higher circles as to the condition of the country's defence has bred apprehension and pessimism throughout the body politic.

Lord Roberts says the army is a tragic joke. Admiral Beresford says the navy is not what it has been considered, and Germany is accused of having aggressive designs against the peace and liberty of Britons. The result of all this ferment is that the country is in danger of "going off its head." The mighty armada on the Thames, the assembling of which has been saddened by the loss of a submarine in the North Sea Wednesday night, is the admiralty's [illegible] "They have made the country believe that we have no navy," says Admiral Fisher. "The British millions may now line up along the Thames, gaze at our battleships and see the great reality for themselves."

GRAIN GROWERS GRAIN COMPANY

Meeting Held Last Week and Big [illegible] of Business Reported

The third annual meeting of the grain grower's grain company was held at Winnipeg last week and was attended by about 150 representative farmers from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, who represented by proxy several thousand more stockholders. A very satisfactory financial statement was presented, the profits of the year exceeding $50,000, a sum representing about 44 per cent. on the paid up capital. It was suggested by the directors that the profits should be devoted to paying up the 80 per cent. not previously paid up on the stock of the company, and this suggestion was unanimously adopted. The volume of business transacted by the company was reported to be increasing rapidly, 7,500,000 bushels of grain being handled during the last year.

After the election of directors a meeting was held at which T. A. Crerar was re-elected president and John Kennedy vice-president.

In the evening addresses were delivered by leading members of the company, a large number of stockholders being present. R. McKenzie spoke on the question of storage at terminal elevators, and was followed by E. A. Partridge, who dealt chiefly with the sample market and milling conditions at Minneapolis, where he recently paid a visit in the interest of the company. Mr. Partridge, who referred to the spot as the place where wheat was bought and sold, and to the sample market as the place where wheat was dealt in, said the commission men at the Minneapolis sample market fulfilled a real function as the representatives of the farmer or the miller as the case might be. A man could not buy and sell at the same time, and the representatives of the farmers secured the best price they could, based not on the grade but on the intrinsic value of the wheat. In his visits to the flour mills at Minneapolis he discovered many things, one of which was in an up-to-date mill wheat which had been rejected [illegible] placed in the same hopper with the wheat which was not [illegible] treatment. That meant [illegible] when a farmer was paid nine cents a bushel less for wheat because of smut, he was giving away nine cents worth of wheat for nothing. There were other points which he had learned about the milling industry, and he thought the [illegible] according to the amount of the produce which they consumed.

Geo. Langley, M.P.P., a new director of the company, spoke on the influence of the agricultural community in government, and said that in a country where a large majority of the voters were farmers it should be easy to get [illegible] But unfortunately the farmers allowed themselves to be dominated when they should be on top every time. A great many farmers looked upon [illegible] and if they made themselves look like sheep they must expect to be eaten by the wolves. Mr. Langley expressed himself as strongly in favor of government ownership of terminal elevators and advised the farmers to concentrate their efforts on the attainment of that object.

DOING A USEFUL WORK

The board of trade is a much more prominent factor in the life of a western than of an eastern city; this not because one is western and the other eastern, but because one is new and the other old.

In a long-established town or city the problems engaging the public mind are usually fewer and less outstandingly important than in a new one. Most of the larger problems have been faced and solved in some way or other. There is thus little to arouse or keep aroused the spirit of the community, the idea of the common interest in the civic affairs, save when some project of unusual magnitude awakens a temporary interest. As a result the business man commonly pursues the even tenor of his way, attending pretty exclusively to his own business and leaving the management of the civic affairs to the council elected to look after them.

Things are altogether different in the newer west. Here we are facing at present the questions that the older cities have long since solved. The temptation to participate in public affairs to some extent is stronger because of this. It is stronger, too, because of the very pronounced desire on the part of the western people to profit by the experience of the older communities. We are not content to do as well as others have done but aspire to do better. We want not only a quicker material expansion but one which will leave fewer unsatisfactory conditions. In some degree this may be because western people are in the great majority young. In great degree it is also due to the fact that they have come from many countries and have seen many varieties of undesirable conditions produced in the process of city growth. Each is anxious to have his own town steer clear of the pitfalls he recollects in some other town to have encountered. It would be a sad reflection on the spirit of our people if with such varied experience elsewhere and such broad opportunities to shape conditions here they did not strive to shape these conditions somewhat better than they were fashioned in older communities and older countries.

Self-interest, too, of a perfectly legitimate character, tempts men into an interest in public affairs in the West. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] spoil nothing else. [illegible] not on the things that are [illegible] things that he expects to be. If the town prospers as it is [illegible] to prosper all will be well with him. [illegible] he sees his finish. Naturally [illegible] he throws himself into the [illegible] of the town [illegible]

[illegible]

effective means of taking [illegible]

[illegible] the men recognized as leaders in the community and their collective advice [illegible] both public and the elected representatives of the public.

[illegible] communities the boards of trade have well sustained their reputation for reliability. While self interest [illegible] population the boards have not allowed themselves to be made the mouth piece of self interest of the unscrupulous brand.

Several years ago the boards of trade [illegible] and towns in Alberta and Saskatchewan arranged an annual convention [illegible] such boards delegates [illegible]

[illegible] the discussions more useful the various boards submit resolutions to the other boards comprising the association some time before the convention meets. The [illegible] it is a tribute to the good sense of the business men that these were [illegible] and important character.

This gathering has grown steadily in [illegible] useful part in the moulding of public thought touching civic questions throughout the West. Its scope has been broadened recently by the admission of boards from the province of Manitoba, which will bring new blood, new [illegible] ideas. This should make the gathering [illegible] more valuable influence than they have been in the past.—Edmonton Bulletin.

No Cheap Wheat This Year

[illegible], Minn., July 11. [illegible] Law, of Glasgow, flour and grain importer, and representative in Scotland of the Pillsbury Washburn interests, is in Minneapolis. Mr. Law was in conference with A. C. Loring, president of the company, in regard to the outlook for European trade. The farmers are certain to get good prices for their wheat in Mr. Law's opinion because of the supply [illegible] in existing the world over. [illegible] gow, Liverpool and L[illegible] ing firms are in constant [illegible] India, Australia and Argentina. They are in daily communication with New York, Chicago, Montreal, Minneapolis and Winnipeg, and they buy where the best advantage appears at the moment of purchase and direct shipments to any of the ports of England, Scotland or Ireland. From the Glasgow headquarters, Mr. Law has sounded the situation so thoroughly that he is convinced that there is to be no cheap grain in the world this season because of near exhaustion of old crop supplies.

HOW THE SHIP WENT DOWN.

Smashed in Amidships and Powerless to Escape, She Was Swallowed in the Icy Deep—The Wild Rush of the Crew to Escape on the Floe.

Constant peril menaces the hardy crews that fearlessly sail into the icy northern seas and risk their lives in the dangerous work of hunting the seal. In Harper's Magazine George Harding, the author, writes dramatically of the sinking of the ship on which he sailed with the Newfoundland sealing fleet. His experience was uniquely perilous. The ship was crushed like an egg in the ice.

"On the bridge were the captain and watch anxiously awaiting the chance to head the ship out of the moving ice into the stationary pack of which the big sheet was part. The bowline lay on the barricade, ready for heaving when the crew should be ordered on the floe to haul the ship's head around. Aloft, the spyman searched the glasses for signs of a lull in the confused and tremendous waste.

"Then there came a terrific crash. [illegible]

Unfounded Report Denied—Man Lost In Grain Crop

The report in circulation that four men were struck by lightning here is altogether false, as there has been no damage done whatever. How such a rumor got into circulation is a marvel.

A very successful picnic was held at Island Lake on the 20th. Quite a number of people went from town and spent an enjoyable time with their south country friends. There was a baseball match in the afternoon and in the evening a dance which was much enjoyed. The lake shore is an ideal spot for a picnic.

Mr. Dixon will be moving into his new home very shortly. The plastering is completed and the painter is almost through with the exterior. The building looks quite nice and will be a good addition to the town.

The carpenters are busy putting on the finishing touches to Mr. Jameson's house. The plasterers will be busy there in a day or two.

Mr. Sidney R. Giles has just built an implement shed. The implement agents seem to be doing a good business here.

Several parties have spent a day or two fishing north and have brought back some fine fish.

Owing to ill-health, Mr. Threadgould, blacksmith, has been unable to attend his business during the last two weeks or so. He intends to reside on his homestead altogether in the near future. A TRIP OF INSPECTION

Stand of Grain Perfect Crops in Full Head

The agricultural editor of the Standard during the past week personally inspected [illegible] some sixty-five to seventy farms in the south and north and northeast districts, and though this number is small when compared with the whole, [illegible] and stand of the grain [illegible] representative of the [illegible] crop of the Vermilion [illegible]

Everywhere [illegible] stage of the crop is [illegible]. [illegible] hardly an exception [illegible] grain field was one waving mass of heads, giving assurances, under favorable [illegible] for the balance of the season, of weighing the heaviest crop in the history of the district and one second to none in the West.

Eighty per cent. of the crops seen were oats, 15 per cent. wheat and 5 per cent. barley. The large acreage to oats is accounted for from the fact that not much land was prepared last fall and the spring being somewhat cold and late, farmers preferred to take a sure thing and as a consequence some farms are all to oats. One farm visited had 75 acres of as fine a looking crop of oats as it would be possible to see anywhere—another was made up of 15 acres of splendid looking wheat and 50 of oats and so it ran from the newcomers 5 or 10 acres up to the hundred or more of the pioneer of three years standing.

On all sides farmers are [illegible] over [illegible] bright prospects. As one man put it, "We [illegible] the season and we [illegible]

WIDOW PLIMPTON'S ANSWER.

She Had Waited a Long Time For the Question.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Gilbert Potter wheeled his chair up to the window to get the last ray of the departing sunlight. He was making a pretense of reading a newspaper, but he was really looking out into the street, where the lamplighter was busily engaged in his evening task.

Gilbert was very weary—he was always weary.

Since I was sent to bed dirty as an urchin for refusing to eat and drew my first long breath of pain, I have never known what it was to be free from suffering. Sometimes I have thought I would die, but I never have. I have lived on and on, and now I am twenty-five, and I am a cripple for life.

Gilbert's face was very pale and thin, and his dark eyes had a look of patient endurance that was pathetic to see. His mother, sitting by the window, looked at him with a tender smile.

"Gilbert," she said, "I have been thinking that I would like to go to the country for a few days. Do you think you could spare me?"

Gilbert looked up with a start. He had not thought of this. His mother had been with him constantly since his accident, and he had never realized that she might want to go away.

"Why, mother," he said, "I am sorry you have been thinking of yourself instead of me. I am selfish. I ought to have thought of this myself. Of course you must go. When do you want to start?"

"I thought I would like to go to-morrow," she said, "if you can spare me."

"To-morrow!" he repeated. "So soon? Why, mother, I shall miss you terribly. I don't know how I can get along without you. Are you sure you want to go?"

"Yes, dear," she said, "I am sure I want to go. I have been thinking of it for some time, but I did not like to leave you. Now I feel that I must go. I am sure I shall be back in a week."

"A week!" he exclaimed. "Why, mother, that is a long time. I shall be very lonely. Can't you make it a few days longer?"

"No, dear," she said, "I must go to-morrow. I have written to Mrs. Brush, and she is expecting me. I will not disappoint her."

"Mrs. Brush!" he said in surprise. "Why, I thought you disliked her. You have never spoken of her as a friend."

"She is not a friend," she said, "but I have known her for many years, and I am sure she will be glad to see me. I shall be back in a week, dear, and you must promise me that you will not worry while I am away."

"I will try not to," he said, "but I shall miss you very much. I wish you would write to me every day."

"I will write to you every day," she said, "and you must write to me."

"I will," he said, "but I am afraid my letters will be poor ones. I shall have nothing to write about."

"Then write about nothing," she said, "but write to me every day. Promise me that you will."

"I promise," he said, "but I am afraid you will be disappointed in my letters."

"I shall not be disappointed in anything that you do," she said.

Gilbert looked at her with a smile. He was always glad to please his mother, and he knew that she would be glad to receive a letter from him every day.

"I will write to you every day, mother," he said, "and I will try to make my letters interesting. I will tell you all that I do."

"That will be very nice," she said, "and I shall look forward to your letters with great pleasure. Now I must go and pack my trunk. I shall start early in the morning."

She left the room, and Gilbert turned his face to the window. He was thinking of the long days that would pass before his mother's return, and he felt very lonely. He had not realized how much he depended upon her for companionship.

Gilbert was a bachelor, and he lived in a handsome house in a fashionable quarter of the city. He had been left a large fortune by his father, and he had no need to work for his living. He had been a cripple from his birth, and he had never been able to walk. He had been wheeled about in a chair, and he had spent much of his time in reading. He had a large library, and he was very fond of books.

Gilbert had been engaged to be married to Miss Ethel Plimpton, but the engagement had been broken off by Miss Plimpton. She had refused to marry a cripple, and Gilbert had released her from her promise. He had not seen her since, but he had heard that she was engaged to be married to Mr. Percy Dudley, a young man about town.

Gilbert was thinking of Ethel Plimpton when his mother entered the room. She was dressed for traveling, and Gilbert saw a glimpse of a valise and a bundle in a basket in the hall.

"The carriage is waiting, dear," she said, "and I must go. Good-by, and remember that I shall be back in a week."

"Good-by, mother," he said, "and don't forget to write to me every day."

"I will not forget," she said, and she left the room.

Gilbert heard the carriage drive away, and he felt very lonely. He wished that he had not released Ethel Plimpton from her promise. He had loved her dearly, and he had been very happy when he was engaged to her. He had been very much surprised when she had broken off the engagement, but he had not blamed her for doing so. He had released her because he thought it was his duty to do so, but he had hoped that she would refuse to release him.

Gilbert had been very much interested in Ethel Plimpton, and he had thought that she was interested in him. He had been very much pleased when she had accepted him, and he had been very much disappointed when she had broken off the engagement. He had not seen her since, but he had heard that she was very much admired by many gentlemen, and that she was engaged to be married to Percy Dudley.

Gilbert was thinking of Ethel when the door opened and Mrs. Brush entered the room. She was a large woman, and she walked with a heavy tread. She was followed by a servant who carried a tray containing Gilbert's dinner.

"I thought I would bring your dinner to you, Gilbert," she said, "as I knew that you would be lonely without your mother. I am sorry that she has gone away, but I am sure that you will be glad to see me. I shall do my best to make you comfortable."

"Thank you," said Gilbert. "I am very much obliged to you for your kindness."

"Don't mention it," she said. "I am glad to be able to do anything for you. Your mother and I have been friends for many years, and I am sure that she would wish me to look after you. Now I will leave you to your dinner. I will return for the tray in an hour."

She left the room, and Gilbert began to eat his dinner. He was not very hungry, but he thought that he ought to eat something, as he knew that his mother would be anxious about him.

Mrs. Brush returned for the tray in an hour, and she found Gilbert sitting by the window looking out into the street. He was thinking of Ethel Plimpton, and he was wishing that she were with him.

"Gilbert," said Mrs. Brush, "I have been thinking that you must be very lonely without your mother, and I have decided to ask Miss Plimpton to come and visit you. I am sure that she will be glad to do so, and I am sure that you will be glad to see her. I will write to her to-night, and I will ask her to come to-morrow."

Gilbert looked at her in surprise. He had not thought of asking Ethel to visit him, and he did not wish to do so. He thought that it would be unwise to see her, as he was afraid that he might renew his proposal of marriage, and he had promised her that he would not do so.

"Mrs. Brush," he said, "I am very much obliged to you for your kindness, but I do not think that I will ask Miss Plimpton to visit me. I have promised her that I will not ask her to marry me, and I do not wish to break my promise. I am afraid that I should do so if I saw her, and I do not wish to do so."

"Nonsense," said Mrs. Brush. "I am sure that Miss Plimpton will be glad to see you, and I am sure that you will be glad to see her. I shall write to her to-night, and I shall ask her to come to-morrow. I am sure that you will be glad to see her."

Gilbert said no more, and Mrs. Brush left the room with the tray. She wrote a letter to Miss Plimpton that night, and she asked her to visit Gilbert the next day.

Miss Plimpton received the letter the next morning, and she showed it to Mr. Dudley.

"Gilbert Potter is ill," she said, "and he is very lonely. His mother has gone away, and he wants me to visit him. I am sorry for him, and I shall go. I am sure that he has released me from my promise because he thinks that I am a cripple, and that he does not wish me to be unhappy. I am not sorry that he has released me, for I do not love him, and I am very glad to be free. I am going to-day, and I shall not return until to-morrow."

Mr. Dudley looked at her with a frown. He was very much annoyed, for he had hoped that Miss Plimpton would marry him, and he was afraid that she would do so if she saw Gilbert Potter.

"I am sorry that you are going," he said, "for I shall miss you very much. I wish that you would not go."

"I am sorry that I must go," she said, "but I must. I am sure that you will not be lonely without me, for you will have many friends to see you. I shall return to-morrow, and I shall be glad to see you then."

Miss Plimpton left the room, and Mr. Dudley looked out of the window with a frown on his face. He was very much annoyed, and he was afraid that Miss Plimpton would marry Gilbert Potter.

Miss Plimpton arrived at Gilbert's house in the afternoon, and she was received by Mrs. Brush. Gilbert was in the library, and Mrs. Brush went to tell him that Miss Plimpton had arrived.

"Gilbert," she said, "I have asked Miss Plimpton to visit you, and she has arrived. She is in the drawing-room, and I am sure that she will be glad to see you. I will leave you to entertain her, and I will look after her luggage."

Gilbert looked at her in surprise. He had not thought of asking Miss Plimpton to visit him, and he did not wish to see her

OUTSIDE OPINIONS OF THE WEST

The time is past when [illegible] are constrained to [illegible] [illegible]

Of [illegible] ed by the [illegible] the immigration the W[illegible] tries and [illegible] From these sources tens of thousands of substantial [illegible] trooping into our prairie [illegible] every year, and are staking heavily upon the promise thereof. [illegible] optimism that was confined a [illegible] of years ago to Canadians of [illegible] ant temperament and patriotic [illegible] is now general, and [illegible] outside the country as [illegible]. Twenty years ago, nay, even ten years ago, James J. Hill was not prophesying cheerfully about Western Canada, but he now regards that country as the peculiar hope of the bread eating world. The late Russell Sage, an extremely shrewd man, ten years ago spoke of the C. P. R. as a highway so hyperborean as to be out of the scope of sure earnings and safe investment. Of all who are crying up the Canadian West today none find more use for superlatives than the public men of the United States who have acquainted themselves with the economic advantage of that part of our country. In the United States Senate the other day Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, declared it to be his belief, founded on observations made in the course of a trip through the prairie provinces, that in less than twenty years Canada will be the wheat granary of the entire world. He ventured the [illegible] ten years Western Canada [illegible] raising from 500,000,000 [illegible] 000,000 bushels of wheat per annum.

Very likely some of the [illegible] of Senator McC[illegible] cast [illegible] to make as strong a case as possible for [illegible] wheat [illegible] Western States [illegible] of other [illegible] Western [illegible] teams on our prairie country [illegible] pects are scarcely less flattering. Western Canada has always had the potentialities. The rate at which they are turning into actualities has turned the doubters into believers.—Mail and Empire.

The Standard [illegible] gave a [illegible] description of the sow thistle, one of the worst of the noxious weeds known to farmers. The Edmonton Bulletin just the other day said that the weed is making its appearance in this province but fortunately, so far is only found in a few places, but it holds out a warning that great care must be taken that it is not permitted to spread as where this weed has taken a firm hold on a farm, it is almost impossible to eradicate it and often farms, badly effected, have had to be abandoned. The editorial in the Standard was timely and should the weed appear the method of eradication given therein, will be found effective if thoroughly carried out.

The meeting then adjourned.

Lightning Freaks

An incident happened on the farm of A. E. Fisk, S.W. 30-52-5, during a very sharp storm which lasted only half an hour. [illegible] then missed about 6 posts and served 30 more posts in the same manner; the posts look like an umbrella nearly closed, the wire is intact and every staple is there. A stranger thing happened on the adjoining quarter occupied by G. E. Hill, who with his wife was standing in the doorway of their house with both doors open and a few months' old baby lay sleeping sleeping on the bed. The bed was covered by a mosquito netting arranged on a sliding frame with pulley attacnments for lowering and raising. The lightning struck the castor on the foot of the bed, set fire to the netting and in a second all was ablaze. Mrs. Hill snatched up the baby and Mr. Hill was able to put out the flames, fortunately no one was hurt.

DR. McINTYRE, M. P., DEAD

Strathcona's Federal Representative Succumbs After Only an Illness of One Week

Edmonton, July 21.—A feeling of gloom pervades Strathcona and extends to Edmonton today as a result of the sudden death of Dr. Wilbert McIntyre, Federal representative of the Strathcona constituency, which took place at half past four o'clock this morning. A week ago yesterday he was taken ill, and from a magnificent specimen of manhood, who had suffered scarcely a day of illness since childhood, he gradually lost strength as a result of acute kidney disease, till the end came at day break this morning. Since Friday he has lain at the point of death, but hundreds of anxious friends hoped against hope that a change for the better might be reported. Last evening an operation was decided upon as a last resort, and he was removed to the Strathcona Hospital, where skilled physicians did everything possible, but without avail.

In the demise of Dr. McIntyre, Strathcona loses one of her best and most highly respected citizens, one whose death will bring pain to all with whom he was acquainted. To political friends and opponents alike he was ever the courteous gentleman and even in the midst of the bitterest political campaign, when a man is put to the hardest test, his opponents paid high tribute to his personal worth. It was ever his custom to treat all in a gentlemanly way and no discourteous act in public or private life was ever charged against him.

As a man engaged in active political life, Dr. McIntyre ever stood for what was best in the politics of today. In his home city he was personally one of the most popular of its citizens and even in Edmonton where he was not so well known, the frequent telephone enquiries of the past few days indicated the deep interest taken in his condition by the people of Edmonton.

His death comes as he was attaining the height of his public life.

Only a few weeks ago he purchased a handsome residence and early last month entered upon the work of building up a home. His garden, which he was only for a brief period allowed to enjoy, was one to which he frequently referred to with pride in connection with his home life. When engaged upon a tour of professional calls early last week the first symptoms of his illness appeared, and in the midst of his work of giving the physician's help to others, he was laid low as the result of the disease which had gained a foothold upon him.

The late Dr. McIntyre was born at Riverdale, Victoria county, Ontario, on July 15th, 1867. He thus last Thursday entered upon his 43rd year. He was educated at Owen Sound Collegiate Institute and the University of Toronto, from which he received his degree.

About eight years ago he removed to Strathcona, where he entered upon the practice of medicine. In 1904 he was elected to the presidency of the Strathcona Board of Trade, and in the same year was chosen president of the Northern Alberta Medical Association.

In 1905 he [illegible] and on April 6th of that year was chosen to succeed Senator Talbot [illegible] as the Liberal representative of the Strathcona Federal constituency. At the general election last fall the people showed their increased confidence in him by re-electing him with a majority of over 1,000 votes.

His marriage took place on New Year's Day 1895 at Owen Sound, to Mary J., youngest daughter of the late Captain Robert Harkley, of that place. To her the heart felt sympathy of a community will go out.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at three o'clock from the residence, corner of Fifth street east and Second avenue north, to Knox Presbyterian Church, and from thence to the Strathcona cemetery.

Attorney General [illegible] to be the retaining, the [illegible] Alberta are still in progress. [illegible] a lease of [illegible] tenancy of the police. The Dominion government has refused to renew the agreement on the same basis, and demands a larger payment which the provincial government thinks unreasonable.

CHAILEY ANNUAL PICNIC

Good Weather, Large Attendance and Splendid Time. Other Interesting Items

The great annual picnic was held on the 15th inst. at Mr. Croft's in glorious weather. There was a large attendance and a lengthy programme was carried through. Special mention might be made of the following items:

100 yds dash - 1st. Steve Williams, 2nd. Oscar Carlson. Time 11 seconds. This proved a great race. Mr. Carlson held a small advantage till within the last 15 yards when Mr. Williams, by a magnificent finish, reached the tape a few inches ahead.

Horse race - 1. R. Scott's horse, 2. R. M. Callander's horse, 3. W. A. Letson's horse.

Carding the log - 1. Mitchell. 2. Homer Gardner.

High jump - 1. H. Gardner, 2. I. Walton.

Ladies race - 1. Miss Ina Walker, 2. Miss Lidia Carlson.

Putting the shot - 1. J. E. Thrasher, 2. Mitchell.

220 yds dash - 1. S. Williams, 2. O. Carlson, 3. Bert Williams.

There was a good game of base ball between sides picked on the ground. Minburn was expected to come along and play Chailey United but were unable to do so.

Great praise is due to the many ladies who helped so willingly to make the picnic a success. After the picnic a splendid dance was held in Mr. Croft's house and the dance committee were right there with the goods by providing an outdoor dancing platform which proved to be very attractive.

The Chailey residents were delighted to see so many Mannville faces present and hope they had a good time.

With a continuance of favorable conditions crops will be record ones this season.

For long the old man sat alone, musing in his chair. At length he sighed and took up a magazine. He was thinking of Harry Sanderson.

ORGANIC EVOLUTION.

How Nature Changes Her Plans to Meet New Conditions.

In the course of organic evolution very many strange and quaint developments present themselves from time to time, not only in the history of a race or genus, but within the narrow compass of the life of a single individual member of such race or genus. Nature changes her plans, in fact, to meet contingencies that occur unexpectedly. Probably few who have any acquaintance with marine fish have failed to notice something strange about the appearance of what are called flatfish, known as the flounder family (or in zoology as 'pleuronectidae') embracing the turbot, plaice, brill, sole, halibut, flounder, dab, etc. The conformation of the head and of the anterior portion of the body in the adult stage is characterized by a strained and unsymmetrical appearance. In this respect the flatfish differ from all other members of their zoological class.

The question naturally suggests itself why this particular genus should be so different from all other fish, which, as a rule, are remarkable for their symmetrical and graceful appearance. And the answer is very simple. The flatfish, instead of swimming in an upright or vertical position like all other fish, has for some reason or another taken to the unnatural habit of swimming on its side. It may be on either side, right or left. This enables it to take up what appears to be the lazy position of lying flat on the bottom of the sea, where it can move about freely in search of such food as small marine animals, mollusks, worms, etc. The young fish swims erect in the ordinary manner for some time, but it early shows a tendency to become lopsided and gradually falls over on one side, usually the left, but not invariably so by any means.

The eye on the under side, just as soon as the ... is shown to fall over on that side, ... gradually to move round to the other or uppermost side and finally takes its place beside the other eye.

This process is strangely brought about through the twisting of a portion of the bones of the head, which gives the latter a decidedly deformed and unnatural appearance. ...

SOME OXFORD CUSTOMS

UNWRITTEN LAWS AT GREAT UNIVERSITY.

Students Have Ordinances as Strict as Those of the Medes and Persians Governing Conduct—"Sconcing" Sinners Is an Old Tradition—Top Button Must be Left Unfastened—Evading Gate Fines.

Few men would care to pay 6s. 8d. for the pleasure of a cigarette, yet that sum is exacted many times every evening from 'Varsity men at Oxford and Cambridge, as a penalty for the offence of smoking in cap and gown.

The fine is taken by the proctor, a kind of academic policeman, who patrols the streets accompanied by two menservants, called "bull-dogs," on the look-out for breaches of the university regulations. The fine is doubled in the case of erring B.A.'s and doubled also on Sundays, so that a B.A. who indulged on the Sabbath day in the luxury of a single cigarette while wearing cap and gown might find himself mulcted to the extent of 26s. 8d. Nor can the luckless 'Varsity man evade the penalty by discarding his academic uniform when he wishes to smoke, for the same fines are imposed for being in the streets after dusk without cap and gown.

At Oxford there prevails a curious custom by which undergraduates punish breaches of the unwritten rules of etiquette prevailing at the nightly dinner in "Hall." A man who arrives unduly late, who talks "shop" at table, or makes a pun is forthwith "sconced." Each of the tables in "Hall" has its "sconce-cup," a large, two-handled bowl. This is filled with beer and presented to the delinquent, who, if he can drain it at one draught, is exempt. If, as is usually the case, he fails to accomplish the breathless task, he is forthwith required to stand drinks round the table.

No 'Varsity man, except when he is wearing hunting uniform, would dare to appear within the precincts of his university wearing a top-hat or tail-coat. He would soon come to grief at the hands of his outraged fellow undergraduates. ...

Pills for Nervous Troubles.— The stomach is the centre of the nervous system, and when the stomach suspends healthy action the result is manifest in disturbances of the nerves. If allowed to persist, nervous debility, a dangerous ailment, may ensue. The first consideration is to restore the stomach to proper action, and there is no readier remedy for this than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Thousands can attest the virtue of these pills in curing nervous disorders.

SHAKESPEARE'S LAW.

Citations to Show That He Was in the Fashion of His Time.

No ordinary reader of Shakespeare's works can fail to be struck by the copious and ever-recurring legal phraseology with which they are filled. Not only are law terms frequently employed with an almost professional correctness to give color and intensity to his sentences, but whole scenes are taken up with allusions to or discussions on purely legal matters, as in "The Merchant of Venice," "Henry V." and the grave scene in "Hamlet," not to mention other plays. So profound indeed is the knowledge displayed all through that no less an authority on the subject than Lord Campbell has told us that "to Shakespeare's law, lavishly as he propounds it, there can neither be demurrer nor bill of exceptions nor writ of error." To this marked feature of the works more than to any other one might perhaps with justice attribute the very origin of the whole Baconian theory. The point is naturally of extreme importance in the eyes of those whose only knowledge of the literature of the period is confined to Shakespeare's writings. But that importance shrinks rapidly to insignificance after a course of reading through the general dramatic literature of the time, in which as a matter of fact legal similes and allusions are found to occur with about the same frequency as in Shakespeare's works. So strong indeed is the legal coloring of stage writing at the time that one is forced to believe that law talk must have been more common among laymen in those days and especially among laymen of a play-going disposition than it has ever been during any period since. There are indications besides that some critics were getting tired of all this legal jargon. Dekker, for instance, who writes:

"There is another ordinary at which your London usurer, your stale bachelor and your thrifty attorney do resort ... the rooms as full of company as a jail. If they chance to discourse it is of nothing but statutes, bonds, recognizances, fines, recoveries, audits, rents, subsidies, sureties, inclosures, liveries, indictments, outlawries, feoffments, judgments, commissions, bankrupts, amercements, and of such horrible matter."—Gull's Horn Book, 1609.

SHE COULD NOT HOLD A TEACUP

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. JAMES H WHITE.

Presqu'ile, Gaspe Co., Que. (Special) —After suffering for four years from ills, which many a woman knows, and being treated by a doctor who failed to give her relief, Mrs. James H. White, a farmer's wife living near here, is again a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"My trouble started from a strain," Mrs. White states. "I had a pain always across my back and a steady pain in the back of my neck, and I had urinary trouble that caused me a great deal of annoyance.

"For four years I suffered in this way ... In the morning I was tired ...

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I got relief from the start. Three boxes cured me completely. To-day I am a well woman."

Mrs. White's troubles were Kidney troubles. So are the troubles of nine out of ten of the suffering women of Canada to-day. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure them.

A STORY WITH TEETH

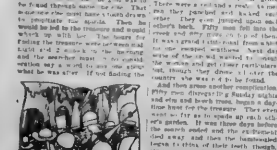
Introducing a Mysterious Woman With a Strange Mission.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

The village of Briskly was and to-day is a place of about 1,200 inhabitants and for many years it was a well-to-do village. Then a railroad was projected two miles away, and the people, but only one doctor, saw the trouble it put there was the place was finished. He didn't like to move, however, so he carried away a pail of sawdust on being run a leg.

It wouldn't be polite to say that the village died a natural death. It was more as though a cancer had developed in the body politic and ate away the life blood. Briskly had been a good town to live in. It had a good class of people, and most of them were well to do. Men who had been worth $5,000 when the railroad came out and died as nearly as they had a dollar to their name. There used to be such cases as that of Jerry Hall, who had been worth $50,000 when the railroad came out and died as nearly as they had a dollar to their name. There used to be such cases as that of Jerry Hall, who had been worth $50,000 when the railroad came out and died as nearly as they had a dollar to their name. There used to be such cases as that of Jerry Hall, who had been worth $50,000 when the railroad came out and died as nearly as they had a dollar to their name.



SEEING WHEN A TELL AND A STOP

Sometimes the first sight he must have a second sight before he might have to turn three, but that would be the end.

Mind the woman gone almost ran. The women telling this yarn one would have been hanged, but the men of Briskly did everything to encourage the woman. She was certainly a stranger when she arrived, and a woman looked it before she left. Everything about her was strange and mysterious. She was an artist and swam that when she had her picture taken she would be a queen. Any of the leading men might have been said of Briskly and the surrounding country, but she didn't find a good—instead she found a man who was a stranger. There were two hotels in the village, but the woman went to neither. She rented a room in a private house and began to paint. She had a studio and worked hard for a week or two, and then she began to call on the people. She had letters of introduction to the leading men, and they called on her in a body. Then she began to paint portraits. She would look at a person for a few minutes, and then she would paint a picture that was a perfect likeness. She painted the doctor's wife, and the doctor was delighted. He had the picture hung in his office, and it was the talk of the town. Then she painted the picture of the doctor's wife, and the doctor was delighted. He had the picture hung in his office, and it was the talk of the town. THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA. AUG. [illegible]

For neglecting [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

The formation of [illegible] well understood [illegible] summer and during th[illegible] storms that it falls and wh[illegible] pellets of ice are fr[illegible] together so as to reach the g[illegible]nd in l[illegible] lumps great damage is often [illegible] to vegetation and farm crops. The hail is hard and compact and in the form of clear or granular ice, the hailstones sometimes being found when broken across to be composed of alternate layers of these two states of ice.

The maximum period for hail is sometime before the ascending current from the heated [illegible] has fully established itself, [illegible] time of the day when the [illegible] disturbance of the atmosphere is greatest. In the higher latitudes hail falls almost exclusively during the warmer months of the year. In regions where the summer climate is practically rainl ss no hail falls, and seldom where the rainfall is small and at distant intervals. All hail is probably connected immediately with whirlwinds, more or less developed.

The theory of the formation of hail has been stated to be somewhat as follows: The vapour carried aloft by the gyrations of the tornado is below a certain height condensed into cloud and rain, but above that height into snow. Let the raindrops formed below be carried up into the snow region by the powerful ascending currents of the tornado and be kept suspended there a little while, and they become frozen into hail. If now these be thrown quite outside the gyrations of the tornado they fall to the earth as a shower of compact homogeneous hailstones of clear ice of ordinary size. If, however, they are caught in the descent and carried in toward the vortex by the inflowing currents on all sides, they are again rapidly carried aloft into the freezing region. A number of such revolutions of ascent and descent may be made before they fall to the earth, and in traversing the region lower down where rain yet unfrozen is carried up they in such manner receive additional coatings of solid ice.

CO-OPERATION

True co-operation and what it is and how obtained, is a question which often baffles a community seeking to establish a co-operative creamery, elevator or some such venture. The following is given by a prominent agricultural writer in way of definition, and seems to [illegible]

"A great deal has been [illegible] and written in farm and dairy [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] are paid, in proportion [illegible] patronage he has given the organization.

"Suppose a co-operative creamery is organized in a community and A subscribes for $400 worth of shares then a sufficient amount of money should be set aside each year to keep up repairs and pay the agreed interest to A and all other stock holders who furnished money.

"Suppose A furnishes cream from 20 cows, or enough to make 4,000 pounds of butter fat; and B furnishes enough cream to produce only 2,000 pounds of butter fat. Then A should receive twice as much money from the sale of produce from the creamery as B, no matter how much stock B might hold in the creamery.

"It has been argued that heavy dividends should be declared on the stock, and that money should be taken from the sale of produce of the creamery to pay the dividends each year. Now, would that be true co-operation?

"A might own [illegible] $25 worth of stock and furnish the creamery with 4,000 pounds of butter fat. If large dividends are declared, A is not only paying his pro-rata share of the running expenses, but he must contribute a cent or two for each pound of butter fat that he furnishes to make a big sinking fund to help pay B not only interest on the money he invested in stock, but also give him a dividend of $30 or $40 on each $100 of investment, making on $400 stock a dividend of $120 or $160, besides interest on his investment. I do not call this co-operation, for the simple reason that while B may furnish but a trifle of raw material for the use of the creamery, he will draw an exorbitant amount of profit on his investment from the material furnished by his neighbor.

"The truest example of co-operation is where the organizers of a co-operative institution raise the necessary funds by joint-note, each member of the co-operation signing the note, and by so doing eliminate the share proportion entirely; and then each person to share the profits pro-rata according to the business he furnishes or does with the institution. If it is a creamery his share of the income should be based on the amount of butter fat delivered to the creamery after first deducting running expenses, repairs, interest and all payments on the principal sum invested in the plant. If it is a farmers' elevator or store, the same rule will apply."

The Peace River Country

Monetary Times: Areas in the Peace River country compare favorably with any part of Canada. From the Rocky Mountains to [illegible] Northwest [illegible] River country [illegible] transportation [illegible] to steal [illegible] Peace River treasures.

In [illegible] J. Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration, that there would be 70,000 settlers come to Canada from the United States this year was not exaggerated as events are showing. Figures to hand show that this was a conservative estimate and that there will probably be far more than 70,000 who there from the United States this year, being an increase of 20 per cent. over last year. "To-day I am in receipt of the total official figures of the immigration to Canada from the United States for the months of April and May of this year, and as far as the figures relate to the immigration, my prophecy is borne out by the remarkable increase of 53 per cent. for these two months over the corresponding months of last year.

SPAIN'S WAR HISTORY

For 800 Years, Torn with Plots and Struggles

The history of the Spanish empire, the throne of which is now tottering, has been a series of wars, plots and intrigues for the past five hundred years. From a condition of barbarism Spain rose at the time of America's discovery, to be the first colonial power of the world and possessed military pre-eminence in all Europe. Corruption and the national characteristics, together with a dictatorship that prohibited all progress brought Spain to the position of a third rate power whose integrity is only secured through international balance of power.

Away back in the third century B. C. part of Spain was brought into subjection to Carthage by Hamilcar Barca, after whom Barcelona was named. A century later the Romans drove out the Carthaginians and formed two Roman provinces, but it required nearly two hundred years to bring all the native tribes to acknowledge the power of Roman arms. From this time on for several hundred years Spain was the granary of the Roman [illegible]

[illegible]

Three hundred years later after a series [illegible] with the Arabs [illegible] the rise of the Saracens [illegible] the invasion of the [illegible] the Arab Moorish [illegible] that [illegible] at this time a struggle for the conquest of Moslems and continual war prevailed between the Moors and Christians. The Moors ruled Mohammedan Spain for 275 years until 1031, and during that time was also an era of great progress. On the downfall of this dynasty separate states sprang up [illegible]

[illegible] The Moors have never [illegible] hope of recovering Spain and once in Morocco they have keys to fortresses they have held for 1,000 years.

Under Ferdinand and Isabella was the foundation laid for the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] attempt to conquer England with his Armada, but it only resulted in the destruction of Spain's naval power. [illegible]

[illegible] was almost continual during the period following the downfall of Napoleon. A war with Morocco in 1859 was without any result, except to test the Spanish army. After difficulties in settling the succession a republic was inaugurated in Spain in 1869 and the presidents given dictatorial powers. In 1874, however, Alfonso, father of the present king, was placed upon the throne after a bloody war and reigned till 1885, there being a regency till 1902, when the present King Alfonso came to the throne. The trouble in Cuba and the war with America were in keeping with Spanish history and [illegible] possessions.

The population of Spain at the 1900 [illegible] from America. The chief cities are Madrid with a population of 539,835, Barcelona, 533,000, Valencia, 213,530, Seville, 148,315, Malaga, 130,109, Murcia, 111,539, Cartagena, 99,871, and Saragossa, 99,118.

In religion Spain is Roman Catholic, and in few countries is that religion so powerful, it being the state religion and liberty of worship to Protestants is restricted.

Education has been very backward in Spain until recent years, the poorer classes being mostly unable to read or write. The once famous universities are now far behind their European contemporaries. Few Spaniards learn any other language except their own, unless it be the nobility of whom most can converse in French. Since 1902 the government has taken a decidedly progressive stand for education and is devoting a great deal of money to the purpose. There are now large numbers of schools and nine large universities.

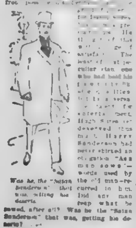
HARRY SANDERSON and [illegible] [illegible]



Was he, the "Satan Sanderson" that was, getting his deserts?

[illegible] The [illegible] peculiar vision one who had held his [illegible] Hugh Stires ever deserved this much. Harry Sanderson had never shirked an obligation. "As a man sows"—words used by the old man—recurred to him. Did any man reap what he sowed, after all? Was he the "Satan Sanderson" that was, getting his deserts?

* * * * * * * *

The later night was very still, and the moon, lifting like a paper lantern over the aspen tops, shivered on the landscape. In its pearl radiance the white house seemed in a ghastly pallor. The windows of one side were black, but behind the library shade the balloon lamp still droned like a monster glowworm. From the shadowy side of the building stretched a narrow [illegible] in front covered by a rose trellis whose pale blossoms in the soft night air mingled their delicate fragrance with that of the jasmine.

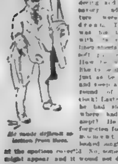
Save for the one bright pane there seemed now no life or movement in the house. But outside in the moonlight a lurching shabbily clothed figure moved, making his uncertain way with the deliberation of compound [illegible]. The sash of the window was raised a few inches, and he nodded sagely at the yellow shade.

"Gay old silver top," he hiccoughed, "see you in the morning!"

He caromed against an althea bush and shook his head with owlish gravity as he disentangled himself. Then he staggered across to the rose trellis and, choosing its angle with an assurance that betrayed ancient practice, climbed to the upper window, shot the bolt with a knife and let himself in. He painstakingly closed both windows and inner blinds before he turned on an electric light.

In the room in which he now stood he had stored his boyish treasures and shirked his meager tasks. It should have had deeper human associations, too, for once, before the house had been enlarged to its present proportions, that chamber had been his mother's. The Marechal Niel rose that [illegible] board to the window [illegible] had been planted by her hand. In that room he had been born. And in it had occurred that sharp corrosive quarrel with his father on the night he had flung himself from the house vowing never to return.

As Hugh Stires stood looking about him it seemed for an instant to his clouded senses that the past six months of wandering and [illegible] misery and adventure were a dream. There was his bed with its [illegible] linen sheets [illegible] [illegible] How he would like to [illegible] just as he was and sleep a [illegible] round of the clock! Last night he had slept—where had he slept? He had forgotten for the moment. He looked musingly at the spacious coverlid. No, some one might appear and it would not do to be seen in his present condition. It was scarcely 10. Time enough for that afterward.



He made difficult selection from these.

He drew out the drawer of a chiffonier, opened a closet and glanced over the order and plenty of their contents. He made difficult selection from these and, steadying his progress by wall and chair, opened the door of an adjoining bathroom. It contained a circular bath with a needle shower. Without removing his clothing he climbed into this, balancing himself with an effort, found and turned the cold faucet and let the icy water, chilled from artesian depths, trickle over him in a hundred stinging needle points.

It was a very different figure that re-entered the larger room a half hour later from the sinking mudbath that had climbed the rose trellis. The old Hugh lay, a heap of sewed and sodden garments; the new stood forth shaven, fragrant with fresh linen and clean and fit apparel. The maudlin had vanished, the gaze was steadied and bright, the whole man seemed to have settled into himself, to have grown from [illegible] defiance. He held up his hand, palm outward, between the electric globe and his eye. There was not a tremor of nerve or muscle. He smiled. No headache, no fever, no uncertain feet or trembling hands or swollen tongue after more than a week of [illegible]. He could still "[illegible]" [illegible] with [illegible]. [illegible] hit him when [illegible] of an evening's [illegible]. And how fine it felt to be [illegible]!

He [illegible] glass. The [illegible] aristocratic [illegible] a pale [illegible] the right brow, a birthmark, resembling a scar. All his features [illegible] of turning an ashen red under the stress of anger [illegible].

On the features young and vigorous as they were subtle lines of self indulgence [illegible] had set themselves, and [illegible] the [illegible] cavalier and careening [illegible] the unmistakable stigmata of inherited weakness. But these the gazer did not see. He regarded himself with egotistic complacency. Here he was just as sound as ever. He had told the [illegible] and taught "the governor" that he could get along well enough without any paternal help if he chose.

He attentively surveyed the room. It was clean and dusted evidently it had been carefully tended. He might have stepped out of it yesterday. Not a thing had been disturbed; yes, one thing. The portrait that had hung over his bed was not in its place. A momentary sense of trepidation rushed through him. Could his father really have meant all he had said in his rage? Did he really mean to disown him?

For an instant he faced the hall door with clinched hands. Somewhere in the house, unconscious of his presence, was that ward of whose coming he had learned. Moreau was a good friend to have warned him. Was she part of a plan of reprisal—her presence there a tentative threat to him? Could his father mean to adopt her? Might that great house, those grounds, the bulk of his wealth, go to her and he, the son, be left in the cold? He shivered. Perhaps he had stayed away too long!

As he turned again, he heard a sound in the hall. He listened. A light step was approaching—the swish of a gown. With a sudden impulse he stepped into the embrasure of the window, as the figure of a girl paused at the door. He felt his face flush. She had thrown a crimson kimono over her white nightgown, and the apparition seemed to part the dusk of the doorway like the red breast of a robin. She held in her hands a bunch of the pale Marechal Niel roses, and his eye caught the long rebellious sweep of her bronze hair and the rosy tint of bare feet through the worsted meshes of her knit slippers.

To his wonder the sight of the lighted room seemed to cause her no surprise. For an instant she stood still as though listening, then entered and placed the roses in a vase on a reading stand by the bedside.

Hugh gasped. To reach the stand the girl had passed the spot where he stood, but she had taken no note of him. Her gaze had gone by him as if he had been empty air. Then he realized the truth: Jessica Holme was blind. Moreau's letter had given him no inkling of that. So this was the girl with whom his father now threatened him. Was she counting on his [illegible] coming back, waiting for the windfall? She was blind—but she was beautiful. Suppose he were to turn the tables on the old man, not only [illegible] back to his good graces through her but [illegible]!

The thin line on his brow sprang suddenly scarlet. What a supple, graceful arm she had! How adroit her fingers as they arranged the rose stems. Was he already wholly blackened in her opinion? What did she think of him? Why did she bring those flowers to that empty room? Could it have been she who had kept it clear and fresh and unaltered against his return? A confident, daring look grew in his eyes. He wished she could see him in that purple tie and velvet smoking jacket. What an opportunity for a romantic self justification! Should he speak? Suppose it should frighten her.

Chance answered him. His respiration had conveyed to her the knowledge of a presence in the room. He heard her draw a quick breath. "Some one is here!" she whispered.

He started forward. "Wait, wait!" he said in a loud whisper as she sprang back. But the voice seemed to startle her the more, and before he could reach her side she was gone. He heard her flying steps down the stair and the opening and closing of a door.

The sudden flight jarred Hugh's [illegible] He thrust his hands deep into his pockets. Now he was in for it! She would alarm the house, rouse the servants. He should have a staring domestic audience for the imminent reconciliation his sobered sense told him was so necessary. Shrugging his shoulders, he went quickly down the stair to the library.

He had known exactly what he should see there—the vivid girl with the hue of fright in her cheeks, the shaded lamp, the wheel chair and the feeble old man with his furrowed face and grey mustaches. What he himself should say he had not had time to reflect.

The figure in the chair looked up as the door opened. "Hugh!" he cried and half lifted himself from his seat. Then he settled back, and the sunken, indomitable eyes fastened themselves on his son's face.

Hugh was melodramatic—cheaply so. He saw the girl start at the name, saw her hands catch at the kimono to draw its folds over the bare white throat, saw the rich color that flooded her brow. He saw himself suddenly the moving hero of the stagery, the [illegible] force of the situation. Real tears came to his eyes, tears of insincere feeling due partly to the cheap whisky he had drunk that day whose outward consequences he had so drastically [illegible], and partly to sheer nervous excitation.

"Father!" [illegible] and came and caught the [illegible] that shook [illegible].

[illegible] of the old man's heart were [illegible] up. "My son!" he cried and threw his arms about him. "[illegible], my boy!"

Jessica [illegible] no more. Thrilling with gladness and flushing with the sudden recollection of her bare throat and feet she slipped away to her room to creep into bed and lie wide eyed and thinking.

What did he look like? Of his face she had never seen even a counterfeit presentment. Through what adventures had he passed? Now that he had come home, forgiving and forgiven, would he stay? He had been in his room when she entered it with the roses—must have guessed, if he had not already known, that she was blind. Would he guess that she had cared for that room, had placed fresh flowers there often and often?

"My son!" he cried.

Since she had come to the house in the aspens Jessica had found the imagined figure of Hugh a dominant presence in a horizon lightened with a throng of new impressions. The direful catastrophe of her blindness—it had been the sudden result of an accident—had fallen like a thunderbolt upon a nature elastic and joyous. It had brought her face to face with a revelation of mental agony, made her feel herself the hapless martyr of that curt thing called chance. She had always lived largely in books and pictures, and her world was full of ideals and of brave adventures. Gratitude had made her love the [illegible] old invalid with his crabbed temper, and the wandering son, choosing for pride's sake a remorseless [illegible] with the world—the very mystery of his whereabouts—had taken strong hold of her imagination. Of the quarrel which had preceded Hugh's departure she had made her own version. That he should have come back on the very night when the [illegible] she had dreaded had been so nearly consummated, seemed now to have a especial and an appealing significance.

Presently she rose, slipped on the red kimono, and, taking a key from the pocket of her gown, stole from the room. She ascended a stairway and unlocked the door of a while, bare at the where the moonlight poured through a skylight in the roof upon an unfinished statue. In this statue she had begun to fashion, in the imagined figure of Hugh, her conception of the prodigal son not the battered and husk filled wayfarer of the parable, but a figure of character and [illegible] erring through youthful pride and spirit. The unfinished clay no eyes had seen, for these walls bounded her especial domain.

When Hugh went shamefacedly in, the stair from the library the artificial gaze that had tingled to his finger tips had faded. The pulse of [illegible] the [illegible] of all the faculties of eye and hand that his icy bath had given him were yielding. The penalties he had dislodged were returning [illegible] [illegible]. He was rapidly becoming drunk.

He groped his way to his room, turned out the light, threw himself fully dressed upon the bed and slept the deep sleep of deferred intoxication.

The Deserter.

"Do you desire to have it understood," asked the judge, addressing the lady who wanted the divorce, "that your husband deserted you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Please tell the court as concisely as you can how he deserted you."

"Two months after we had completed our wedding trip he scolded me because he thought I was extravagant in the matter of getting clothes, and I went home to my people."

"Yes. Proceed."

"Well, I waited and waited and waited for him to come and beg me to return to him, and he never did."—Chicago Record-Herald.

KNEW HIS BUSINESS.

The Little Boy Was Thoroughly Posted on the Elevator.

"Little boy," exclaimed the portly lady, "you ought to be at school instead of trying to work a lift."

"I'm not trying to work it," was the answer. "I am working it, and if you wish to ride I shall be happy to accommodate you. So far as any obligation to be at school is concerned, allow me to remind you that this is a legal holiday, and I am exempt from attendance at an institution where, I am pleased to say, I am at the head of my class."

"You have no business trying to work that lift, anyhow."

"For what reason?"

"Because you are too young to know anything about it."

"Madam, allow me to reassure you. This lift is worked by hydraulic pressure, the principle relied on being that water exerts pressure in proportion to the height of a column rather than in proportion to the diameter. In making use of this characteristic water is admitted into a cylinder, the pressure being regulated by the use of valves and a stable equilibrium being made possible by an ingenious system of counterpoises. I could go further into the minutiae of this particular machine, which of course has its variations from other models," he added as she gasped in astonishment, "but I doubt if you could follow the technical terms whose use an accurate description would necessitate, but I wish to assure you that if, after what I have said, you think you know more about this lift than I do you are at perfect liberty to step in and take its management out of my hands."—Pearson's.

STOPPED THE NOISE.

A Chemist's Suggestion to a Maker of Prussian Blue.

The great German chemist, Liebig, related that when he was a young man a manufacturer of prussian blue who was showing him through the works drew his attention to the deafening noise made by certain comminuting and mixing machines. These machines consisted of large iron mortars in which iron pestles were actuated by machinery. The pestles pounded the materials to a fine condition and mixed them. On Liebig's suggesting that some means ought to be devised to prevent the terrible din made by the machines the manufacturer told him that it was a singular fact that the more noise the pestles made the better was the blue produced. It happens that in making prussian blue iron is a necessary constituent of the mixture, a fact that did not seem to be thoroughly appreciated by the manufacturer. He was therefore much surprised when Liebig told him that the iron which was necessary to produce the color was rubbed off his machinery, the most extravagant way to supply it. He understood for the first time, moreover, why it was that the greater the noise from the friction of the pestles in the mortars the better the blue produced. He thus learned in an expensive way that it was better manufacturing to put iron into the mixture than to grind it off high priced machinery.—Frederick J. Maywood in American Industries.

Complimentary.

Intending to visit a small village in Scotland, Archbishop Tait arranged to have his letters addressed to the local postoffice, which happened to be also the hamlet's general store. On the day of his arrival the prelate entered the shop and made inquiry if there was anything for the archbishop of Canterbury.

"Maybe you'll be that person yersel?" the storekeeper suggested without replying to the archbishop's question.

"Quite right," said Dr. Tait, "I am."

"Weel," added the tradesman, "I have a son in a shop in London, and he told me he aince gaed to St. Paul's cathedral to hear ye preach, and he was verra weel satisfied wi' ye."—London Home Journal.

An English View.

The slang of New York has its origin, of course, in the [illegible]. It is the climate that has produced the terrible doctrine and practice of "hustle" and for people living in a wild chase of competition, always in a [illegible] hurry and in the midst of a [illegible] language has to be pitched at high tension with the circumstances. There is no time to [illegible] any place in which an ordinary quiet phrase would be able to reach your ear. Language to produce any effect at all must be as quick and as short as all else. A phrase that has not the properties of dynamite goes unheeded.—Max Beerbohm in London Saturday Gazette.

A Diplomatist at Home.

"Mrs. Rawson has a dozen dresses handsomer than the one good one I've got," a young wife complained to her husband, who, a domestic diplomatist, merely remarked: "Of course. A homely woman like that needs plenty of rich gowns to draw attention from her face. Heaven cannot heighten your charms, my dear!"—London Mail.

Helpful Child.

Caller—My, what a big girl you are getting to be! You'll soon be able to help your mother about the house. Ethel—Oh, I do that already. Whenever she says "For goodness' sake, get out of my way!" I do it.

A Deduction.

Maude—How old is Grace? May—At least twenty-five. Maude—How do you know? May—I heard her say that no girl ought to marry before she was twenty-six.

JAPANESE HUSBANDS.

In Rising Sun Country Matrimony Is Built on Equal Rights Plan.

The recent outburst of race antagonism in a Pacific coast city, directed against an American girl for marrying a Japanese, lends interest to the public assertion that "Japanese husbands are the best in the world," made by Mrs. Takamine, wife of the eminent Japanese chemist and scientist, for many years a resident of New York city. Mrs. Takamine was Miss Hitch, daughter of one of the old southern families, before she met the doctor and is a stanch defender of international marriages.

"No woman in the world is more protected and better cared for than the wife of a Japanese," she said. "The Japanese husband is considerate, faithful and patient. It is his philosophy, his religion. He is a home loving man, and naturally he is thoughtful of the little attentions to his home and family. Every woman loves these little attentions. Plenty of women prefer kind words and the thought that they are appreciated to diamond rings. If a Japanese sees some little piece of jewelry, ornament or painting he thinks his wife would like he takes it home to her. It is this sort of thing, the fact that he has thought of her during the day, that makes her happy.

"Contrast the American and the Japanese husband under the same circumstances. An American husband comes home from business tired, nervous and hungry. Something has happened to the oven or the cook has allowed the roast to burn. He is likely to become very impatient over the delay or the spoiled dinner. Under similar circumstances does a Japanese husband lose his temper? Indeed he does not. He says pleasantly out of consideration for his wife's feelings, 'Well, perhaps there are eggs in the house, and after all, they might be better for us to eat.'

"If there is anything that will increase rather than diminish this consideration for his wife it is the fact that Japanese women are just beginning to go into business like their American sisters. With this change the men will realize too that should they not treat their wives well the women can leave them and earn their own livelihood. So far as such threats, I believe, have been put into practice, but it has been [illegible] for it is born and bred and [illegible] in the Japanese men as part of their religion to treat their wives with respect and courteous thoughtfulness.

"In Japan matrimony is [illegible] a sort of [illegible] husband and wife have each [illegible] and his and her [illegible] rights and privileges [illegible] encroaching on the other's well defined rights."

IN THE NURSERY.

A baby's eyes should be shaded from a strong light, especially from bright sunlight.

Hot cloths applied to the feet and to the stomach [illegible] much more quickly than internal doses.

Violent noises which startle a child should be avoided, and an infant should under no circumstances be tossed in the [illegible] as this treatment [illegible].

The tiny soft brushes so often given as presents to babies are useless, because everything used in the child's mouth should be burned.

A baby should be given pure cold water two or three times a day. Its mouth should be [illegible] several times a day with [illegible] water, a teaspoonful to a cup. This will prevent the mouth and gums from becoming sore and keep them sweet and clean.

The Persistent Social Aspirant.

Persistency is the bulwark of the woman determined to be recognized socially, and she applies it without stint to the smallest detail of each undertaking, tugging, hauling and pushing until every part is accomplished. So, too, do some women pursue an eligible man, never heeding the thousand and one evidences he gives of indifference, but designing artfully around each sign of "inattention" and bobbing up in his path at all turns. It is useless to argue that they do not gain their end and aim, for many times they do. [illegible] society yields to the persistency of this type of woman or the man is safely harnessed to her triumphal car.

Charlotte Bonbonniere.

An amusing [illegible] is in the shape of a very [illegible] charlotte russe and about the [illegible] dainty. The top of the [illegible] lifts away, disclosing the candy box.

A fun loving hostess bought souvenirs in this form for all the guests at a luncheon. They were filled with goodies and passed by the [illegible] looking until [illegible] like a second dessert course. The discovery of their true nature caused much surprise and laughter.

What Money Can't Buy.

Money can't buy everything. There are no advices [illegible] market; you wouldn't trade the look in your boy's eyes when he greets you at night for a million dollars of anybody's money, and if you keep a well furnished mind you can go into it any time you like as you would into a child's playground and amuse yourself watching your thoughts play leapfrog with each other.

LOOKING AND SEEING

There Is a Marked Difference Between These Two Acts.

THE POWER OF OBSERVATION

It Should Be Cultivated Even In the Most Ordinary Things—A Faculty That Is Possessed by All, but That Is Developed by the Few.

It is the hope and desire of all parents that their children shall make some sort of a mark in the world when they grow up. They do not in the majority of cases expect that their offspring will become famous and make names that will live for ages, but they cherish the thought that they will be successful men and women in some profession or business. That is the keynote—that success shall be their portion.

Yet it is a fact that most parents neglect or pay very little attention to one part of the child's education which is of the highest importance. They do not train the perceptive faculties.

Power of observation will help you more than anything else in your struggle for existence, and yet there are comparatively few people who are keen observers. One small fact will prove this latter statement. The man who observes everything, he who sees everything he looks at, is singled out either as an inquisitive person or a clever one, and this shows that he is an exception.

It is easy to give instances of this lack of perception even in the ordinary things of life. Some years ago an artist engaged in a London firm of printers had to draw an advertisement in which the central figure was a cock in the act of crowing. Nothing seemed easier, but when he set to work the artist found himself confronted by a difficulty—does the cock show its tongue prominently when it crows? Every one of the hundred men employed by the firm had seen a cock crow scores of times, yet not one of them could answer the question. The artist had to go to a friend who kept fowls and chase the poor rooster round and round the yard until it crowed.

A schoolmaster wishing to test the perception of his boys, asked them how many times they had seen a cow or pictures of that animal and found, as he had expected, that all the boys had seen the creature more times than they could remember. Then he offered to give small prizes to the boys who could correctly answer this question: "Are a cow's ears above, below, in front of or behind its horns?" Only two boys gained prizes, and their answers were guesswork.

Now sit down and test yourself in some such simple manner. You have all seen a horse "down." Can you describe how it rises? Does it get up on its fore feet first and then on its hind feet, or does it kneel first, then get on its hind feet and finally on its fore feet?

However, you need not confine yourself to the animal kingdom in testing your perceptive faculties. Many subjects will suggest themselves to you.

As an excuse for this want of observation it is often urged that "a man can't know everything," but the excuse is a bad one. There is a great difference between knowing little or nothing and knowing everything. When the faculty has been trained it requires no more effort to note the points of the object looked at than it does to glance at that same object and come away none the wiser.

The chances of success in life are on the side of the man who knows certain things because he has learned about them by using his senses instead of having to go to a book for all that he wishes to know. Books are indispensable, as there are so many things which are [illegible] the range of our [illegible] but wherever possible we should use our senses to acquire knowledge at first hand.

The [illegible] men who cannot [illegible] built up substantial businesses. They have made use of the power possessed by all, but cultivated by very few.

The perceptive faculty must be trained during childhood and youth. After the completion of the twentieth year very little progress can be made. A grown [illegible] to develop his powers of observation [illegible] satisfactory degree. Youth is full of energy, and that is the time to inculcate the lesson that we should see all that our eyes rest upon.

It should be the object of every parent to teach his child to note every object that comes in his way. When out for a walk in a park the child should be told to observe the shapes of the leaves on the different trees, the paling of the [illegible] toward the under part of the leaf, and so on, and should be told that when asked a question on the subject he must be prepared to say that it is so, not that he thinks it is.

All children have inquiring minds, and after a walk or two coupled with such instructions as we have mentioned you will find the child making great progress and acquiring a quality that will be invaluable in after life.

One of the methods adopted by Houdin, the conjurer, for quickening the perception of his son was to make him walk rapidly past a shop window of a store in which a number of articles were displayed and then write down a list of the objects noticed. At first only half a dozen articles were perceived during the moment occupied in passing the store or window, but after having done it once a day for a month the boy was able to make a list of forty objects.

"Well," he was saying, "we were jogging along down under when a thunderstorm overtook us, and the very first flash of lightning struck the fork amidships and bored a hole as big as my leg right down through the bottom of the vessel."

"And she foundered, of course."

"No, sir. The water began rushing in, and she would have foundered, but there came a second flash, and a bolt struck the fore to'gallant mast. It was cut off near the top, turned bottom end up, and as it came down it entered the hole and plugged it up as tight as a drum. When we got down to drydock we simply sawed off either end and left the plug in the planks."

FOREIGN POLICE.

Dress of the Patrolmen of London, Paris and Berlin.

London patrolmen carry no clubs. Attached to the middle of the belt behind is a dark lantern. The cuffs of their coats have vertical stripes, blue and white, signifying rank and distinguished service. During the frequent showers and rains they wear little waterproof capes. Their silent regulation of street traffic by hand signal is a realization of perfection.

In Paris the ordinary patrolmen wear blue caps and coats and in summer white duck trousers. They carry short swords, rather as an emblem of authority, but in extreme danger use the flat side as a club. In a downpour of rain the Paris policeman hangs his cap on a hook in the back side of his belt and draws over his head the hood of a short blue cape of heavy cloth. This hooded cape is called a capuchin and in its longer form, reaching to the knees, is used by civilians as well in cold or rainy weather. Accordingly at such times the streets of Paris seem to be alive with hooded monks. The London plan for controlling vehicles is used on the Paris boulevards. The policemen detailed for such duty wear white gloves and signal with white clubs.

FOLLOWED HER LEAD.

The Chinese Cook Knew Which Eggs Should Be Discarded.

"Chinese need to be taught to be more self reliant," said the woman who employs a Chinese cook. "Yesterday I ordered my cook to make a pudding for dinner, stopping a minute to see if he followed my instructions, for I had taught him to make this particular pudding. He had seen me smell the eggs before putting them into a bowl, and he began by putting the first egg to his nose. He seemed on the right road, so I left the kitchen for a minute.

"Returning, I discovered that he had used five eggs instead of three, as I had taught him. Taking him to task for not following my instructions, he answered, 'Yes, three here (pointing to the bowl), two here (indicating where he had thrown the others). Same as you.'

"It dawned on me that when I had taught him to make the pudding I had found the second and third eggs that I had broken to be bad and had thrown both away. He had simply done what he had seen me do—after smelling the second and third egg he had thrown them away."

A Nabob.

"Rich as a nabob" is an expression not infrequently heard, but why a "nabob" should thus be associated with wealth and who he was precisely is not so generally known. Under the great moguls the provinces of India were administered by deputies known by the designation of "nawab," who commonly amassed much money and lived in great splendor. Thereafter and the title continued under British rule in the orient, but gradually the word became corrupted into "nabob" and was applied generally to all natives who had grown rich. More afterward it was bestowed [illegible] in a definite sense—upon Europeans who, having made large fortunes in India, returned home and spent their money in a luxurious and ostentatious way.—London Scraps.

FAMOUS BULLS.

Some From the House of Commons and From the Pulpit.

The house of commons, as might have been expected, has contributed a fair share to a very amusing collection of "bulls." It was in one of the debates of that body that the late Colonel Saunderson described Eastern Roumelia as "man enough to take her stand" in defense of a certain threatened right.

An Irish member of parliament once declared that of the outrages reported from Ireland three-quarters were exaggerated and half had no foundation in fact, a statistical computation that reminds one of another Irish member of parliament who declared excitedly to a group of fellow members, "I want to convince you that there isn't any truth in half the lies they are telling about Ireland."

The biography of Dean Hook recalls a certain minor canon who used to preach at the cathedral when Hook was a boy at Winchester school. In one of his sermons there occurred the striking reflection that "what is impossible can never be and very seldom comes to pass."

Another discourse was long remembered for its pathetic lamentation on the degeneracy of the age. "O tempora! O mores! What times we live in! Little boys and girls run about the streets cursing and swearing before they can either walk or talk!" But the Church of England has no monopoly of these violent contrasts, for it was at a City Temple meeting not many years ago that a speaker exclaimed, "I find my time is already gone. Therefore I will keep within it."

POSED THE DEAD MAN.

Scheme of the Gamblers In Crockford's House In London.

Crockford, the proprietor of a well known London gambling house, was made to play a queer role after he was dead. When one of Crockford's horses was poisoned just before the Derby the misfortune brought on an attack of apoplexy, which proved fatal within forty-eight hours. Now many of Crockford's friends had staked large sums on another of the gambler's horses, which was a favorite for the Oaks and which was disqualified by the death of the owner. Only the people in the gambling house knew of Crockford's death, and it was resolved to keep it a secret until after the race.

The servants were bribed and sworn to secrecy, and the conspirators on the day after the night upon which Crockford died had the body placed in a chair at a window, so that people returning from the track [illegible] the gambler sitting there. He was fixed up to look as lifelike as possible and through the window and partially concealed from view by the curtains looked so natural that no one of the great crowd which came cheering by the house when on their return from seeing Crockford's horse win the Oaks suspected the trick.

The next day it was announced that Crockford was dead, but it was years before the true story leaked out.—Westminster Gazette.

Fish and Game Protection.

The first efforts to protect fish or game in America were made by Maine in 1843, when a law was passed requiring the governor of that state to appoint fish commissioners.

In 1852 these commissioners were put in control of moose and deer. This is really the beginning of the warden system in the United States. And Maine was the pioneer in game and fish protection. To this day Maine is well supplied with game, and that game pays the people of the state (at estimate on good authority) about $13,[illegible] annually. The evolution which has taken place looking to fish and game protection in the New England states especially has been slowly going on for fifty years, but in the west and south so lavishly endowed by nature with game and fish that protection dates back to a very recent origin.—"Sport in Print."

Owing to the steadily increasing cost of fine Ceylon teas such as are sold to the public under the brand

VALUABLE FARM SOLD

Jammesson Farm Near Town Sold To Mrs. L. V. Armstrong

A business deal in farm lands was put through on Saturday last by the parties interested in the transaction, whereby, M. M. Jameson disposed of his quarter section farm, the N.E of 10-51-7, about four miles north west of Vermilion, to Mrs. L. V. Armstrong of town. The sale includes cattle, horses and crop as well as the land and the purchase price was $8000.00. Messrs. Ira and Cecil Armstrong, sons of Mrs. L. V. Armstrong, are on the place.

Mr. Jameson will remain to cut the crops when he returns to his former home in the United States, Sioux City, Iowa, to join his family. He also has some valuable silver interests in Colorado which require his attention.

Mr. Jameson states that he is well satisfied with this country, has done remarkably well during his residence on this side and had it not been for the inability of his family to join him in Alberta he would have made his permanent abode here.

Lloydminster and Vermilion Play Second Match of Season

The return cricket match played here Thursday between Lloydminster and Vermilion teams resulted in a win [illegible] innings for the visitors [illegible] some margin of [illegible] was cloudy and [illegible] cricket.

Vermilion was first to bat and gave promise of putting together a good score. Cooper and Bryden were batting freely and runs coming fast when the former was caught in the long field [illegible] 18. At this stage the score stood [illegible] for 5 wickets, but the last [illegible] wickets added only [illegible] runs and the innings closed for 39. Bryden's 18 were made in splendid form, [illegible] bowling him on a difficult ball.

Lloydminster's innings was a brilliant one and the score of 144 gives an idea of the batting ability of the several players, no less than seven of the team reaching doubles. Wicks, with a well made 34 to his credit was finally caught off Cooper in a good catch by Bryden at cover. Rendell with 22 not out to his credit batted merrily, but was badly missed at [illegible] In fact during the innings the fielding was on the loose side.

With [illegible] runs to make to save an innings defeat, the locals went in for their second innings and when the last wicket fell had succeeded in compiling the respectable score of 94 runs. The leading feature was Fox's 31 made by [illegible] Thornton 18, Chapman 9. Williams 9, Gilland [illegible] and Bryden [illegible] materially aided in [illegible]

The Picture and the Lover

By LESTER GREY.

Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

To begin with, she was not a model, but it had pleased the young artist to give the picture that name. Perhaps it was his belief of what his mother would have been had she not died young.

In real life she was a quiet little person, just over the brink of the half-way of fifteen, a year's difference only down the one side or the other. Her hat of crushed—or hidden—brown turns in the road, and she had not glasses.

It was the nose of the large eyes I adored. Large eyes, I mean, having the appearance of being somewhat too large for the face, and placed "wide apart." Eyes of a deep, dusky violet, and they were immense in her small, pale face. The complexion was of the transparent order, and when excitement or other emotion caused the blood to flow to the surface it was a delicate pink, like the heart of a wild rose. Her hair was brown, and there were times when it had a tendency to curl, but she usually kept it brushed straight back from her forehead and temples, and fastened it in a coil at the back of her head. Her mouth was large and generous, and her teeth were white and even. She was not tall, but was of a graceful carriage, and her hands and feet were small and well shaped.

Her name was Ethel Dale, and she was the daughter of a widow who lived in a small cottage on the outskirts of the village. Mrs. Dale was a widow of the better class, and had been left in comfortable circumstances by her husband, who had been a merchant in the village. Ethel was her only child, and the mother's whole life was centered in her daughter. Mrs. Dale was a woman of few friends, and lived a very quiet life, devoting herself entirely to her daughter and her household affairs.

Ethel had been born and brought up in the village, and had attended the village school. She was a favorite with her schoolmates, and was looked up to by the younger children. She was a bright girl, and made rapid progress in her studies. She was fond of reading, and had read many books that were far above her years. She was also fond of music, and had learned to play the piano and sing. She had a sweet voice, and sang with much feeling and expression.

Ethel had many admirers among the young men of the village, but she had never shown any preference for any of them. She was shy and reserved in her manner, and seemed to prefer the society of her mother and books to that of young men. She was not indifferent to the attentions of the young men, but she did not encourage them. She was waiting for the right one to come along, and she knew that he would come some day.

Ethel had always been fond of drawing, and had made many sketches of the scenery around the village. She had also made a few sketches of the people she knew, and had shown them to her mother, who had praised them highly. Ethel had never had any lessons in drawing, but had picked up the art herself. She had a natural talent for it, and her sketches showed that she had the makings of a good artist.

One day a young man came to the village and took up his quarters at the only hotel. He was a stranger to the people, and they looked upon him with curiosity. He was a handsome young man, and he soon became a favorite with the people. He was an artist, and had come to the village to paint some of the scenery in the neighborhood. He was a quiet, reserved young man, and did not mingle much with the people. He spent most of his time painting and sketching.

One day he met Ethel Dale, and was struck by her beauty. He had never seen a more beautiful face, and he was anxious to paint her picture. He asked her if she would allow him to do so, and she consented. She went to his room at the hotel, and he began to paint her picture. He worked on it for several days, and then asked her if she would allow him to paint her picture in a boat on the river. She consented, and he took her out in a boat, and

FOR THE BENEFIT OF ALL THE PEOPLE

(Family Herald and Weekly Star)

Governor Hughes of New York State, [illegible] was asked to open the Roscoe Conkling Park in [illegible] [illegible] Roscoe Conkling [illegible] peroration, expressing the wish that these words—"for the use and benefit of all the people"—would be written over the door of every office in Albany. He feared that many institutions intended for the use and benefit of the people are [illegible] and he further [illegible] desire to see every public servant, when he takes the oath of office, wear this sentiment upon his heart.

There are others nearer home than Albany and [illegible] of other people than those of New York that would be the better for adopting this sentiment as a part of their working religion. We are apt to lose sight of old-fashioned precepts and motives in these cynical times when we have all grown so Worldly-wise. We know better now. We smile at the simple good faith and unswerving devotion to duty which governed the actions of our fathers. They were good men, but they would not do in these brisk, up-to-date days when "duty has become a disagreeable something to be shirked and the public servant who regards himself as "for the use and benefit of all the people" is looked upon by most of his confreres as either a "freak" or a fool.

Yet it was these men for whom duty was elevated to the level of a religion and who would have been indignant at any other conception of a public office than that presented by Governor Hughes, who laid the foundation of all that we value most in this country and on this continent, and who established a record for achievement in the face of adverse conditions and for the practical patriotism which makes a nation great, that we are by no means likely to equal in this artificial and self-seeking age. When we have hewn a home out of a wilderness, when we have carried civilization across an unknown sea and established it on an unknown coast, when we have multiplied by unknown numbers the opportunities of development for the entire human race, when we have scattered the seeds of liberty throughout a world, then we may begin to talk. These have all been done by men devoted to duty. How shall we match them we who are in such great measure, and especially in the persons of our public leaders, devoted to self.

We have the theory yet that "a public office is a public trust," and that the sole business of a man elected to office is to work for "the benefit of all the people." The office-holder does not tell us in so many words that he is working for the benefit chiefly of one of the people—viz., himself, or, worse still, that he seeks to benefit this favored one most effectually by [illegible] appears to have [illegible] He accepts, [illegible] exactly like [illegible] and [illegible] tenance of the fiction. We do not [illegible] also tells us that he is quite as [illegible] as we all know he is.

But who is so belated in his [illegible] of modern affairs as still to have faith in this theory? We form our calculations of what Parliament will do—what any [illegible] our municipal councillors will do—on the theory that we are all certain and that even these single-placed public representatives will not forget their own interests. [illegible] Who expects a [illegible] gard of the possibilities [illegible] as a party weapon? Yet in both cases these men are not regarding themselves as solely for "the use and benefit of all the people."

It is perhaps, this cynical attitude toward truth and honor and good faith which does as much as anything else toward denying us the advantage of these virtues. If we insisted more firmly upon public service by public men, we would probably get it as easily as we now get betrayal and neglect. There is a sense in which public men will give the people what they want. If they find the people anxious to have public spirited service, there are many men in public life—and there would be more—who would prefer to earn their confidence by supplying just that. But when they find that the people do not expect this sort of thing from their representatives that they are decidedly skeptical about its genuineness when it is offered and that a large section of them actually prefer a lower standard of public morals which permits them to hope that there may be "something in it for the boy" why, these very same well intentioned public men, desirous of keeping their positions and the renown that goes with them, will fall in with the popular idea.

Those who fancy that they stand to gain by joining in a conspiracy to rob the people, often "fool" themselves very severely. They are playing the game with the [illegible] band artists in the country and it is a commonplace of the underworld that it is the usually honest fellow who for once tries to get a dishonest profit, that is most easily [illegible] At all events, the [illegible] vast majority of the people. Most of them never get a chance to win by it and in many cases the winnings are too petty to be considered. We have seen men sell themselves, politically, for offices whose total earnings would not keep a day laborer going, while the moral degradation attached to their acceptance would make a veteran criminal feel ashamed of himself. As for the others and many others it is to them straight loss, though they have the comfort of saving their consciences.

Nor is the loss to be measured wholly in dollars and cents. The loss in moral stamina throughout the country because of this far flung mesh of "graft" ruins many a boy and defeats the efforts of many a moral institution. The churches feel its paralysing power. The schools find that their most aggressive teaching fails of vitiating ability because their pupils [illegible] a "wiser" scheme [illegible] The example [illegible] successful "grafter" is [illegible] in a community. It poisons every man and boy who [illegible] under its malignant spell. But if the people will they can [illegible] Governor Hughes advice and [illegible] the use and benefit of [illegible] people over their public [illegible] on the minds—if not the hearts—of their public men. They can compel the adoption of this high standard. But, to do so, they must cease to leave politics to the politicians, and must assume themselves the full responsibilities of citizenship.

Tofield Pleased

The people of Tofield and district surrounding are well pleased with the prospects which have arisen of having a branch of the G. T. P. running south [illegible] Tofield to Calgary. The G T P [illegible] determined to run their Calgary [illegible] Tofield. The preliminary [illegible] was completed last week [illegible] that location was immediately began after the engineers reached [illegible] An excellent [illegible] between these two points. The connection between the main and branch lines is being made at the east end of the Tofield siding. The wye has been laid out on Mr J. W. Cook[illegible] property which lies just east of the siding. The new line here takes a curve to the south and south west, re-crosses the public road running south and heads south west over Driscoll & Knight's subdivision, over J. W. Cookson's C P R quarter, over Craft, Leo A. Gallinger's coal lands on the ridge south of Tofield and then away on an almost air line towards Camrose. The contract of grading from Tofield to Camrose is in the hands of J. D. McArthur, who, it is understood has shipped his outfit from Medicine Hat to this point and who will begin work immediately on arrival. Already one of the engineers who will have charge of a residency, is on the ground, Mr. Graham. The company's right of way agent, Mr. Geo. H. Pope, arrived last Friday and on Monday of this week began purchasing the right of way, making several purchases on Monday forenoon.

The decision of the company to build their branch line to Calgary from this point on their main line will mean much to Tofield. This point will be made the northern terminal of the road. It will necessitate the building of a round house to accommodate a few engines and the putting up of shops to handle the repairs. A water tank will also be established at this point. This will mean that an additional number of families will have their abode here.

The building of the branch line from Tofield will also mean much to Tofield from another point of view. At this Junction all the freight handled on the branch line and other lines offshooting from it and destined for delivery west, and also east along this division, will pass through Tofield, and similarly all freight from the Far East and the coast provinces destined for delivery all through the middle southern west will be set off for transhipment at, or at any rate, pass through Tofield. This fact, coupled with the certainty of the tremendous amount of traffic which is bound to be handled by the new transcontinental, will mean that Tofield will become an important point on the company's system. There is no doubt that the company will build branches in the years to come leading out from the south branch and tapping rich farming districts in central Alberta and Saskatchewan. The main branch to Calgary will be continued on south to the boundary and on into the States under a different charter. This will make the G. T. P. a strong factor in the immigrant traffic and will make the company a keen competitor with the C. P. R. in the business of bringing settlers and their effects into Canada.

It is understood that two elevator companies have made application to the G. T. P. for sites at Tofield. A few days ago a party of surveyors laid out a third siding here and also the sites for the elevators. It is also understood that the elevators will be built this fall to accommodate this season's crops.

Wainwright is making a strong kick against the building of the branch line south from the main line and putting up a keen opposition to its running south from Ryley. We presume that when the good Wainwright people learn that the road is not to run from Ryley but from Tofield, they will withdraw their opposition as it will doubtless be without avail. We understand, however, that the company has not given up all intention of running a branch south from Wainwright, but will construct one to connect with that running south from Tofield at some point, presumably midway between here and Calgary. The buffalo town will undoubtedly yet congratulate itself upon securing a line running south to the great regions yet unpeopled in central southern Alberta, and to the great metropolis of Calgary. Everybody from everywhere will at some time want to go and see the wonderful buffalo.—Tofield Standard

HON. CHAS. MURPHY IMPRESSED

Secretary of State has Returned to Ottawa from an Extensive Trip

Ottawa, August 5.—Hon. Charles Murphy, secretary of state for Canada, returned yesterday from his western trip. He left Ottawa on June 13th and went through to the Pacific coast. During his tour Mr. Murphy delivered twenty addresses, all but one of which were of a non-partisan character. He returns in excellent health and spirits and much impressed by the wonderful development of the west. The minister has long been regarded as an orator of distinction, and his recent series of addresses has widely increased his reputation.

WILL REST TOGETHER

Last winter the question of removing the scattered bodies of the victims of the Frog Lake massacre and interring them together was taken up with the Government and we are pleased to announce that we are in receipt of a letter from Mr. W. C. Gilchrist, of Woodville, Ont., stating that the bodies of his son and of the others have been re-interred in one plot at Frog Lake. The work was done under the direction of Sgt. Hall, of the Mounted Police, the principal part of the work being done by L. G. Lovell, who sent Mr. Gilchrist a buckle and a button found in his son's grave. Eight bodies now lie at Frog Lake in one plot which has been cleared of brush and surrounded by a neat fence. The bodies of the two priests were removed to the mission at Onion Lake some time ago.

Early one morning in April, 1885, the whites numbering eleven, residing at Frog Lake, were taken prisoners by the Indians before they knew that the uprising had actually taken place. Tom Quinn, Indian Agent, and Chas. Gouin, a carpenter, were shot in front of the Interpreter's house, into which their bodies were thrown and burned, very little of either man being recovered. On hearing the shots at the village, fire was at once opened on the rest of the prisoners who were being taken to the Indian camp. J. A. Gowanlock, who was building the mill and J. Delaney, farming instructor, were walking with their wives when they were killed and the two priests were also shot while ministering to the other victims. Williscraft and Gilchrist, employed at the mill, Geo. Dill, a trader, and Harry Quinn, agency blacksmith ran for the bush but the latter was the only one to succeed. The other prisoner, W. B. Cameron, H. B. C. clerk, had gone to the store with an Indian and also escaped being killed. The bodies of Delaney, Gowanlock and the priests were placed in the Roman Catholic church, afterwards burned down. On the arrival of the troops about June the four bodies were dug out of the ruins by the volunteers and buried but the others had to be buried where they lay. Sgt. Hall has always taken great care of the graves and kept them looking neat so that they were readily identified and now all lay side by side, together with the body of Const. Cowan who was killed near Fort Pitt and was interred where found by the soldiers.—Sask. Herald.

Regina, Aug. 9—E. C. Corbens, local piano agent, went for a drive yesterday with two little children and has not since been heard from. Much anxiety prevails and the country is being searched.

Mad With the Heat

Winnipeg, Aug. 9—Regarding the report sent out from here today the crop of Western Canada will only be an average one and less than last year, it is clear that there is here terminological inexactitude, for the crop of last year was below the average. This is the dog days, the dull August month, when correspondents are stuck to earn space, and it will be well to discount heavy stories regarding the crop of this country whether of the "knock" or "boost" variety.

Auctioneer Berry's sale Saturday at Woods' corralls went off very successfully, everything being sold and fair prices realized.

W. Bryden, one and a half miles due west of town, will start cutting his oats Saturday and a week from today puts his binder in the wheat. He has 50 acres in crop, 15 of which is oats and the balance of 35 acres wheat. It is said to be the finest wheat crop for miles around and Mr Bryden has refused tempting offers for the crop as it stands but prefers to garner it himself.

O. Baker has 115 acres broken on his homestead, 85 of which is in crop 55 acres being wheat. It will be a heavy yield from appearances.

LORD KITCHENER A FIELD MARSHAL

Appointed To Succeed The Duke Of Connaught

London, Aug. 7. Lord Kitchener, commander of the British forces in India has been appointed to succeed the Duke of Connaught as inspector general of the Mediterranean forces which post the Duke of Connaught resigned on the grounds that it was a waste of public funds to maintain him in a position which was useless and also superfluous in every practical sense. The office was created for the duke at the King's suggestion. It is said that the King disliked the idea of court his brother was establishing and arranged for his honorable punishment, which the duke met by resigning.

The appointment of Lord Kitchener is coincident with added importance being attached to the post. The Duke of Connaught in an official announcement says: "In view of new developments in the organization the Mediterranean command assumes considerable importance and will be taken up by Lord Kitchener with the object of giving it its proper place in the schemes of imperial defence."

It is understood as a result of the imperial defence conference, which is now sitting, it is intended to co-ordinate all the military forces of the empire and place Lord Kitchener at the head of an organization having the imperial army for its special care. As a preparation for this work he has gained valuable experience in India. On vacating the Indian command in September Lord Kitchener will go to Japan to represent Great Britain at the grand manoeuvres in November, and afterwards make a tour of Canada, Australia and New Zealand to study the military organization and consult with the colonial powers concerning them.

Lord Kitchener, who is just past 59 years of age, is the youngest field marshal in the history of Great Britain. Lord Roberts was 63 years of [illegible] when he was raised to the rank and Lord Wolseley was [illegible]

...began a barcarole, but the music wandered away through insensible variations into a moving minor, a composition of his own.

It broke off suddenly at a dog's fierce snarl from the yard and the rattle of a thrown pebble. Immediately a knock came at the door, and a man entered.

"Don't stop," said the new comer. "I've dropped in for only a minute. That's an ill tempered little brute of yours. If I were you I'd get rid of him."

Harry Sanderson laid the violin carefully in its case and shut the lid before he answered. ...

"I wasn't aware of the history." Harry laughed a little—a distant laugh.

... know how you do it. It was always so with you, even at college. You could ... and yet be popular too. ... there was never a jamboree complete without you ...

"That is a long time ago," said Harry.

"More than four years. Four years and a month tomorrow, since that last evening of college. Yet I imagine it will be longer before we forget it."

Harry did not speak. An odd confusion blurred his vision. Perhaps to cover this, he crossed the room to a small private safe which stood open in the corner, in which he kept his tithes ...

Sidney McCall (Mary McNeil Fenollosa), the author of "Red Horse Hill," etc., when scarcely more than a girl was living in another part of Japan when the late Lafcadio Hearn began his studies of that country. Independently she, too, was absorbing the mystic influences of beauty, and in a different form, that of verse, was shaping her impressions into concrete structure. A modest little volume of poems called "Out of the East" is thought by many of her friends to contain some of her finest work. Lafcadio Hearn, who later became one of her valued friends, was delighted with these poems. In her home in Tokyo, with its garden where grew pansies, magnolias and "moon flowers," Mrs. Fenollosa wrote her first novel, "Truth Dexter," a book which had a great success. "The Breath of the Gods" was the outcome of her impressions of the situation in Japan and Russia just before the crisis, but it was written after her return to America in the "big, low workroom of her southern home in Alabama, which looks out upon a garden where the blossoming cherry mingles its petals with those of the rose and the jasmine." Kobinata, or little Sunshine hill, so called after the Japanese home, contains much that is best in beauty both of the east and west. Here also was written Mrs. Fenollosa's latest book, "Red Horse Hill."

Mrs. Fenollosa comes of an artistic family. Both her parents were writers. Her father, William Stoddard McNeil, was a poet of ability and a lover and

You Can Defy the SPRING FATIGUE

And nervous exhaustion, if you will make the blood rich and red by using DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Fatigue and weakness tell of weak, watery and impure blood.

Are you going to go through the usual suffering and discomfort of spring this year or take a hand in the matter of your health and build up the system?

It is for you to decide, for you know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blood, overcomes the fatigue, the weakness, the feelings of depression and discouragement which come with spring.

The nervous system is almost always exhausted in the spring. Your appetite fails because the nerves which control the appetite are exhausted, and so it is with digestion and the working of the other bodily organs.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest of spring medicine because it is the greatest of nerve restoratives. It forms the new red blood from which vigor, energy, and nerve force are created.

If you would restore the healthful glow to the complexion, sharpen the appetite, improve digestion, strengthen the action of the heart, revitalize the wasted brain and nerve cells and round out the wasted form you must use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. No imitation is just as good. There is no substitute but will disappoint.

Mrs. John P. Shannon, Whiteside, N. S., writes:—"I used four boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found it an excellent medicine. It has proved to be a splendid treatment for headache and a run-down nervous system."

QUAINT KISSING CUSTOMS.

Which Are Still Observed In England—A Newcastle Festival.

Among the quaint old kissing customs which England still retains is the one connected with an April festival that takes place at Hungerford. A penny tax is collected on that day by two well known residents of Hungerford, who are termed "tuttymen," and who go from door to door, each carrying a stave trimmed with gay ribbons. There is one very valuable perquisite attached to the office—a kiss from at least one lady in each family visited.

"Beating the bounds" is often associated with other remarkable customs, and at Maidenhead kissing is immemorially associated with it. Any lady, old or young, rich or poor, who is encountered on the road must have the alternative submitted to her of being either "bumped" or kissed.

Barge day is a festival which appears to be peculiar to Newcastle-on-Tyne. It seems to be akin to the practice of boundary beating, for the mayor and corporation, who, doubtless, in olden times used all to sail in barges, now embark upon four beflagged steamers and, followed by two old state barges, steam up the river, to claim the soil of the Tyne. But the piece de resistance is reserved for the landing. A big crowd is always waiting on the landing stage for the arrival of the "grave and reverend seigniors," and from the assembled multitude the mayor has the very delightful, but extremely invidious, privilege of selecting any young lady he pleases and giving her a kiss. For this osculatory performance she receives a golden sovereign.

It is said that there has never been a mayor of Newcastle who has not deemed this privilege cheap at the price. Nor is that all. No sooner has the mayor received his kiss and presented his sovereign than the sheriff, not to be outdone, also chooses a fair lady, kisses her and presents her with a sovereign. But the fair maid whom the mayor has kissed has still another gift to receive, and this time from the mayoress, who is bound by custom, whatever her feelings on the matter may be, to present with some ...

TWO REMARKABLE MEN

ENGLISHMAN AND GERMAN WHO WERE FAMOUS FOR WEALTH.

Charles Morrison of Basildon Passes Away at Age of 92, Leaving Sixty Millions Which He Had Piled Up by Investing, and Died a Shabby Old Man—Ernest Nister, the Art Publisher, Was Well Liked.

Two remarkable men have just died, one in England, the other in Germany. The German was the better known, for his name was on millions of books sold in this country.

The Englishman was Charles Morrison of Basildon, aged 92, who is said to have left $60,000,000.

"Until his death, few people outside the City and Berkshire village had ever heard of this man of millions," says The London Chronicle. "Inheriting a million from his father, who had come down from Scotland with only a few shillings in his pocket and who had built up this fortune as a 'general draper,' Charles Morrison, the son, had made it the business of his life to go on adding money to money, by investing here and investing there, by buying up properties of increasing value, by lending money on safe securities, to foreign Governments and great companies at home, by watching, quietly through the years, the steady way in which money breeds money and millions are multiplied by millions.

"With this almost incredible wealth Charles Morrison might have taken a great lead in public life. He might have become a ... as a great philanthropist. DEEP BORING.

The Problem of Tapping the Earth For Its Internal Heat.

Sir William Ramsay's recent suggestion that the internal heat of the earth might be tapped by means of a bore hole is not entirely new.

Indeed, experiments have actually been undertaken with that end in view.

One of the most important was carried out some years back by the German government at a place called ... in Silesia, where a depth of ... feet was reached. Of course the hole is of very modest dimensions—three feet six inches in diameter at the top, decreasing gradually to two feet six inches at the depth of one mile, at which it remains for the rest of the distance.

At La ... is a bore of a similar kind and nearly as deep constructed by the French government for experimental purposes, and another similar one exists near Stavropol, in southern Russia.

In each case it was the original intention to carry the bore much lower, but the expense was found to be prohibitive when contrasted with the prospective results. That is the worst of such works. After a certain depth the cost increases by leaps and bounds, and the time occupied lengthens proportionately.

GRAIN CUTTING GENERAL

Much Barley and Oat Cutting Done and A start on Wheat

Harvest is in full swing in the Vermilion district and the crop has every appearance of being a bumper one. While odd fields of barley were cut up to the middle of last week, a general start was made Saturday and Monday of this week. So rapidly has the grain matured that farmers have been over-rushed to get their hay up before cutting and many have been forced to start their binders in the grain at the tail end of their haying. Today wheat will be cut and given a continuance of the ideal harvest weather now prevailing the early sown grain will all be in stook by the end of next week. The farmers have good cause for thankfulness in the harvesting of so abundant a crop.

ANOTHER DROWNING FATALITY

J. W. Welsh Drowned In the River Near the Town

A gloom was cast over the town Wednesday evening when the report was spread that a drowning had taken place at the bathing point in the Vermilion river, just north of the town, the victim being John W. Welsh, a native of [illegible], but, late of Battleford, who was formerly with the R. J. Whitlaw [illegible] Winnipeg, and had come to Vermilion only two weeks previous to the unfortunate occurrence to assume charge of the Western Canada Trading Co., business.

The drowning took place about 7 o'clock. Mr. Welsh and E. R. [illegible] had gone down for a swim from the business and had only been in the water for a few minutes. Welsh had swum across [illegible] and back and was [illegible] when he sank. Mr. [illegible] who had just left the river was horrified [illegible]

The cloud that Hugh's call had left on Harry's countenance lifted.

It was a sweltering afternoon, and in the wide east parlor limp handkerchiefs and energetic fans fought vainly against the intolerable heat. There, as the clock struck 4, a hundred pairs of eyes glanced between two centers of interest—the door at which the bride would enter and the rose platform at the other end of the room where, prayer book in hand, in his wide robes and flowing sleeves, Harry Sanderson had just taken his stand. Perhaps more looked at Harry than at the door.

He seemed his easy magnetic self as he stood there flanked by the flowers ... [illegible]

"Will she go to him?"

Chapter 5

FOR a moment there was dead silence in the room. Harry's breath caught in h's throat, and the old man's eye again impaled the hapless son. Hugh threw up his head with an attempt at jauntiness, but with furtive apprehension in every muscle, for he could not solve the look he saw on his father's face, and said:

"You act as if it were a cool million. I'm no worse than a lot who have better ... than I. Suppose I did draw the one thousand. You were going to give me ten for a wedding present. I had to have the money then, and you wouldn't have given it to me. You know that as well as I do. Besides, I was going to take it up myself, and you would never have been the wiser. He promised to hold it. It's a low trick for him to round on me like this. I'll pay him off for it some time. FISH RESCUER.

Was Drowning in Fresh Air When Found and Revived.

A charming fish story was disclosed at the Nature Study Exhibition, held at the Botanic Gardens, London, recently. Attached to a small glass tank containing a pike was a card bearing the inscription:

"Rescued from certain death."

Miss von Wyss, of the London Day Training College, who was in charge of this exhibit, related that the pike was captured in a ditch by some of the students engaged in nature study. They conveyed it back to the college and placed it in a tank. Then, having to attend a lecture, they went away, leaving it unattended.

On their return they were astonished and greatly troubled to find that the fish had vanished. They looked around, but it was nowhere in sight. Determined to find it, if possible, they began a systematic search of the room. At last they came upon it lying under a chest of drawers, fully a dozen yards from the tank.

But, alas; the little fish's adventure seemed to have cost it its life. Nevertheless, the students ran with it to the tank, and there began to apply "artificial respiration." Keeping open its mouth with a hairpin, they sent it spinning round the water to restore circulation. Then one of the students carefully operated its gills.

At the end of forty minutes, when hope had been almost abandoned, the fish appeared to tremble with life. ... brought additional vigor ... at the end of an hour ... "come round." The next morning it looked absolutely none the worse for its perilous experience.

Besides the pike, Miss von Wyss had several other attractive exhibits, notably a collection of ant-lions. These animals make funnel-shaped pits in the earth, and then wait at the bottom until insects of various kinds fall in. They throw sand at their victims to prevent escape.

No Murder There.

Merrill E. Gates, secretary of the Board of Indian Commissioners, was describing in Washington the splendid work that has been done to wipe out the tuberculosis scourge which at one time threatened to make the American Indian extinct.

"But the Indian," said Mr. Gates, "needs to be educated in sanitation. He is shockingly ignorant there. In fact, he is as ignorant as an old farmer I used to know in Warsaw.

"A friend dropped in on this old farmer as he was frying a bit of bacon.

"'Grand bacon, that,' said the friend, smiling affably.

THE BOTTLE CONJURER.

An Old Time Hoax That Caused a Riot in a London Theater.

In 1749 there appeared in the newspapers of London an advertisement stating that on a certain night a remarkable conjurer would perform in the Haymarket theater. He would, the advertisement ran, borrow a common walking cane from any member of the audience and "thereupon play the music of every instrument now in use." It was also promised that he would take an ordinary wine bottle, place it on a table in the middle of the stage, get into it "in the sight of all the spectators" and sing while in it. In the same issue of the newspaper was a second advertisement announcing the arrival of Signor Capitello Jumpedo, "a surprising dwarf no taller than a tobacco pipe," who engaged to perform with and outdo the "bottle conjurer," contorting himself in all manner of shapes and finally "opening his mouth wide and jumping down his own throat." This feat, not without reason, Signor Jumpedo described as the "most wonderfulest wonder of all wonders as ever the world wondered at."

The night set for this dual display of "wonderfulest wonders" found the theater packed from roof to pit. But as the time passed and the curtain remained down catcalls and hisses began to be heard. Then a man in the pit stood up and in a calm voice announced that if double prices were paid the conjurer would get into a pint instead of a quart bottle. At once the audience realized that they were being hoaxed. Somebody threw a lighted candle into a box, and this was the signal for a riot. Benches were torn up and boxes pulled down, while the timid rushed for the doors, with great loss of wigs, hats, swords and canes. Those who remained, re-enforced by roughs from outside, completely destroyed the interior of the theater and finished up by dragging the wreckage into the street, where it was burned in a huge bonfire. Nor was the author of this impostor ever discovered, although it was commonly attributed either to an actor who had been discharged or to a mischievous nobleman bent on winning a wager.

If You Rid Poisons FROM THE BLOOD

By awakening the liver and kidneys, you will be freed of pains, aches and the tired spring feeling.

Poisons only accumulate in the blood. Pain and aches have the same cause.

Poisons only accumulate in the blood when the liver and kidneys get torpid and slow in action and when, as a result, the bowels become constipated.

Get the liver and kidneys working right and away go the poisons. That is their work, to rid the blood of poisons.

When they fail because of the excessive accumulation of poisons in the spring, use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and they will soon resume their natural functions with renewed energy ...

No other organs of the body can filter the poisons from the blood so you must get the liver and kidneys active if you are going to restore healthful digestion, regular bowel action and free the body of pains, aches and feelings of fatigue and depression.

It is only natural that the liver and kidneys should give out in the spring when the blood is usually loaded with impurities, but you can quickly and certainly set them right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This is the greatest of spring medicines because it is unique in its direct and combined action on the liver and kidneys.

Put it to the test this spring and you will be astonished at its wonderfully prompt and thorough action on the digestive and excretory systems. You can be certain that it will move the bowels, awaken the action of the liver and kidneys and completely purify the blood. GEORGE HANGS A PICTURE.

"George, I wish you would hang that new picture tonight."

"All right, my dear. I'll do it now. Get me the stepladder."

"I should think you might get the stepladder yourself."

"Where is it?"

"Where it is always kept. On the top of the cellar stairs."

"That's where it used to be. ... "

"It is either there or up in the back room, or—let me see—I loaned it to Mrs. Johnson yesterday. No, she brought it back, and I left it on the back porch. Oh, yes, I know where it is. You'll find it in the pantry off the kitchen."

After twenty minutes' search the ladder is discovered. George ... "Now hand me the picture, my dear."

"Yes, here it is."

"Where's the hammer?"

"I thought you had it."

"You thought I had it! You know very well I didn't have it. Get it for me right away."

"Where's the nail?"

"Didn't you get a nail either?"

"No, I didn't get a nail either. I supposed if you wanted me to hang a picture you'd have the tools ready. Where's the picture cord?"

"Well, for heaven's sake! Why didn't you look to see if there was picture cord on it before you went up there to hang it?"

"Get me the cord and don't stop to argue. I'm getting dizzy up here."

"Well, here's the cord. What else do you suppose you'll want?"

"Well, I don't want any more of your lip. I can hang this picture without that!"

WOES OF THE PURSER

He Has Troubles of His Own on the Trip Across the Atlantic.

MUST HAVE A GOOD TEMPER.

His Time Wasted by Foolish Questioners and Trivial Appeals, Mainly by Women Passengers, Yet He Has to Be Always Polite and Agreeable.

"I am," said the purser one day of the big liner moored to the harbor of Boulogne to be taking a trip from Liverpool to the Continent, "a man of many troubles. I will assume that you, as a stranger, have no idea of the many duties appertaining to the purser's office. Passengers seem to think that the purser is paid for a simple thing to answer foolish questions.

"Of course there is a good deal which we have to put up with in the big part of our complaints during a voyage. Although there is a purser's office on the windows and doors, and also on the Lusitania, I could count on the fingers of one hand the number of times I have been approached by passengers who had lost property. Passengers seem to think that the purser is answerable for all the property of the passengers. Each time anything is lost they bring complaints to the purser, and threaten a general search of the ship unless the missing article is found. Each time anything is found after the search, no apology is offered for the trouble caused. The purser is the only member of the ship's company who may be unduly censured for the carelessness and negligence of passengers. SPORTS AND PASTIMES

(From Lloydminster Times)

The Lloydminster baseball team "got theirs" good and plenty on Wednesday last, in two games at Manville and Vermilion, the former by a score of 16-3, and the latter by 13-5.

In the first game (9 innings) Manville batted Lee like fiends. Like every other pitcher, he had an off day, and was relieved in the fourth by Miller, who worked hard but couldn't hold the Manville batters off. To add to the tales the whole team, with one or two exceptions, was off colour, and when poor playing and hard luck didn't work for their defeat the umpire did. However, we're not destructing from Manville's victory, for they clearly had the better team that day. They are a well-balanced team of hard hitters and fielders, also besides are good base sports. Colbert, their pitcher, was hit freely enough by the locals to win out, as he only fanned six to Lloydminster's five.

The second game, in Vermilion, at 3:00 p.m., went 13-5 for the home team. Hard luck again was evident for Lloydminster. The latter got kick coming, however, as results for the umpire, and on several occasions they said so—loudly. Once on his calling it out at home plate, in the fourth, on Carey's throw from first, when the runner was clearly safe; and the second instance was his calling a foul off Manchester's hard drive inside foul line, which was deflected to foul ground by Miller's attempted one hand stab. The hit was good for two bags. Manchester hit the next to center fielder, Lee opened the game for Lloydminster, but was being hit unfairly and Miller was sent in to stem the tide, but it was too late, Lloydminster never got around the bases until the fifth, when Brimacombe, who up till then was pitching good ball, though being hit freely, weakened, and four runs crossed the plate. The Vermilion boys batted and fielded well, and they have a fine diamond. The game was called in the fifth on account of darkness.

In the evening, the Vermilion club, true to their established reputation as good fellows, tendered a splendid banquet to the visiting team and friends, which was presided over in a genial manner, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The Lloydminster boys acknowledging that the sting of defeat had largely been removed.

FOOTBALL

In the finest game of football ever played in Lloydminster the Edmonton Caledonians on Saturday defeated the home team, and won the championship of the northern district of the Alberta association football league.

Lloydminster won the toss, and gained the advantage of a very strong wind. By superior [illegible] Caledonians prevented a score in this half, although time after time their goal was in danger. Fully a dozen corner kicks were made by Lloydminster, and although in most instances these were well placed, yet in every case the Callies' backs and half backs or their clever goalkeeper were able to get the ball out of the danger zone.

When the teams changed ends the ball of game was one minute old, and both teams settled down to score. Rush succeeded rush, and after some twelve minutes play a foul was awarded to Edmonton almost in midfield. Tweedale took the kick, and placed it beautifully. The ball was dead in the mouth of the goal, and Whitehead, in attempting to head away put the ball through. A determined effort was made by the home team to make the score level, and the ball was worked by clever combinations towards the Callies citadel a number of times without being put through. Nearing the end of the game Lloydminster's forwards were [illegible] but Todd fisted away, and when the whistle blew the score stood 1 to 0 in favour of the Callies. Geer and Cooper for Lloydminster proved to be two of the best players on the field, while Whitehead did well at centre half.

After the game, Mr. D. S. Irwin, president of the Lloydminster club, entertained both teams at his home. The chair was occupied by Mr. A. Bramley-Moore, M. P. P. After supper, short addresses were delivered by the chairman, W. Pate, president Caledonians, J. W. Ward, president A. A. F. A., and D. S. Irwin. A musical programme followed, which was participated in by members of both clubs. Special mention might be made of the Scotch songs that were so well rendered by Mr. Adam Fenton, and the violin selections by Allan Irwin. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Irwin for their kind hospitality.

Canada Won Handily

Montreal, Aug. 16—Canada scores an easy victory in the international cricket match against the United States, even [illegible] Canada's star run up over eighty all on of 81 for the loss of one wicket. The innings ending at three o'clock this afternoon the United States went in [illegible] practically hopeless and a victory for [illegible] Canada. Even [illegible] and fellows proved the only batsmen to improve on their work of Monday, the former scoring 42 runs and the latter [illegible] the only was dismissed for 14 runs.

October 1st is the date set for the laying of the corner stone on the new parliament buildings in Edmonton. The ceremony will be performed by His Excellency Earl Grey.

Harry nodded and left the room, shutting the door carefully behind him, carrying with him the cowering, helpless look with which Hugh saw himself left alone with his implacable judge. What to say to her? How to say it. He mounted the stair as if a pack swung from his shoulders. He paused a moment at the door, then knocked, turned the knob and entered.

There in the middle of the blue hung room in her wedding dress, with her bandaged eyes, and her bridal bouquet on the table, stood Jessica. Twilight was near, but even so all the shutters were [illegible] one, through which a last glow of refracted sunlight sifted to fall upon his face. Her hands were clasped before her. He could hear her breathing—the full, hurried respiration of expectancy.

Then, while his hand closed the door behind him, a thing unexpected, amazing happened—a thing that took him as utterly by surprise as if the solid floor had yawned before him. Slim fingers tore away the broad encircling bandage. She started forward. Her arms [illegible] flung about his neck.

"Hugh, Hugh!" she cried. "My husband!"

The paleness was stricken suddenly from Harry's face. An odd, dazed color, a flush of mortification, of self reproach, flooded it from chin to brow. Despite himself he [illegible]

"Hugh, Hugh!" she cried. "My husband!"

[illegible]

"... seven I may never see his face again." Then slowly and feebly he ascended the stairs.

Ten, fifteen minutes passed, and old David Stires re-entered the room, went feebly to his wheel chair and sat down.

"I have told her," he said presently in a broken tone. "You are kind, Sanderson, very kind. God help us!"

"What has God to do with it?" for a voice behind them. Harry faced about. It was Jessica as he had first seen her in the upper room with the bandage across her eyes.

"What has God to do with it?" she repeated [illegible] "Perhaps Mr. Sanderson [illegible] It is in his [illegible]"

[illegible]

He could not have told what he would have [illegible] though the accent was [illegible] The harsh [illegible] It was all he said, for he stopped suddenly at sight of her face [illegible] white as the folded cloth.

"[illegible]" she said, turning toward the voice, "I remember what you said that night right here in this very room—that you sowed your wild oats at college with Hugh; that they were 'a tidy crop.' [illegible] strong and he was weak. [illegible] It was in your rooms that he [illegible] first game of poker. [illegible] he has gone to be an outcast, and you stand in the [illegible] a moment, you, the Rev. Henry Sanderson! You helped to make him what he has become! [illegible]"

Harry was looking at her with a stricken countenance. He had no answer ready. The wave of confusion that had submerged him when he had removed the bandage to her eyes had again welled over him.

"I am not excusing Hugh now," she [illegible]

A [illegible]

"ORAN AMOK!"

The Bloodthirsty Malay When He Is Maddened by Frenzy.

"Amok" is a religious fanaticism, a madness under which a man makes up his mind to kill any one he can until he himself is killed. Brought on by drink or religion or from whatever cause, the process is the same. The madman seizes his creese and rushes headlong down the street, cutting at every one he meets. To any one who has seen a creese or a parang further detail is unnecessary.

A man running amok is as a dog with hydrophobia, but the panic caused by the former is by far the worse. Like the mad dog, the madman is followed by a noisy rabble, who sooner or later run into their man and exterminate him. When this vengeful rabble is made up of bloodthirsty Malays and Chinamen its wild rage and fury are beyond [illegible] beyond description. The clamor and bloodcurdling yells of the pursuing crowd and the ever recurring shout of "Oran amok, oran amok!" are incidents which can never be forgotten by any one who has seen or heard them. The bravest quails when suddenly turning the corner of a street his ears are greeted with the cry of "Oran amok!" and a few yards off he sees a Malay running straight at him, brandishing in his hand the bloody creese with which he has already [illegible] all in his way.—London Chronicle.

"Isn't it terrible," said the society woman, "what a tiny thing can prove a tragedy to poor, self [illegible] mankind? A speck almost invisible in the eye of an athlete may overpower him utterly and render him as helpless as a baby. And a lost hairpin or the breaking of a bottle may transform the most smartly groomed woman into an object of amusement to all observers.

"At a dinner I attended not long ago a lady sitting opposite me lodged in some inexplainable manner a large crumb of bread directly on the end of her nose without being conscious of the fact, and there it remained. The ludicrous effect was beyond the power of words to describe or of human risibles to resist. She is an extremely vivacious woman, generous with smiles and little bows and motions of her head, and as she chatted gayly with those about her it was impossible for us to restrain our unseemly mirth. Naturally she thought this was caused by her remarks, and she continued to toss off jests with a lightsome air. We were all in agony, but no one summoned courage to tell her, each of us preferring to leave that kindly act to another. After a time she addressed a remark to her husband, who sat next to her and had been devoting himself to the lady at his other side. He turned to look at his wife, and in an instant a clever touch of his napkin removed the distorting fragment, but I can never forget it as long as I live."

A MALIBRAN VICTORY

The Great Singer's Lively Debut In an English City.

SHE DEFIED THE DIRECTORS.

Considering That She Had Been Shabbily Treated, Malibran Sang as Long as She Wanted to and Had a Most Satisfactory Revenge.

Quarrels between opera singers and managers call to mind an incident in the life of Malibran. It was in 1829, when Malibran returned to England from New York and made her debut at Birmingham at the music festival as Malibran Garcia. Miss Paton had already become a favorite there and was allowed to choose her own songs and sing as many as she pleased, whereas Malibran was compelled to sing only what was assigned to her. Garcia bore the indignity with such patience as she could command until one morning she saw the announcement that Miss Paton would sing six songs that evening and that she would sing but two. Then it was that, realizing that much of her success for the season in England depended on her having a better place in the program, she stormed the directors.

In vain the directors endeavored to avoid receiving her, but she made short work of ceremony, and while they were framing an excuse to pacify her she broke in upon them in a magnificent rage. In a jiffy she asked the chairman:

"Sir, have you sanctioned this program?" And, receiving a nod in the affirmative, she sailed along further.

"I had hoped," she said, "it had been issued without your sanction, for [illegible]

PROTRUDING PILES

Read the evidence that this distressing ailment is cured by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Some people find it hard to believe that anything short of a surgical operation will cure protruding piles. The doctors have brought about this belief. There is any amount of proof that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for this as well as all other forms of piles.

Captain Wm. Smith, Revelstoke, B.C., writes:—

"It is with much pleasure I state that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching protruding piles of many years standing and it has completely cured me. I had previously tried many other remedies but they did me no good. I would strongly recommend this ointment to those suffering from this complaint for it is a good and genuine cure."

Mrs. Captain Clinansmith, Salvation Army, Essex, Ont., writes:—

"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two years ago I was taken with a severe attack of protruding piles and became so bad that I had to keep my bed and could lie in no position except on my stomach. Doctors could give me no help and the various oils and ointments used proved of no avail.

"One Saturday night when I was suffering untold agony my husband went to the drug store for a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment which I had heard of as a cure for piles. Although I had almost given up hope, to the wonder of those around me I was able to be up on Monday and have had no difficulty from piles since. As a treatment for all kinds of sores and burns Dr. Chase's Ointment works like magic."

ORCHID HUNTING.

The Terrors and the Dangers of a Tropical Forest.

It is not a pretty story, this narrative of a trip up the Orinoco, but you may understand orchid people better if you read it.

"It began unluckily," said he. "I took a partner because I'd learned that the dark places of earth are hard upon a man by himself. I met him at Port of Spain, and he was eager for the adventure because he had just been cashiered from a British mercantile house in Havana and the Orinoco appealed to him like a haven.

"We hired a few negroes. Our real guides we would pick up at Angostura. One day while waiting for the stores to be packed I took my partner out to show him what an orchid was.

"Near the Pitch lake I saw one in a tree and ordered one of the negro boys to shin up and get it. He would not. A deadly snake dwelt in that tree, he declared. He was afraid—afraid of snakes! Nice, efficient, helpful boy to take into tropical forests, wasn't [illegible]

"It was insubordination before the expedition had even started. So I cuffed him and handed him my hunting knife. 'Bring down that flower and also the snake's head,' I ordered, and, whining, trembling, he went up the trunk. He was detaching the orchid from where it clung when a thing like a spear, as black as his own skin, [illegible] struck at the boy's wrist. He screamed with terror and, toppling down, writhed with pain. He died, and I felt a gloom settle on my spirits.

"Well, at Angostura we took rafts and six guides upstream. First one guide died of fever; then another was bitten by poisonous insects. One fell in with—or into—an alligator. We needed meat, and the skin was worth [illegible]

Why it Will Pay You To Buy Invictus Shoes

You'll know the difference between good and bad leather only after you've worn it.

It's then that the inferior leather shows its defects both in looks and wearing qualities.

When you buy a pair of shoes you are at the mercy of the maker.

If he puts inferior leather into them he's going to lose your future trade.

But, if he uses good, high grade selected leather it means that your purchases won't stop with the one pair, - you'll become a permanent buyer.

Men who buy one pair of INVICTUS Shoes keep on using them from year to year.

Because INVICTUS Shoes are made of the best selected leathers, by skilled workmen, on modern machinery, over stylish, up-to-date lasts.

They're made with the object of giving the maximum of wear, style and comfort that any shoes can give.

A DISASTROUS FIRE

Outbuildings, Grain And Horses Burned on E Covey's Farm

A disastrous fire occurred on Monday evening last at the homestead of Edwin Covey, about six miles east of town, which destroyed his outbuildings, a stack of hay, three stacks of wheat, two of oats and severely burned two of his work horses.

Mr. Covey had just finished stacking his grain near the stables, where the fire originated, and as the crop was a heavy one his general loss will be considerable. Mr. Covey was one of the first settlers in this vicinity, is the secretary of the L. I. D. and is also an active member of the local Farmers' Association. In his loss, he has the sympathy of the entire district.

With a 22 horsepower Hart-Par kerosene engine Mr. Pierce is engaged in cutting his grain and ploughing his land. The engine is hauling an 8 foot Massey-Harris binder and a 14 inch 6 furrow Cockshutt steam plow, the sheaves are dumped from the binder upon the ploughed ground. The outfit is running night and day and is in charge of two crews of three men each, who take the night and day shift. Meals are brought to the men, who eat on the tender and engine while moving and the outfit does not stop except to take on fuel or to fill the hard oil cups. The corners of the field have been rounded off with teams, so that the plows are continually in the ground. The outfit is averaging 60 acres per 24 hours. The binder is doing excellent work so that no litter is being left on the ploughed ground. Mr. Pierce states that the expense of the work was considerably less than one dollar per acre.

SEASHORE LUNCHEON.

Tinted Marine Photographs Make Charming Place Cards.

A lovely little luncheon motive for country or town is that of the sea and its treasures. For the centerpiece secure a child's seashore bucket, preferably of wood, with shovel. Fill the former with sand in which flower stems may be inserted. Get a square of thin board or cardboard about half a yard across to go under the bucket. Sprinkle this lightly with sand on which a few shells should be strewn. With a doll's shoe make little footprints in this. Any kind of wild flowers will be pretty for the bucket.

If possible have nice large white clam shells at each corner of the table filled with the usual relishes—nuts, radishes, candies, and so on. Small shells, especially the crinkly ones, may be placed at each cover for bonbons. For place cards have squares of rough white water color paper which might be torched around the edges...

THE SLIPSHOD MIND.

A Bane to Its Owner and to the World at Large.

The individual with the slipshod appearance, says Ruth Cameron, is a heavy burden for himself and the world, but the individual with the slipshod mind is a greater. You know them as well as I do, the men and women who never face any issue fairly and squarely, who leave their thoughts always at tag ends, who never try to look ahead and plan their lives to some good end, but who weakly say they'd rather not know what's coming, for "when ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." I think the devil made that maxim just for those people and congratulated himself when he had done it, for it's the devil's most important business, you know, to supply fools with good sounding justifications of their folly, and that's such a very good one. I hate that maxim. I can't imagine anything more foolishly untrue, but how many times I've heard slipshods quote it in explanation of their hanging shoestrings of thought or rundown heels of indecision. I know a girl who whenever she is late for an appointment—which she is nine times out of ten—firmly turns her eyes away from the clocks along her route so that she need not be reminded of how abominably late she is. "When ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," she quotes in explanation. Now, I am pretty sure that if she would punish herself by craning her neck to see every clock she possibly could and burning the record of her tardiness deep into her brain she would be less likely to be late the next time. It is the same girl who will never look over her bills when she thinks she has spent more money than she ought to have. "When ignorance is bliss," she cheerfully tells me, "'tis folly to be wise," and goes calmly on toward the...

THE GIANT AND DWARF.

An Impromptu Sideshow That Will Cause Great Amusement.

Probably there are times when you "wonder what to do" and when anything that would make innocent fun would be welcome. Oftentimes at some party or the like things get prosy and a novel diversion is needed to stir the people up. Here's something that fills the bill, and it takes so little preparation that it can be got up on the spur of the moment anywhere.

You can make either the giant or the dwarf singly but it makes the contrast more laughable if you have them exhibit side by side, as shown in our picture. To make the giant have a boy or man stand on a stout or box, place a pair of big slippers or rubbers where the giant's feet would naturally come and then take a curtain, shawl, blanket or the like and, suspending it by one wire in front of the boy or man...

MERELY AN EYE WASH.

The Chemical View of Tears Differs From the Poetical View.

Tears have their functional duty to accomplish, like every other fluid of the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion.

The chemical properties of tears consist of phosphate of lime and soda, making them very salty, but never bitter. Their action on the eye is very beneficial, and here consists their prescribed duty of the body, washing thoroughly that sensitive organ which allows no foreign fluid to do the same work. Nothing cleanses the eye like a good salty shower bath, and medical art has followed nature's law in this respect, advocating the invigorating solution for any distressed condition of the optics. Tears do not weaken the sight, but improve it. They act as a tonic on the muscular vision, keeping the eye soft and limpid, and it will be noticed that women in whose eyes sympathetic tears gather quickly have brighter, tenderer orbs than others. When the pupils are hard and cold the world attributes it to one's disposition, which is a mere figure of speech implying the lack of balmy tears that are to the cornea what salve is to the skin or nourishment to the blood.

The reason some women weep more easily than others and all more readily than the sterner sex has not its difference in the strength of the tear gland, but in the possession of a more delicate nerve system. The nerve fibers about the glands vibrate more easily, causing a downpour from the watery sac. Men are not nearly so sensitive to emotion. Their sympathetic nature—that term is used in a medical sense—is less developed, and the eye gland is therefore protected from shocks. Consequently a man should thank the formation of his nerve nature when he contemptuously scorns tears as a woman's practice...

ICED TEA.

How to Make and Serve This Refreshing Summer Drink.

However the doctors and health fearful may revile iced tea, it is bound to stay as long as thermometers are so unruly in summer. It is surprising, considering the amount of iced tea Americans consume, how rarely it is good.

The most scientific and supposedly healthful way to prepare it is to pour freshly brewed hot tea over a large lump of ice, then pour into glasses half filled with shaved ice.

More economical is it to make a small quantity of rather strong tea several hours before it is to be used, let it cool in the refrigerator and weaken to the desired consistency with iced water just before needed.

It is a mistake to think iced tea can be cooled by a few lumps in the pitcher. There must be either cracked or shaved ice in glasses to make it palatable.

Lemon is also better added before the meal than at it. The usual way is to pass a section of lemon to each guest. Far better to the taste if both lemon and sugar are mixed with the tea when the iced water is added. Better yet is it to adopt the Russian plan of grating the rind of a lemon and pouring hot tea over it.

If lemon is passed, as it may have to be when some of the family do not like it, cut into lengthwise sections rather than thin rounds and pass in addition a small glass pitcher filled with extra lemon juice.

Mint leaves or lemon verbena added to iced tea besides the lemon, gives a delicious flavor. It is also good with a little ginger syrup or a few drops of rum.

One hostess on gala occasions serves her iced tea poured cold over lemon, orange or pineapple sherbet. This is served in a punch bowl and each guest fills her tall glass with the mixture. In this case cracked ice is not used.

CARE OF FLOWER BEDS.

How to Keep Them Beautiful All Through the Summer.

All flower beds should at this season of the year be kept in proper shape and condition. All seed pods and withered and yellow leaves should be carefully cleaned and picked off. Frequent stirring with the hoe is good, but not deep enough to in any way injure the roots. It is a good plan every time you mow the grass to take a sharp spade and cut the edge of all your flower beds. It keeps the grass from encroaching on the beds and also keeps the beds in their proper shape and firm and makes them have a fresh and neat appearance...

CURVE PITCHING.

Radbourne Used the First "Rise" or "Jump" Ball.

Curve pitching got its greatest development after 1884, in which year the artificial restrictions were removed and the pitcher was allowed to deliver the ball as he pleased, which means overhand. At that period the "out," easiest of all curves to throw, was falling into disrepute among major leaguers...

Le Miserable

Toronto News

Pity the fate of poor old Brown,
All of his family is out of town.
Both of the girls are down in Maine
Driving handsome young men insane,
Swimming oft in the sounding sea,
Spending money contentedly.
Mother has gone to Montreal,
Where she will stay till early Fall
With her daughter the married one,
Says she is having lots of fun.
Billy and Tommy have gone their way
Fishing, up in the Georgian Bay.
Can you wonder that poor old Brown
Is the loneliest man in town?

Gets his breakfast at half past eight,
Eats his bread from a crumby plate,
Drinks his milk from an old tin cup,
Oh, how he hates to wash it up!
Goes to the Club to lunch and dine,
Loafs about until half past nine,
Then hikes home with an aching head,
Reads the paper, and goes to bed.

But sometimes he may meet a friend,
Several dollars they gaily spend,
Then we know it's a blooming shame
Bridge, or maybe a poker game.
Brown gets home when the roosters crow,
Reprehensible. Yes, we know
Finds it hard to untie his boot,
Goes to sleep in his evening suit

Pity the fate of poor old Brown,
All of his family is out of town,
Nobody cares for him nor knows
Dust is collecting on his clothes.
Wrinkles of care surround his eyes,
They won't hear it with much surprise
Isn't Brown's fate a tragedy?
Just a bread winner. Poor old "Pa."

THE PREDICAMENT OF ANGLIN, SENIOR.

His Own Love Affair and That of His College Chum.

By HENRIETTA G. ROBINSON.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

Harvey Anglin, senior, sat on the front steps of his father's house, with his head resting on his hands and his elbows on his knees, and thought. He was in a deep study, and he was thinking of Fred Angle, his college chum, who was coming that evening to visit him. Fred was coming to see Harvey's sister Grace, and Harvey was thinking how he could get out of the house and leave the coast clear for his friend.

Harvey knew that Fred was in love with Grace, and he knew that Grace was in love with Fred, but he also knew that Fred was afraid to speak to Grace, and that Grace was afraid to speak to Fred, and that was why

Oldaya News. 82-7

All the grain is cut and most of it is stacked, and the farmers are going round with a smile that wont come off.

We hope Mr. A. C. Branham will be successful (with the assistance of Mr. C. H. K. Fleming) in obtaining water this time, after so many vain attempts which must be most discouraging.

We sincerely sympathise with Messrs. R. E. and the Misses Taylor, "Newhaven" in their recent bereavement.

Mr. Merrill Sollows is visiting Mr. J. Flentker, Hill River, and is now busy breaking busting.

We understand "Joe" Edmiston is making a speedy recovery after his unfortunate accident under the skillful handling of T. J. Lane.

We notice that Mr. Ed Hollis is busy erecting a two-storey frame house and we expect (from all appearances) to have the pleasure of welcoming "Mrs." Hall shortly.

On Thursday last, Mr. Harry E. Hazeltine sustained a severe whilst hauling oats. Owing to his "dumper" crop the wagon wheels collapsed, throwing Hazeltine, Assistant, Mr. Ben Aichin, violently to the ground, fortunately without serious results.

We are sorry to hear Mr. Bob Stevens sustained a severe on Sunday evening last. It is a well known fact that in South Africa it is customary among the Kaffirs, when on matrimonial intentions bent, to barter cows for a bride. In this case Bobby snubbed the cow to a tree outside the kraal and upon his return on Monday morning he was much disconcerted to find poor one-eyed Maggie had committed suicide, being past all aid. Bobby, undaunted by this, went to Edmonton and purchased another cow, but by removing the bell, which he found quite impossible owing to the extreme heat, all I was able to obtain was a small supply of condensed milk.

A DEBT OF HONOR.

The Debtor, the Creditor and the Promissory Note.

The inconsiderate creditor pressed for immediate payment of his promissory note.

"But I have no money," said the debtor wearily.

"I saw you pay that man who just went out," retorted the creditor indignantly.

"That was a debt of honor," replied the other, with hauteur.

The creditor immediately tore up the promissory note which he held in his hand and threw it in the fire.

"So is mine a debt of honor," he remarked simply.

So far so good, and the matter is proceeding along the proper lines for such cases made and provided.

The debtor assured himself that the promise to pay had been really consumed.

"Pardon me," he then politely said, "but you tore up that note voluntarily and from mercenary motives. I cannot therefore recognize it as a debt of honor."

Which proves that a nice sense of honor is a good thing to have lying about handy.

The creditor smiled indulgently. "Oh, that was only a copy I tore up," he replied. He took another note from his pocket. "This is the original, you see," he remarked, with pardonable pride.

Which proves again that a careful man before burning his bridges assures himself that the ferry is still doing business at the same old stand.—Exchange.

PIAZZA WORK.

Making Screens, Window Shades, Table Covers and Straw Matting.

The schoolgirl home for the summer, the housewife on a vacation and perhaps the convalescent who has many long hours to spend on the piazza will all enjoy occupying themselves with little bits of handiwork to add to the furnishings of the summer home.

One of the newest ideas is to make screens, window shades and porch table covers of ordinary straw matting. True, the shades will have to be rolled up from the bottom by hand and tied to their pole when they are not needed to keep out the sun, and to make a pretty screen or table cover one will want to weave in a few simple designs of raffia, and all the edges must either be bound with some pretty carpet binding or laced to the rods that support them. But when you have finished you have something really worth while.

Where a selvage edge comes next the rod which supports either screen panel or curtain it is laced with stout raffia or cord to the rod. In order to push this "thread" through the matting without breaking the fiber insert the point of a pencil in the matting between the straws, pushing them closer together on either side and leaving a good sized opening for the lacing. Make these openings five or six inches apart and lace the matting to the crossbar by simply looping the lacing over the bar each time it is put through the matting.

Among the useful trifles that one may make for the piazza one should remember coverings for the backs of painted chairs, which, unprotected, may leave marks on the clothes.

Denim will answer admirably for these coverings, green being a good color to choose because of its suggestion of coolness.

Made double just the size of the chair back, and with loops of tape at the upper corners to tie the cover on the chair back, they are easily placed and may be removed with equal ease to [illegible]

A NEW EMBROIDERY.

Rope Stitch Designs Smart on Dressy Summer Frocks.

USED ON ALL MATERIALS.

Explicit Instructions For Doing the Rope Work—Braiding Patterns May Be Used For Embroidery Purposes. Mistakes Easily Remedied.

Embroidered dresses are again to be very much the fashion, and happy are those who know how to do them themselves, for when purchased ready embroidered the cost is not small.

Every one knows how to braid dresses. It is perfectly easy when once you have the pattern traced or ironed on on your material. Begin and end your braiding by pushing in the end with a large eyed needle and let the stitches made in running on the braid be firm.

But braiding patterns can be used for other than braiding purposes, and in our illustration you will see how well a transfer design looks when worked in a very simple stitch instead of braid.

In adapting a transfer design to the make of your dress you should study the pattern carefully and cut it out to fit the part you wish to embroider. Then pin it on the dress very carefully and iron off. If you make any mistake, however, and wish to get the tracing off, you can do so easily with benzine.

The rope stitch, which is illustrated, is the stitch used here. It is preferred to braid for many reasons. It comes cheaper than good silk braid and wears extremely well. Once you learn how to do it, as you easily can by Bad For the Game.

Joe Ryan, the Chicago story teller, met a coal operator who told him a story of two dealers at a gambling house who were invited to go out and shoot ducks. They had never shot anything, these dealers, but craps and patrons, and they were nervous and not exactly up to what they were to do.

They went to a hunting hut in the Illinois river and were told they were to rise early in the morning and go out after the ducks. They were so excited they couldn't sleep, and about midnight one of them went out in front of the hut and saw a large number of wooden decoy ducks floating in the water. He rushed back, got his gun and began firing at the decoys.

His companion, startled by the sound, came out and took one look. Then he screamed: "Stop it! Stop it, you lunatic! You're shooting the boosters!"—Saturday Evening Post.

The President's Offices.

The wing of the White House, built in 1902 for the offices of the president, has proved to be too small, although it contains much more room than was available when the executive business was done in the main building. Congress has appropriated money for doubling the size of the new wing, and work on it will begin soon. The addition will extend over the ground used by President Roosevelt as a tennis court. The plans provide for a large oval room for the president overlooking the [illegible]

GOSSIP OF SWINBURNE.

Late Poet Had a Marvelous Command of Language In Conversation.

The first instalment of the mass of Swinburniana which may be expected to find its way into print is offered in The Fortnightly by Mr. Edmund Gosse, who was intimate with the poet for many years. It contains some charming impressions, which especially testify to Swinburne's possession of that virtue of which Matthew Arnold makes so much in his criticism of Byron, the virtue of a "magnificent sincerity." Mr. Gosse say that "his feeling about literature was serious to the verge of fanaticism. It absorbed him like religion, and it was the unflagging sense of the superhuman power and value of poetry which made his conversation so stimulating." His talk must indeed have been delightful. One beautiful thing about it was its ease. Alike in courteous mood—and he was habitually courteous—and in moments of temperamental wrath, he had the same command of language. Mr. Gosse rescues from his note-book this outburst concerning some literary antagonist.

"He had better be careful. If I am obliged (very slowly) to take the cudgel in my hand (in rapid exultation) the rafters of the hovel in which he skulks and sniggers shall ring with the loudest whacks ever administered in discipline or chastisement to a howling churl."

All this, we are told, was poured forth, in towering high spirits, without a moment's pause to find a word. Once an interlocutor remarked that it was disagreeable to be controverted, and Swinburne replied, "No! not at all! It gives a zest to the expression of sympathy to raise some points of amicable disagreement." Mr. Gosse suggestively notes that there was a certain unconscious resemblance between the poet's repartees and those of Dr. Johnson, and another interesting point he makes is that Swinburne's mock irascibility was perhaps deliberately modelled on the behavior of his idol, Landor.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

To The Public:--

We beg to announce that on October 15th, we are adopting a strictly cash or produce system in our business.

We have thought this matter over carefully before deciding to make this change and believe it will be the most satisfactory for all concerned.

Our greatest reason for adopting the cash or produce system is because we desire to serve our customers better, by giving them GOODS AT LOWER PRICES; this can only be done by reducing the expense of running our business. We still maintain that we are selling goods at the lowest possible prices consistent with running a credit business.

We also believe that no small consideration is due the man with the cash, for we all know that he contributes very considerably, which he has no right to do, toward the running expenses of a CREDIT BUSINESS.

Another important reason for our making this change, is because we are anxious to compete with mail order houses, and to be able to do this successfully, we must adopt their cash method of doing business, and go one better, by buying anything you have to sell, and treating it as cash.

We wish to state plainly that we will not keep any books and even our clerks will be compelled to pay cash for what they require.

And further, we do not want you to think that, by making this change in our business methods, we are losing faith in the people of this district, for such is not the case; on the other hand, we are much encouraged with the crops, and are more hopeful for Vermilion's future than ever before.

During the hard times and tightness of the money market for the past two years we found it necessary to carry a great many who are quite deserving of credit, but now that conditions are so much improved, we feel we can make this change without working a hardship on any one.

Thanking you for your past patronage, and trusting that our business relations have been such as to merit a continuance of the same, we are

Yours very truly,

CRAIG BROTHERS.

Third Anniversary of Methodist Church A Success

Mr Chas. Hughes is at present laid up with blood poisoning in his right hand.

Miss Elsie Hall of Minburn, was in town Monday night attending the Methodist church.

Mr Bleeker is erecting a real estate office on a corner of his hotel property. Tom Sharpe has the contract.

The third anniversary of Mannville Methodist church was celebrated on Sept 19 and 20.

On Sunday evening Rev. E. J. Hodgins, B.A., of Vermilion, preached a very effective and soul stirring sermon. He took for the basis of his discourse the historical fact of the children of Israel going to possess the promised land and driving out the Canaanites before them. He likened this to the coming of the white man into the west wresting it from the Indians who heretofore held undisputed sway. He said that this was God's way of working and pointed to the history of the race, citing specially the cases of Mexico and Spain to prove that if a nation does not bow before its Maker and to His will—if a nation will not obey the laws of God and carry out His purposes—then He will raise up in their stead another nation that will. So the speaker urged the people to submit themselves to God, do His will and carry out His purposes in order that they might build up a strong nation in Canada.

After the address Miss Agnes Brown, sang a very appropriate solo:

"We are building day by day
As the moments pass away
We are building for eternity."

On Monday a choice literary and musical programme was given. Miss B. Wetherbee of Vermilion, delighted the audience with her well rendered selections and we are sure that should she [illegible] received. Sincere thanks is extended to all who took part in the programme and especially to Mr S. V. [illegible] [illegible]

" [illegible]
" [illegible], Vermilion
" Dr Arthur, Vegreville Hon.
" Lang, Vegreville
" Fletcher, Lloydminster
" MacLennan, Islay
" MacLennan, Sunnydale

Rev. Dr Arthur was elected moderator for the ensuing year.

A considerable amount of business was transacted during the morning and afternoon sittings. At 8 p.m. a public meeting was held.

The principal business was the ordination and induction of elders recently elected to this office by the congregation.

Rev. Mr. MacDonald, Lamont, preached an impressive sermon on the subject of Self-reliance. Rev. Lang, Vegreville, addressed the newly inducted elders while Rev. Fletcher, Lloydminster, addressed the people, giving reminiscences of early pioneer days spent as a missionary in this district.

Rev. Simons, Vermilion, having thanked the ladies for hospitality extended to the Presbytery, a deeply interesting meeting was brought to a close after which the Ladies Aid Society served refreshments.

Interesting Notes From Our Ambitious Eastern Burgh

Threshing is general around Islay and the various outfits are finding a good amount of work as there are some large crops, and the majority of grain is yielding high.

The elevator, in charge of Mr. Ned McTaggart, is in good working order and has already handled a fair quantity of grain.

Mr. Dixon has about 20 tons of hay on the 18th. The stack has been guarded from previous night and fire apparently safe. The soil, however, being very dry, had fed the fire and the high wind during the night fanned it into a flame.

A WOMAN'S PLAIN TALK.

In Which She Airs Her Opinions About the Lords of Creation.

A husband is what you believe him to be. We all know men whom their wives call James and William and Samuel, who are Jim and Bill and Sam to their fellow men. Men take very irrational attitudes on the marriage question. They invariably feel that it is a reproach to a woman if she declines to marry.

Take up cold coffee and cold toast and a cold egg for his breakfast. Never try to keep them hot, it irritates him. He wishes them to be cold and have no taste to them so he can give up after a few ineffectual attempts to eat and lie back on his pillow with a sigh and a reproachful glance and ask you to send for his sister and perhaps she can cook something he can eat.

Just a little spice of the "Old Nick" is as good a thing as a woman can keep about her. It is well enough for husband and children to have to hunt their hose sometimes and to know that this gracious person, who can make such excellent coffee, such incomparable ..., such strawberry jam ...

SEA MONSTERS OF OLD.

GIVE A "HOBBY PARTY."

And There'll Be Lots of Fun For Your Guests If You Do.

Nowadays the chief hobby seems to be to have an individual hobby—a nice, unusual, talk making hobby, startling if possible, or, if not, at least one that not a single one of your intimates rides. Most of the fun and zest are taken out of the fad if you begin to talk about your collection a bit and some one says, "Oh, yes. My sister raved about those last year, and the other day I heard that Laura and Grace each owned a dandy collection. Seems to be getting the hobby with everybody."

Not long ago a clever hostess, hearing that several of her friends had pet particular hobbies, decided to give a hobby party.

"You needn't mind if you haven't a fine, imposing collection," she wrote to each guest after explaining her intention. "If you're only just started it will be all the better because it will be more likely not to have been heard of by the rest. If you positively haven't a single wee hobby on hand, then start one this minute.

"What I want you to do is to bring along one or two or three specimens from your collection unless your hobby is collecting houses or steam engines or live boa constrictors. If it's something too awfully big you may bring photographs. Then you are to be given five minutes in which to talk about your fad for the benefit of the rest. You may make your little speech funny or serious just as you like. I'm sure it will be interesting either way."

And it was interesting and really instructive, and the guests voted the "hobby party" the jolliest affair they had attended in a long, long time. After the set program they all chat...

THE MOUND BUILDERS

Mystery of the Great Monuments Found in This Country.

RELICS OF A VANISHED RACE.

The Strangely Shaped Structures Are Thought to Be More Than Two Thousand Years Old—The Enigma of Those Who Reared Them.

Scattered through the middle west and in other parts of the United States are more than 10,000 monstrous, odd shaped "mounds." Some are built like forts, others in queer sharp geometrical figures, others shaped like huge serpents, crocodiles, buffaloes, turtles, eagles, lizards, dragons with eggs in their mouths, etc. Some of these mounds are a mile long, some much smaller. In Newark, O., stands a continuous mound, constructed in a perfect circle, more than 5,000 feet in circumference. The mounds are often covered with trees that are many centuries in age. These strangely shaped structures are thought to be more than 2,000 years old.

Who built them?

Certainly not the North American Indians. The Indians have ever been a lazy, roving race, making their livelihood chiefly by hunting and fishing, seldom remaining long in one neighborhood and using tents of the rudest huts as their dwelling places.

The mysterious people who built the mounds were not a race of rovers. An infinitely long time must have been required for erecting each huge earth shape. Nor were they ignorant savages, for the mounds show deep knowledge of geometry as well as of ...

A SNAKE STORY.

The Yarn That Was Spun by a Traveler in Australia.

An Australian traveler says that he was one day walking in the thick scrub, collecting specimens, when he came upon a large light brown snake, a species of python, coiled upon the ground.

He was by far the finest one he had ever seen at large. He was probably ten or twelve feet long and as thick as a man's leg at the knee.

He looked savage enough to devour a man, and at first the collector felt half inclined to run away.

He recovered himself, however, and was on the point of shooting the serpent with a charge of dust shot in order to carry home his skin when it occurred to him that he would be worth five times as much if he were taken alive.

"I had," he says, "a leather strap with a buckle in my game bag, and with this I determined to noose the snake.

"I started toward him, but when I came near he partly uncoiled, opened his mouth very wide, thereby disclosing his sharp teeth, and, hissing spitefully, struck at me. I dodged behind a small tree and, leaning out as far as I dared, tried several times to noose him.

"After I had teased him for some time he suddenly started off at full speed. I caught my gun and by dint of hard running through the thick scrub managed to head him off. He coiled, and again I tried the noose, but he put his head under his coils in a very sulky manner. I reached out from my shelter behind a tree and caught him by the tail, but he pulled away with great force and glided off again.

"This time he took refuge under a fallen tree and before I could head him off was gliding down the hole of ..."

BLOOD POISON SET IN

Healed in one place, broke out in another—Cure effected by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Truth is often stranger than fiction and many of the cures brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else.

You generally hear of this great ointment as a cure for eczema or piles. In the case we report today the trouble was blood poison. You know how dreadfully dangerous this is. You know how helpless doctors are in its treatment. Read about this cure brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George, Ont., writes: "I feel like sounding the praises of Dr. Chase's Ointment. While threshing grain ... badly hurt. One of the men who was pitching sheaves ... and ran the prongs of the fork into my son's leg. He did not take much notice of it and in a day or two it got sore and very itchy and blood poison set in. We did everything for it but it would heal in one place and break out at another and kept on this way for three months.

"Finally I thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment and in a week's time we noticed a wonderful change. By the use of three boxes he was completely cured and the wounds healed up. There has not been a sign of a spot on him since.

"I might also state that my husband was cured of a very bad case of piles by the use of two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is a wonderful ointment."

Wherever there is itching, irritation of the skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with every assurance that ...

What Would Happen If a Dead Sun Invaded Our Solar System.

It is possible, though it is not proved, that stars may sometimes approach one another and even "leap madly from their spheres." "What would happen were an unknown star or a dead sun to invade our solar system?" asks a writer in the London Illustrated News, who answers his query in two ways. In the first place the star might crash straight into the sun and by the heat of the ... reduce the sun and all its planets to a nebulous mass without form or structure. But it is more mathematically probable that just as comets approach, circle and recede from the sun so the starry invader of our system would approach our system and recede from it, having altered it beyond recognition.

But what would be its effect upon our sun? The sun as we know it today is explosive ... of flame which would consume a little planet like ours at a mouthful, continually ... from it with speeds of several hundred miles a second. This enormous explosive force is restrained only by the greater force of the sun's gravity. But if an approaching star as great as the sun came within striking distance of it, then along the line joining the two bodies each would begin to pull the other as today the moon pulls up the earth's oceans.

The mighty pull of the invading star would neutralize the sun's gravity in one direction and the sun would, in a sense, explode ... that from our ancestral sun and from opposite sides of it would fly two great lengthening arms of matter reaching far beyond the farthest planet ...

An Incident of the Theater In the Earlier Days.

Early in the season of 1856-7, said J. M. Barron, the veteran actor, we were in Petersburg, Va., at old Phoenix hall. The business was such that nightly long rows of nice green seats could be seen from the stage.

In those good old times the utility people did not get more than $20 a week. The leading people received due ... We had ... an actor named Moon, and a bright Moon he was, but he was so lazy his shadow would not follow him. He was often late. The star was Charles Couldock, and those ...

We were rehearsing "The Willow Copse" ... The call boy started ... "Mr. Moon."

The prompter called "Mr. Moon."

No Moon.

Couldock began to pace from the ... No Moon.

Finally Couldock bawled out: "Where is that Moon—that ... idiot? Always late and doesn't know his cues when he hears them."

No Moon yet. It appeared that Mistress Moon had presented the old man with a fine daughter—a new Moon. The father Moon went out to celebrate with the boys and later on was wheelbarrowed home a full Moon.

BIG PRAIRIE FIRE WEST

Large Numbers Of Men Ordered Out From Town And Fight For Hours

An urgent call for fire fighters was received over the phone by Constable Tucker from the farm residence of A. W. Roseborough, three miles west of town, early on Saturday afternoon and in less than an hour's time the Constable had several wagon loads of stalwarts despatched to the scene of the fire.

Quite a number had congregated from the country for the big auction sale and were ordered out to fight the elements. Their services were however, needed, as the fire was a bad one and but for the energetic steps taken by Mr. Tucker in conveying men to the scene there is little doubt but the farmhouse, buildings and grain on the Roseborough farm would have been utterly consumed by the fire. As it was the beaters had a hard fight to prevent it running up the pasture field to the buildings. A very high wind was blowing and the fiery elements swept along at astonishing speed in a north and westerly course to the river valley the strenuous efforts of the fighters plying their wet sacks and bunches of willow switches, beating out the eastern edge as it advanced.

The fire soon ran on to Bert Wood's homestead which runs into the river bottom, and were the G. T. P. [illegible] Larson [illegible]

[illegible]

THE TONGUE.

It Appears That This Organ Can Be Eloquent Even When Silent.

From the observations made by a physiognomist it appears that the tongue when quite still can be as eloquent in giving its owner away as when it is wagging sixteen to the dozen. This is a hard fact for a silent man to swallow—in silence. His only remedy is to keep well so as to obviate the necessary injunction of the doctor to put his tongue out, for by this thrust out sign the doctor shall know him.

The tongue of the talker when obtruded inclines to the right side of the mouth, we are asked to believe, whereas the seldom used tongue gravitates to the left side. Orators, preachers and barristers are endowed with right sided tongues. Verbally parsimonious persons have left sided tongues.

Furthermore, "the tongue that shoots out straight without turning or wavering indicates a solid, reliable man of affairs." Tongues that turn up indicate impracticable natures. A downward drooping tongue belongs to a person born to poverty and a ready eye for the hopeless side of things.

The cruel tongue flattens and broadens when extended. The delicate speaking organ with curled up edges is the property of an imaginative and artistic being. When the tongue issues forth as if gripped in a dental vise it signifies a love of life more than ordinary.

Finally we are warned that the individual who thrusts forth his tongue to its extremest verge is a person to whom no secret should ever be confided, for he is an irresponsible chatterer.—London Chronicle.

HE WANTED A PARROT.

The Use to Which the Old Man Would Put the Green Bird.

We are all striving for two things—success and happiness. To get these many of us are struggling for a third—fortune. In striving to attain our desires many of us need a green parrot. In a little town in Iowa, in the [illegible] a great stretch of timber and meadow, a man built a castle. Something over $23,000 he spent in building a home. It was finished within with the finest polished woods. The foundation was of brownstone, the windows of French plate, and every detail was carried out in the best manner. He had grown to be an old man. He had always lived in a modest cottage of six rooms. This mansion had fifteen. On one side there was a magnificent stone arch over the paved drive that led up to the house. He had just completed showing a friend [illegible] the place and reached this point when the visitor exclaimed:

"Well, John, you ought to be happy. This is a magnificent home. Here is everything one could wish for."

"Wal," replied the old man, who was a cattle buyer, "a fellow always wants something else."

"What on earth could you want?" was the query.

"A green parrot to hang up thar in the drive."

"Why a green parrot?"

"So every morning afore I drive out he would say, 'John, you're a darn fool.'"

Couldn't Turn It.

The eye of little Willie's teacher was sad and sorry for, notwithstanding that he was her favorite pupil, he stood before her convicted of the heinous charge of a theft of candy from a fellow pupil. It was a first offense, however, and she did not desire to inflict corporal punishment. A moral lecture, she thought, would fit the case.

"Bear in mind, Willie," she concluded, "that these temptations can be resisted if determination is used. Always turn a deaf ear to temptation."

Little Willie's lip trembled.

"But, teacher," he answered, "I ain't got a deaf ear."

AFTER THE BATTLE.

An Incident That Seemed to Explain Joshua's Miracle.

There was an incident in our life at Brandy, connected with Gettysburg, which is worth relating. Batchelder, whose map of the battlefield of Gettysburg is authority and whom we had fallen in with while we were there, asked to join our mess at Brandy when he came to the army to verify the positions of the various commands. One night we had just sat down to dinner when he entered our big hospital tent, quite tired.

"Well," he announced after taking his place at the table, "I have been down in the Second corps today, and I believe I have discovered how Joshua made the sun stand still. I first went to —— regiment and had the officers mark on the map the hour of their position at a certain point. Then I went to —— regiment in the same brigade. They declared positively it was one or two hours earlier or later than that given by the other. So it went on, no two regiments or brigades agreeing, and if I hinted that some of them must certainly be mistaken they would set me down by saying with severe dignity, 'We were there, Batchelder, and we ought to know, I guess,' and I made up my mind that it would take a day of at least twenty hours instead of thirteen at Gettysburg to satisfy their accounts. So when Joshua's captains got around him after the fight and they began to talk it over the only way under the heavens that he could ever harmonize their statements was to make the sun stand still and give them all a chance."

Any one who has ever tried to establish the exact position or hour when anything took place in an engagement will confirm Batchelder's experience and possibly, if not too orthodox, accept his explanation of Joshua's feat.—Morris Schaff in Atlantic.

One of the Congressmen who had just returned from Europe, remarked that this story reminded him of a scene on the banks of the Serpentine in London, when a lady and gentleman paused beside a stylishly-clad nurse in bonnet and floating veil, and the lady exclaimed, looking at the children of two and four who accompanied the girl:

"What charming children. Are they not lovely, Edward?"

Edward replied that they were all that the heart of man could desire.

"Will you kiss me?" said the lady.

"They don't usually kiss people, madame," said the nurse, "but of course they will you."

The kissing ceremony completed, the woman of fashion asked:

"PARADISE REGAINED"

THE TREE OF LIFE IN THE PARADISE OF GOD.

Pastor Russell Preaches In Syracuse on the Statement of the Christ to the Thief on the Cross—Elect Will Be the First Fruits and the Restored of Humanity Will Constitute the After Fruits.

Syracuse, N.Y., Aug. 22.—Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, preached here twice to-day to large and attentive audiences. One of the discourses was from the text, "Verily I say unto thee to-day, Thou shalt be with me in Paradise" (Luke xxiii, 43).

Paradise is another name for the Garden of Eden, the abode of bliss. It was lost through the sin of our first parents, but the gracious promise of our great Creator is that this condition of earthly bliss shall be re-established—not merely in a little corner of the earth, but that the whole earth shall become the Paradise of God. Heaven is God's throne and the earth is his footstool, and he assures us, "I will make the place of my feet glorious"—"in due time." How this will be accomplished is the Gospel message.

The Divine promise to Father Abraham, that all the families of the earth should yet be blessed through his Seed, includes the thought of man's full restoration to Divine favor—as before he sinned and before he fell; before Paradise was lost, before man came under the curse or sentence of death. The Jews hoped that Messiah would come and constitute their nation the earthly Kingdom of God and re-establish Paradise with Palestine as its centre. They expected that under his wise ministration, using their nation as his instruments, the Divine Law would extend to all and, by bringing all people into harmony with God, would gradually bring back all to the Paradise state.

It was in full harmony with this expectation that the dying thief asked the Lord to remember him when he would come into his Kingdom, the Kingdom whose dominion would establish righteousness in the earth, and thus convert the world, under Divine favor, into the Paradise of God. Our Lord's answer was that verily, truly, his request would be granted—the thief would yet be with him in Paradise. Paradise has not yet been established, because God's Kingdom has not yet come to earth and it delays until a certain work for the Church shall be accomplished.

It is not the Divine intention to make of the nation of Israel God's Kingdom in the highest sense of that word, though it will be actively identified with the heavenly Kingdom as its earthly representative. God is selecting during this Gospel Age a new nation, Spiritual Israel, from every nation, people, kindred and tongue. At our Lord's First Advent and subsequently he gathered from Israel such as were saintly and ready for the Kingdom; and since then he has been taking out from other nations enough to complete the foreordained number of the "elect" Church. These will constitute the Kingdom per se, and it cannot be set up or established in power until this election or selection shall have been completed and the "elect" "changed" or glorified on the spiritual plane by the power of the First Resurrection.

Paradise or the Garden of the Lord, not only represents that earthly condition which will be restored for the benefit and blessing of the natural man, as the reward of his obedience to the rules of Emmanuel's Kingdom during the Millennial Age, but it also applies in a figurative sense to the glorious and heavenly position which God has in reservation for the Church. Thus we read in the Book of Revelation that the Lord has promised to the overcomers of the Church that "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God" (Revelation ii, 7).

This is a grandly beautiful and symbolic message and promise assuring us of the happiness and heavenly bliss in eternal life conditions of all who are faithful followers of Christ in the present age—walking in Jesus' footsteps in the "narrow way." The Book of Revelation pictures the history of this Gospel Age down into the Millennial Age and shows us Paradise re-established with the Heavenly City, the glorified Church, as its centre or capital. The River of Life is pictured as flowing from under the Throne. On either bank of its crystal waters of Truth and grace grow the trees of Life, after the manner of Eden of old. The future state will all be Paradise. The completeness of blessedness will first be manifested in the Church on the spiritual plane and, secondly, it will be manifested in the Ancient Worthies on the earthly plane—perfected Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the holy prophets—the earthly representatives of the heavenly Kingdom. Gradually the paradisaical condition shall fill the whole earth. The wilderness shall blossom as the rose and the solitary places shall be glad and streams shall break forth in the deserts, as we read in Isaiah xxxv. The morally lame shall learn to walk in the paths of righteousness. Yea, they shall leap for joy, as they come to a knowledge of the grace and goodness of God. The world's eyes of understanding shall all be opened and their deaf ears shall be unstopped, that they may hear and see the goodness and mercy, the justice and the love of our God. The willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land, but the evil doers shall be cut off in the Second Death. Gradually the Paradise area will be spread abroad until in the end of the Millennium, they shall include the whole earth. Gradually the numbers enjoying Paradise shall increase until, in the end of the Millennium, the entire race of Adam shall experience this blessed privilege of God's love and mercy through Christ.

As Paul, like John the Revelator, was caught also to Paradise in vision and saw the glorious things of the future age, which he was not permitted to explain to us, because the due time had not yet come. Neither was John the Revelator permitted to reveal fully the particulars of the Paradise condition. He could merely give us a few symbolical hints or suggestions respecting the glories of Paradise restored.

We have already noticed that Paradise was lost by sin through disobedience of the heavenly command. Life and Eden bliss and Divine favor and fellowship were all lost to Adam and to us, his children, under the death sentence. There was no hope for any of us any more than for the brute beast, for while the latter was born to die, man, created with possibilities of life eternal, was sentenced to the loss of all. Indeed, under the demoralizing influence of sin and death we find many of the human family really more degraded than the brute creation and apparently less worthy of Divine favor. But God, rich in mercy, in the great love wherewith he loves us, provided for mankind a recovery from the sentence of sin and death, while he has made no provision for future life for the brute creation.

God's provision for man's recovery from the sentence of death is the story of the "Cross of Christ." Because a man had sinned the redeemer must be a man. Because the penalty was human death, the perfect man must die for the sinner's release from death sentence—to uplift the willing out of sin and death conditions up, up, up to fellowship with God and eternal life. Because the race of Adam inherited naturally his mental, moral and physical defects, therefore none of his posterity was worthy of eternal life. But in the Divine arrangement, as Adam had involved all of his children and their Paradise home in the wreck of sin and death, so a redemption has been effected through Christ.

The great Work of Messiah will therefore be the restoration of the world to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. The work of restoration, St. Peter tells us, has been spoken of by the "mouth of all God's holy prophets since the world began" and will be accomplished by Messiah at his Second Coming (Acts iii, 21). But the Divine Plan changes not. Sin is still objectionable to God, will always be so. And the Divine sentence is that no sinner may have eternal life. Hence the offer of Divine Grace is merely that all who will may have Divine assistance, resurrection, restoration, uplifting out of sin and death conditions to perfect conditions. But these things will be accomplished only in those who are willing and obedient. Only such shall eat the good of the land—the fruits of Paradise (Acts iii, 23).

Furthermore it is the Divine arrangement, and a just one, that any good and noble deed of the present life works a measure of character development which will be assistful in the future life, enabling the faithful the sooner to mount up to the full perfection of earthly life. Correspondingly every wilful sin, every violation of conscience and principle, works a defilement and impairment of manhood, which, likewise, will have its effect in the future life in the difficulty of rising out of degradation to the heights of Divine perfection and approval and everlasting life. If all mankind could appreciate these facts what an influence it would have in restraining, governing and developing self control and true manhood.

Does some one [illegible] he who redeemed Adam [illegible] home, and all his race [illegible] poses a restoration of all [illegible] not begun this restitution work during the eighteen hundred years since the sacrifice of himself? The Scriptures answer that another feature of the Divine program is being carried out. The Lord is [illegible] the "elect" Church from Israel and of the nations to be Messiah's associates in his Kingdom [illegible] great work of uplift [illegible] restitution. The "elect" Church [illegible] select [illegible] the Scriptures [illegible] "A firstfruits [illegible]" (James [illegible]). The world of restored humanity will be the after fruits.

The Scriptures exhort such as in the present time are blessed with the hearing ear to give heed to the special invitation of the elect. They exhort such as have the eye of faith to aspire to the crown of glory and joint-heirship that is now being tendered to a very select class. "He that hath an ear let him hear." "He that hath an eye let him see." As many of us as have been blessed of the Lord with the ear of faith [illegible] let us rejoice [illegible] opportunity. Let us [illegible] to make our calling and election sure to this heavenly estate of glory, honor and immortality and joint-heirship with our Lord, the King of kings and Lord of lords!

Both the thieves crucified with our Lord lost their right to the original Eden or Paradise of God through father Adam's [illegible] as did we all. Both of these thieves were "born in sin and shapen in iniquity; in sin did [their] mothers conceive them," as with us all. Both of these thieves were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, as were we all, for "Christ Jesus, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." "He is the propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." Thus, as we have seen, the Redeemer has made provision for both of these thieves as well as for all of us—all of Adam's race—to be recovered from the [illegible] conditions of the fall and to be restored to Paradise. The Church now [illegible] during this Gospel Age [illegible] spiritual Paradise [illegible] the two thieves and the [illegible] of mankind will have their [illegible] during the Millennium. Their opportunity will be for a return to earthly life and perfection and happiness and an earthly Eden world-wide. How much grander a work will thus result from our Lord's death than we had previously supposed!

Let none suppose, however, that these two thieves will enter Paradise on the same footing. While both were guilty of robbery they evidently were [illegible]

[illegible] and innocence of crime. Such cruelty implied a deep degradation of mind—implied that he was sin-hardened. And yet we must remember that others of the multitude standing by used similarly cruel language. And we must remember that there are many thieves who are not caught and many perhaps, as morally wrong, as evilly intentioned, who, for fear of the consequences, never committed the wrong. We can even suppose that some of the scribes and Pharisees and Doctors of Divinity of those days were in God's sight much worse than the thieves crucified—murderers at heart, while the latter was [illegible] St. Peter declares, "I wot, brethren, that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers," when you crucified the Lord of glory.

Ignorance and superstition and inherited depravity all bore down upon the impenitent thief to a degree which we are not capable of properly estimating. The Lord will judge him—both thieves—all mankind. The penitent thief will unquestionably have a twofold blessing. First he will be blessed because of his penitent attitude of mind; secondly, because of his faithfulness in expressing that penitence and mercy to our Lord in his distress. Our Lord declared that even a cup of cold water given to the least of his disciples will have its reward. Surely it will be in harmony, then, that the penitent thief will have a reward for his defence of the Master.

That reward will consist, first of all, in the blessing [illegible] through the [illegible] merciful sentiment. A reward will come to him in proportion to the experience of the [illegible] the time [illegible] who [illegible] receive a [illegible] the one [illegible] receive a [illegible] one who [illegible] receive [illegible] Redeemer [illegible]

The [illegible] only sympathy [illegible] entirely [illegible] teachings [illegible] special [illegible] cannot [illegible] it is [illegible] in the [illegible] were [illegible] clares [illegible] suring [illegible] just [illegible] the [illegible] and when the heavenly Kingdom shall be established [illegible] the general awakening [illegible] from the [illegible] as [illegible] Let us [illegible] Divine [illegible] Paradise [illegible] the [illegible] begotten [illegible] nature [illegible] ment [illegible] Second Death.

A LETTER TO THE FARMERS

Secretary of Grain Growers Association Writes Members

Following is a letter written by the Secretary of the Manitoba Grain Growers Association to [illegible] members and [illegible]

[illegible]

...Port Arthur [illegible] Empire [illegible] Fort William. They are also now building terminal elevators at the Lake front and doubling the capacity of the Consolidated and Empire. It will thus be seen at a glance that all the terminal elevators with the exception of the C. P. R., and all the interior elevators with the exception of a few owned privately, are under U. S. control. In other words they are held by Patton and Peavy and their associates. There only remains those owned by the large milling companies. So that we are face to face with the stern fact that the large milling firms form the only barrier to complete control of our elevator system by the men who control the grain system of the United States.

Although the elevators owned by the large milling firms are not directly connected with the U. S. control, it is well known that the Ogilvie Milling Co. has been for years one of the worst of grain speculators. During the continuance of the famous "Patten Corner" the daily press at intervals gave lists of some of the associates of Mr. Patten who shared in his millions, and invariably F. W. Thomson, of the Ogilvie Milling Co., appeared in the lists. So it is apparent that no relief can be expected from that quarter.

Last fall the farmers sold their wheat at from 85 to 90 cents per bushel, but during the [illegible] months from January to July the same wheat sold at from [illegible] [illegible]

There is a [illegible] in the minds of many as to the true character of [illegible] farmers and most business men regard the Company as being similar to any other commission firm, charging for services rendered with a view of earning dividends for its share holders. This is an erroneous idea and does not at all express the true purpose of the undertaking.

Some two or three years after the organization of the Grain Growers' Association, and when its members began to understand the system under which our grain was marketed, the leaders of this movement clearly saw that no modification of the "system"—which in its operation caused so much loss to the grain producer—by legislation or government regulation, would result in permanent benefit, the only effective remedy being to provide an agency through which our grain product could be marketed by ourselves, thus cutting out all middlemen [illegible] ...the idea of establishing the farmers' [illegible] farmers themselves [illegible]

...of a dividend or its creating conditions for better and more economical handling of grain. This fact is clearly set forth by the experience of the Company.

They made the same charge as the [illegible]

[illegible] ...better than [illegible] the Farmers' Co., he would have netted 5 per bushel more than he realized.

The farmer should remember that no one can handle his grain for nothing and that no one can handle cheaper than we can ourselves, and that anything [illegible] company over cost of handling comes back to the farmer in some form or other.

I want to especially press on the farmers the fact, that if the Company this year does as good business as last, they will have capital enough out of earnings to build a terminal elevator of our own for next year's crop, if the Government does not in the meantime come to our aid, and thus check the manipulation that is going on there under the present system. That would be a splendid achievement, AND THE FARMERS CAN DO IT OUT OF THE SAVINGS EFFECTED IN HANDLING THEIR OWN GRAIN THROUGH THEIR OWN AGENCY. The western farmers are paying "elevator interests" for handling their track wheat each year more than it would take to build terminals.

There is a special reason why farmers should consign their grain to their own agency this year. As already stated, the Combine sold probably over 20 millions of Manitoba wheat before August 1st in Europe for October and November delivery on a basis of $1.00 [illegible] Fort William. They then pounded the market but till October wheat reached [illegible]. They are now paying around $1.00 in store Fort William for cash wheat, and are after the farmer to give them his wheat at that price [illegible] be [illegible] to deal with them, but consigns his grain to his own agency, the combine has to come to them to get their wheat or forfeit their sales, and they will make them put up the price. [illegible] readily see how much better the manager of the farmers agency, who has several hundred cars to sell and who knows the "game," can deal with these gentlemen than the individual farmer who has per

Receipts of Wheat

"Conservative marketing of wheat" says the Canadian Farm journal, "was advocated by all the market sharps in North America. There was a big crop, everyone argued, and if the farmers insisted on dumping their grain into the elevators, prices would go down with the dull sickening thud, which has become proverbial. Chapter 12

A [illegible] opposite side of the street he would have noticed the look of dislike in the eyes of those he passed. They drew away from him, and one spoke—to no one in particular and with [illegible] fensive and fervid. But weather beaten, tanned, indifferently clad and with a small brown dog following him, the newcomer passed [illegible] the stinging scrutiny. He did not stare about him after the manner of a stranger, though so far as he knew he had never been in the place before.

But Harry Sanderson now was not the man who had ridden into oblivion in the motor car. The rector of St. James' was in a strange eclipse. Mentally and externally he had reverted to the old Satan Sanderson of the brilliant [illegible] of the [illegible] The [illegible] man and [illegible] during his divinity years was in abeyance. It showed itself only in the affection he lavished on the [illegible] nameless dog that followed him like a brown, shaggy shadow.

He was like that old self of his, and yet if he had but known it he was wonderfully like some one else [illegible] some one who had belonged to the long ago and [illegible] past that still eluded him, some one who had been a part also of the life of this very town till a little over a month before, when he had left it with dread dogging his footsteps.

Curious coincidences had wrought together for this likeness. In the past weeks Harry had grown perceptibly thinner. A spare beard was now on his chin, and the fiery sun that had [illegible]

"I drink to the health of the only other gentleman present," he said, and tossed the drink off. A snort and a truculent shuffle came from the standing men. Their faces were dark. Tom Felder, the lawyer, entered the saloon just in time to see "Big" Devlin, the owner of the corner dance hall, rise from a table, rolling up flannel sleeves along tattooed arms. He saw him stride forward and, with a well directed shove, send the shambling intruder [illegible] across the floor.

The lawyer saw an extraordinary thing. The emptied glass rang [illegible] the bar, the arm that held [illegible] straightened, the lithe form behind it seemed to expand, and the big bulk of Devlin went backward through the doorway and collapsed in a sprawling [illegible] the pavement.

"[illegible] my part," said an even, infuriating voice from the threshold, "I prefer [illegible]."

Here was one who, as [illegible] the freighter, said afterward, "hadn't the sand of a sick coyote" bearding a bully and the most formidable antagonist the town afforded.

The Man Who Had Long Ago Bought an Eight-Day Clock.

"You don't remember, I reckon," said the sour-faced man, putting his arms on the showcase, "that I bought a clock of you twenty-five years ago?"

"I certainly do not," answered the elderly jeweler, "but I'll take your word for it if you say you did."

"Well, I did. It was twenty-five years ago last Monday."

"Remember what you paid for it?"

"Yes. I paid you $10."

"Ever had to get it repaired?"

"No."

"It's a pretty good clock, then, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes. The clock's all right, but I've found out something about it that you didn't tell me."

"What?"

"Yes. When I bought it I asked you how often I'd have to wind it. You said once a week."

"Well?"

"Well, I've just found out that it'll go eight days without winding."

"Certainly. Most clocks are eight-day clocks. That's to allow for your forgetting to wind it sometimes."

"I never forget to wind it, sir. Regularly every Monday morning for twenty-five years I've wound that clock. That makes fifty-two times a year. If I had known it would run eight days I would have wound it on the eighth day, and I would have had to wind it only forty-six times a year. It takes me about two minutes to wind it up. I've wasted twelve minutes every year on the thing. See? In twenty-five years I've put in 300 minutes, or five hours, one half of a man's working day, standing on a chair and winding up that blamed old clock when it didn't need winding."

"Well," said the stupefied jeweler, "what do you want to do about it?"

"Nothing, sir. I only wanted you to know it, that's all. When you sell an eight-day clock to a man you ought to tell him it's an eight-day clock, not a seven-day, sir."

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Difficulties With Which a Young Actor Had to Struggle.

An actor's life, although often interesting and frequently useful, is by no means easy. When Frederick Warde, the English tragedian, brought his wife and children to America to live with him while he made his way there he was, after various ups and downs, engaged by Mr. Booth to play certain prominent parts. In "Talks In a Library" Mr. Laurence Hutton relates some of the difficulties with which the young actor had to struggle.

The company, long associated with Mr. Booth, with the single exception of Warde, was not assembled, and there could be but one or two rehearsals before the first performance. Warde had never even seen the play of "Othello" and had no idea how to dress it—a very important item to a man who had little money to devote to costumes.

There were, of course, professional persons who could have fitted him out from wig to sandal, but to these he could not afford to go.

He read the tragedy many times, studied his part till he was what is called "letter perfect," and at the Astor library copied many drawings, colored by his own hand, of the dresses he had to wear. These garments and effects were made out of the cheapest material from his own patterns, cut and sewed by his wife, and for six weeks nothing in that house was thought of or talked about but "Othello."

The young man, realizing what it all meant to him, was exceedingly anxious about the results, as was his wife. They lived in a poor, humble little apartment, and he was to take a midnight train to the scene of his great effort only a day or two before he was to make his debut in one of the most important and trying parts of the English drama.

I went to the train with him, and just as we were starting Mrs. Warde [illegible]

OLD POWDERHORNS.

They Were Once Important Implements of Warfare.

TREASURED AS HEIRLOOMS.

Handed Down From Father to Son and From Friend to Friend—Engraved and Ornamented, They Were Used as Gifts Instead of Jeweled Swords.

Modern inventions have robbed warfare of much of its romance and the soldier of much of his old time picturesqueness. Although the powderhorn as an implement of war disappeared long before the magazine gun of today was dreamed of, it wasn't so very long ago, as a matter of fact, that men were carrying powderhorns. Some of the soldiers in the Mexican war, for example, used them.

The powderhorns carried by the fighters in the early days of this country were often of comparatively simple workmanship, but they were cherished and handed down from father to son and from friend to friend. Strange to say, though cherished in this manner, collectors have had a very hard time in locating any great number of the powderhorns used in this country, and this in spite of the large numbers used in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

In the French and Indian war the English and Americans carried 10,000 powderhorns, it has been estimated, to say [illegible] of the number carried by [illegible] the French side. In the Revolution there were, according to [illegible] best estimates, about 10,000 [illegible] derhorns in use in the American army without counting those on the British side. The European [illegible] had long discarded them, of course, but [illegible] colonial allies naturally were equipped with them.

A few years ago Isaac J. Greenwood presented to the New York Historical society a collection of water color pictures of powderhorns he had found still in existence.

Although the search was prosecuted with great diligence, the number of powderhorns actually located and sketched was not much more than 400, showing how quickly the horns have been [illegible] appearing.

Powderhorns are supposed to have come into use almost simultaneously with the invention of gunpowder. A way had to be found to carry the powder and keep it dry, and men quickly found that there wasn't anything better or cheaper in mediaeval times for this purpose than the horns of an animal.

They were in general use in the sixteenth century and were brought to this country by the first settlers. The [illegible] horn whose picture appears in the collection was found near Schenectady, N. Y., and bears the date of 1683.

It was generally the horns of their own cattle that the farmer fighters of America used. The loss of a horn in no wise impaired the usefulness of the animal, and bulls frequently were called upon to make the sacrifice. Such horns were easily obtained and wouldn't rust and could be carried in the rain and through streams without the powder in them getting wet.

They were always worn under the left arm by a strap that went over the right shoulder, the curve in the horn conforming to the shape of the body and serving to keep it out of the way of the wearer. There was a stopple in the small end, and without being unslung the powder could be poured into the right hand and thence into the gun.

Boiled, scraped and cleaned and colored with an orange or yellow dye, which was the way most of the powderhorns were prepared, they lent themselves more readily to ornamentation by the owner than did any other part of his equipment, and it is this fact which has made them particularly interesting as historical relics. Admiring friends in the days when powderhorns were in general use instead of presenting a hero with an engraved sword gave him a finely decorated powderhorn.

Sometimes the horns were made to order and the engraving done by professionals. Many of these horns were beautifully colored, the most popular shade being a sort of orange tint.

Perhaps the most remarkable examples of the engraving are to be seen on the geographical horns whose pictures appear in the Greenwood collection. These geographical horns took the place of pocket maps for the early pioneers. They were the work of professional engravers in places like New York and Boston.

Some of the horns in the collection contain practically complete maps of the old trails and waterways. One of the best of these horns the date of 1767 and shows New York with its harbor filled with ships and New York [illegible]

WHEN WOMAN TAKES HOLD.

What Man May Look Forward to in Time to Come.

Dear Mary—Well, I suppose you are working away in your stuffy office building every day and are very lonely when you get home at night without your little hubby to bring you your kimono and high heeled slippers. It is very nice down here by the sea waves, but I wish my large, brave wife could only be here to enjoy it with me. I do hope that you stay at home nights, but [illegible] know there are pretty tall stories always being told about the goings on of wives in that wicked city with the frisky chorus men and gallant men stenographers when their husbands are away in the summer. Of course I have no doubts about you [illegible]

SMILES, HER BUSINESS.

Woman Makes Living by War on Melancholy.

A new means of earning a living was discovered two years ago by a woman who found herself suddenly without an income. She describes her profession as making people smile.

"You mustn't think that I am or even attempt to be the funny man in the show," she explained to a friend who saw her for the first time since the reverses in her fortune. "You know what I can do—nothing in particular, but just a little of everything. I could always sing well enough to amuse the home folk and our intimate friends, but not to take part in a concert. My painting and sketching are of about a like degree of excellence, while as to reading aloud, I never took a lesson in my life nor tried to do it outside our home circle.

"Well, when all the stocks that had supplied me with an income stopped paying dividends I saw that I must either get busy or content myself with living on my friends. I had a few offers of assistance in the way of invitations, but I decided to do my own stepping into the breach. I conceived the notion of going out by the day or hour to amuse people suffering from melancholy. And, strange as it seems, I have made a success of this business. When patients are scarce I fill up the financial gap by playing for dancing classes.

"My friends all appear to think that I have chosen a melancholy profession. I don't find making sick and sad people smile at all melancholy. The saddest thoughts I experience come to me when I am sitting at the piano playing for children to dance.

"That is one of my engagements during the winter months. [illegible]

THE DIAMOND CUTTER.

His Skill Has Much to Do With the Brilliancy of the Gem.

When the expert looks at a diamond he can tell you in a moment where it came from and even whether it was cut lately or some years ago. He knows by its color whence it comes, for the color of the Brazilian diamond differs from that of the South African, and even in South Africa different colors are found in different mines.

In the rough the diamond has little brilliancy, for there is a crust that must be cut away before it can properly refract the light, and it is this power of refraction which makes the brilliancy of a diamond and has everything to do with its value in the market. The skill of the diamond cutter has much to do with bringing out this brilliancy. He must do the most he can with the rough stone before him and lose as little as possible of the precious weight in the stone.

Diamonds are found in all kinds of queer shapes, for the carbon may be in any position while being crystallized, and the art of crystallization may affect only parts of that carbon. When the expert cutter has a rough diamond before him he judges almost instantly how it will cut to the greatest advantage. If it inclines to the pear shape he will make a pear shaped diamond of it. If it be square or round the cutting will follow the natural lines as closely as possible, so that the loss may be reduced to a minimum.

To make the stone as brilliant as possible the diamond cutter cuts many facets so as to refract the light from as many points as he can. A full cut brilliant has at least forty-eight facets, and so expert are the cutters that they often cut diamonds so small that it requires a hundred to weigh a carat. Each has forty-eight facets.

Corner Stone Fittingly Laid

A Scene of Great Splendor at Provincial Parliament Buildings at Inception of Corner Stone by His Excellency Earl Grey

Edmonton, Oct. 2.—A scene of great splendor, long to be held in remembrance by the thousands of people in attendance was that presented on Parliament Hill yesterday afternoon, when the Provincial Parliament buildings received the inception of the corner stone. throughout the most interesting ceremony and the brilliant speeches which occupied nearly two hours, the platform band and grand stands and all intervening space was crowded by a dense throng of people.

The vice-regal party, on entering the government grounds, proceeded directly to the platform where the ceremony of laying the corner-stone was to take place. After all were seated under the beautifully decorated canopy His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor stepped to the festooned and elevated platform in the centre and expressed the great pleasure of the citizens in welcoming Their Excellencies to lay the corner stone. His Honor said that the Governor General had been there four years ago and it was but fitting that he should again be present on this occasion.

Premier Rutherford was then called upon to read the address of welcome which was inscribed on a magnificent scroll as follows:

To His Excellency the Right Honourable Sir Albert Henry [illegible] Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada.

It is with unfeigned pleasure and pride that I call upon Your Excellency [illegible]

The debt which is owed to Your Excellency's family by His Majesty's Dominions beyond the seas is a matter of history and your own work as a constructive statesman is worthy of that great tradition. The people of this province, at one with the people of the whole Dominion, bear willing tribute to the wisdom with which you have adorned the office that you hold.

Four short years only have elapsed since you presided over the inauguration of the Provincial government—a space of time which seems, looking backwards, to have flown like a night, and yet a [illegible]

Whatever success we have had, whatever progress we have made, however great the change which Your Excellency may observe in your surroundings, I can assure Your Excellency that our hearts are unchanged, and the fact that you have been present with us on these two occasions makes it a very special pleasure for me to hand you this trowel and ask you to perform the ceremony, a ceremony which will be a landmark in the memories of all present.

A. C. RUTHERFORD,
Premier of Alberta.

Hon. W. H. Cushing, minister of public works, under whose administration the buildings are being erected, then read a list of the articles to be placed in the receptacle under the corner stone.

With a few well framed words Premier Rutherford raised the silver trowel from its receptacle on the table, and, handing it to His Excellency, asked him to officiate at the laying of the stone. Before the eyes of His Excellency a copper box was produced in which were secreted the articles. The lid of the box was securely clamped by workmen present under the direction of the building superintendent. Mortar was then applied about the box and at the proper moment the huge overhanging crane lifted the four and a half ton stone to its place accompanied by the click of a score of cameras. His Excellency tapped the stone with the trowel and declared it "well and truly laid." Turning to the great throng of humanity who were impatient to know what was going on Earl Grey delivered an appropriate and stirring address.

Addresses were also delivered by the Lieut. Governor, the Premier of Saskatchewan and Hon. I. B. Lucas of Ontario.

JIMMY'S OPPORTUNITY.

A Very Important Conversation That Settled Matters.

By MARGARET LUDLOWE SMITH.

Jimmy Tidgett was downcast. Everybody was against him. He had failed and in the sweeping generalization Jimmy included every one. He had failed in his examinations, in his attempt to make money, in his efforts to help his mother, and in the game of the affections of Annie Laurie. Everything was against him, and he was ready to admit that the world was a failure.

From the standpoint of a disinterested spectator Jimmy was to be congratulated upon the fact that he had not reached a state of mind which would lead to suicide. But the spectator is not always a true judge of the feelings of the actor, and Jimmy, in the throes of his despair, was ready to end it all.

Jimmy's estimation that he was all the failure he could ever be was not perfectly correct. There was another opportunity in store for him, and he brought against the world a fight that left the latter very much the worse for wear.

Annie Laurie was the cause of the trouble. Jimmy had known her for years, and had always been very much interested in her. He had never thought of her as a possible wife, however, until he had met her in the company of Harry Carroll, who was a rival in the affections of the fair Annie. Then Jimmy realized that he loved her, and that he must win her or lose her forever.

Jimmy's attempt to win Annie's love was a failure. He had not the courage to tell her of his love, and he was not the kind of a man to win a woman by force. He was not a coward, but he was not a fighter. He was a dreamer, and he dreamed of Annie Laurie, and of the happiness that would be his if she were his wife. But he could not tell her of his love, and he could not win her by force, so he was a failure.

Jimmy's failure to win Annie's love was the cause of his failure in other things. He had no ambition, and he could not work with any degree of success unless he was ambitious. He had failed in his examinations, and he had failed in his efforts to help his mother, and he had failed in his attempts to make money. He was a failure, and he knew it.

Jimmy's despondency was at its height when Annie Laurie came to him and asked him to help her. She had come to him because she knew that he loved her, and because she knew that he would do anything in the world for her. She told him that Harry Carroll had asked her to marry him, and that she had refused him because she did not love him. She told him that Carroll had threatened to kill himself if she refused him, and that she was afraid he would do it. She asked Jimmy to go to Carroll and tell him that she would not marry him, and to persuade him to live.

Jimmy's first impulse was to refuse to do anything for Carroll, but when he looked into Annie Laurie's eyes and saw the pleading look in them he could not refuse her. He promised to do as she asked, and she left him with a smile of gratitude on her face.

Jimmy found Carroll at his home, and told him that Annie Laurie had refused him because she did not love him, and that she was afraid he would kill himself if she refused him. Carroll admitted that he had threatened to kill himself, and that he was afraid he would do it if Annie Laurie refused him. Jimmy then told Carroll that Annie Laurie loved him, and that she would marry him if he would promise not to kill himself.

Carroll was overjoyed at the news that Annie Laurie loved him, and he promised Jimmy that he would not kill himself. Jimmy then left Carroll, and went to see Annie Laurie. He told her that Carroll would live, and that he loved her. She told him that she loved Carroll, and that she would marry him. Jimmy congratulated her, and left her.

Jimmy's opportunity had come, and he had won a victory over himself. He had made a sacrifice for the woman he loved, and he had won the respect of the man who had been his rival. He had made a fight, and he had won. He was a success.

Jimmy's opportunity had come, and he had taken it. PAUL JONES' PROMISE.

Our Great Naval Hero and the Duchess of Chartres.

The Duchess of Chartres was an ardent friend of the great naval hero, Paul Jones, whose name is honored the United States of the Sea." The duchess has a royal patroness and a very great, and Paul Jones was a rather self-made man and the son of a Scotch gardener at but in the exchange of gifts and compliments which, according to the custom of the day in France attended their friendship he was not to be outshone.

It a luncheon which she gave just before he sailed from France in the August of 1780 the duchess rose as she wish carried the war to the very shore of Britain it was the good fortune of Paul Jones to share in a conversation him king a French naval engineer in which the grandeur of the duchess had become a commonplace part and he defined and explain his conceptions on that occasion, showing a knowledge of every ship and every captain engaged and winning on the spot the ardent personal admiration of Mme de Chartres.

At the close of the feast she presented him a valuable watch which had been her grandfather's. Taken by mistake, the American regretted he could not accepted it with a grace that charmed the every company, promising that in return. Effortless friend him, he would never slip out of his left fingers at her feet."

It was a daring boast, but in A. G. Snell's biography of Paul Jones it is related how he kept his word. The watch covered the mysterious victory of the Bonhomme Richard over the Serapis, concerning which the river wrote the duchess a letter, saying: "The enemy surrendered at thirty-five minutes past 10 p. m. by your watch, when I ceased to rely to the wonders of victory."

That was a person to delight a society that covered in pretty persons, and the duchess was mighty satisfied. When Paul Jones reached Paris she gave a grand banquet in his honor, just before it ended he reminded her of her gift and his promise. A servant was sent to his room and returned with a box whose contents made the duchess look amid the rejoicings and compliments of the company.

"Your royal highness remembers the impossibility of keeping my promise in mind," explained the hero, bowing, "and, knowing the English have proved me to a forgiver on this deeds, and she is now at Lorient with French colors flying. The best I can do toward keeping my word of two years ago is to present to your highness the sword of the brave officer who commanded her. I have the honor to surrender to the brother of your wife." The crown surrendered it in lay upon of the breast of men—he sword of Captain De Kon. Virtuous enough of his fortunate majesty's into ship, the Serapis."

Fooled.

He was a darter, and was patiently waiting for his first patient.

Though he was in the upstairs office he could hear every word of what was going on in the room below.

He strolled through the cheap market and examined the wares with a very near resemblance.

"Here's a dainty!" said he and the bored him some.

Then he waited for four long and lonely hours, and about midnight the last customer was duly opened, and the man ambled down the stairs.

He sorted him by the arm and cried "Stop!"

"Do you want a doctor?"

"No," was the gruff reply; "I want more customers."—London Answers.

The Chinese almanac is said to have the largest circulation of any book in the world. Eight million copies of it are edited and distributed for sale in the various provinces, not a single copy being returned to the publishers.

Women in Saxin.

The women of the inner classes in Saxin do not make calls or read books and have no "parties" in the American sense of the word. They do their household work and go to church, and that is as much time is of this. Their husbands are very jealous of them, and they grow old and weary before their time.

INHALATION.

To cure rheumatism it is necessary to rid the system of the poisons of uric acid, and in do this a proper diet is even more important than the use of drugs, though in very severe cases the latter are not to be dropped in connection with the dieting that is absolutely essential.

The Montreal Sanitarium General hospital of Boston shows the following diet for its rheumatic patients: Breakfast of cereals cereal white bread (toasted on the last day) dairy, cocoa, thin, milk, eggs, beef, puddings, oysters, beans, peas, all kinds of vegetables, except potatoes, tomatoes and asparagus, rice, broth, fresh fish, butter, cheese, buttermilk, cream, gelatine wafers and toast, dried red meats, sweets or potatoes, white bread and sugars.

The sensitive use of water both internally and externally plays a large part in the prevention or cure of rheumatism. Upon rising, prayers, either hot or cold, taken before breakfast every morning is credited to start the organs of digestion for the day, and hot water also should be taken between meals. Often the pain water will be enough to move a slightly constipated person, but if not a mild measure may be taken instead. It is very essential to keep the bowels open by means of laxatives.

Uric acid in the system is a poison, and it must not be forgotten that poisonous waste matter is also eliminated through the skin. The pores of the skin must be kept freely open and not allowed to become clogged if we are to ask of nature in the highest degree.

Maddening Smell.

On the Amazon river several Indian tribes use small, round pastes, which is made of the seeds of a species of tree. When a band of such mixing is performed on the people become high ly intoxicated and then use the smell. The effect of person in so violent that no near drops as if shot and dies in a minute. Other tribes more accustomed to it are merely carried, dazed and staring as if dead. The effect soon subsides.

Breathing.

For each respiration an adult inhales and exhales about a pint of air.

The "Zeppelin telegram" is not the first hoax which jokers have played upon the Kaiser.

A few years ago a paragraph appeared in a Berlin daily stating that Prince Henry, who had just returned from his visit to the United States, had brought home, as a present to his brother, a number of plants of a new variety of crimson carnation. "As everyone knows," the paragraph concluded, "the red carnation is his Imperial Majesty's favorite flower."

LOBENGULA'S HOARD.

Long Search Made For Matabele Chief's Treasure.

A remarkable story of hidden treasure which once belonged to Lobengula, the famous king of the Matabele, and is to be reckoned in millions is published by The Transvaal Leader. Five men only knew the place where the treasure was deposited, and of them but one remains in the land of the living to-day, this being John Jacobs, a native minister who was at one time private secretary to Lobengula, and who has lately returned to Johannesburg. The an expedition in quest of the buried fortune, set out by him as follows:

Fourteen million dollars in coin.

Thirty-six bars of raw gold.

COUNT FRONTENAC WAS A REMARKABLE MAN.

Founder of the Feudal Regime In Quebec Came to Canada to Escape the Temper of His Wife and Quarrelled All the Time He Was Here—Came Again When He Was 69 Years Old.

Count Frontenac, General and Lieutenant-Governor for Louis XIV. in New France, at the age of 15 showed an uncontrollable passion for the life of a soldier, and by his 25th year occupied the rank of brigadier-general.

Frontenac married in Paris, but his happiness was short. The lady's temper was imperious, while Frontenac was the most wayward and headstrong of men.

QUEER HOSPITALITY.

A Curious Experience in the Wilds of Arabia.

Of the curious ideas of hospitality held by some of the natives of that wild country lying between Bagdad and Damascus two travelers, Captain Butler and Captain Aylmer, tell in the Geographical Magazine: "We found Feysal ibn Rashid a minor ruler of Arabia sitting in a low room, the roof of which was supported by wooden pillars. All round the sides of the room were spread carpets, on which sat his visitors and members of his court. He is a man of thirty-three years, with a dark, pointed beard, good, regular features, but eyes that are cold and cruel, and he has a nervous, fidgety manner and was all the time arranging his abba (cloak) and combing and curling his mustache and beard ... PRIVATE HYGIENE.

What it Means to the Individual and to the Race.

Private hygiene is important and means a revolution in our habits of living. It means fresh air perpetually flowing through our houses and more of our lives spent outdoors. It means common sense in diet—the avoidance of bolting food, from which dyspepsia springs, and the re-education of normal food instincts, the avoidance of gluttony on the one side and body starvation on the other, the avoidance of alcohol, the most potent of the predisposing causes of tuberculosis, and the avoidance of dirty infected milk and meat. It means the "simple life," free from overexertion on the one hand and indolence on the other, the habit of normal sleep and the emancipation from worry.

In giving this prescription Dr. Trudeau once said to me: "It is as simple as bathing in the waters of Jordan, and that is why people are so slow to follow it."

But today people are following, and following rapidly. When they see a man who only a few years ago was so ill of tuberculosis that he could scarcely drag himself out upon a porch now run twenty-five miles for pure love of exercise, or when they see nine college men inside of half a year double their endurance through rational diet alone, or when they learn that ex-President Roosevelt developed from a weak and timid boy into the personification of strength and courage and that Cornaro, about to die at thirty-seven, abjured all unhygienic habits and prolonged his life to 103, they begin to realize the practical value of personal hygiene.—Professor Irving Fisher in Century.

System Poisoning

CONSTIPATION

Do not be satisfied with temporary relief—Cleanse the system and make cure lasting with DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Constipation begins with the bowels but it does not end there.

You must also consider the way it affects the liver, the kidneys, the digestive system and in fact the whole human body.

Headaches, backaches, aching limbs, indigestion, biliousness, kidney derangements and the most serious diseases imaginable often have their beginning with constipation of the bowels.

There is one treatment which has a direct and combined action on the bowels, the liver and the kidneys and gets these organs into good working order in remarkably quick time, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

They afford relief quickly, but they do more than that. They positively cure constipation and insure lasting regularity of the bowels by setting the liver right.

Policeman Peter C. Morris, 10 Wascana Ave., Toronto, first, states:

"I was troubled for years with habitual constipation and have spent considerable on so-called remedies, and can gladly say that I have been completely cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and shall be pleased to personally recommend them to any person who wishes to interview me."

It scarcely seems wise to trifle with medicines which merely afford temporary relief, when, by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, you not only get prompt relief but also a thorough cleansing of the whole excretory system and lasting benefits by the restoration of the health and activity of the liver.

ODD JOBS ON WARSHIPS.

Many Ways For the Bluejackets to Make Extra Money.

The possible methods of making extra money on shipboard are manifold. "Tailorizing" is one of the most profitable. While a ship's tailor is detailed to most of our ships his duties are limited to making necessary alterations in the uniforms which are issued to the members of the crew. Many enlisted men own sewing machines, upon which they do repair work, and they also do odd jobs for officers, such as pressing and cleaning. A handy man with the needle can also make a handsome sum by doing fancy work. Some of the most delicate embroidery work has been done by sailormen.

The ship's barber also makes a comfortable living in addition to his regular pay, and the distribution of prizes at target practice enriches the coffers of the gun crew by a considerable sum. Men who are detailed to duty on board submarine boats are allowed an additional $5 a month and besides $1 a day for every day the boat is submerged. Bluejackets detailed as signalmen, as coxswains of power boats or in charge of boats are allowed extra pay. A crew messman receives $3 a month for performing that somewhat menial function, and the man who is not ashamed to "take in washing" can easily double his navy pay. Every bluejacket is expected to perform the laundering himself, but there are always men who prefer to pay for having the service done.

One of the novel methods of earning an honest penny is for a man with a descriptive knack—usually a yeoman—to prepare an interesting letter upon the cruise of the ship or some of the strange ports visited, the honors paid the vessel, the entertainments offered and describing the customs of the inhabitants ... NOTED BY A TOURIST.

Some of the Queer Things That Were Observed Abroad.

About half one's time in traveling abroad is spent in buying stamps. No matter how many I put on a letter I had no faith to believe that it would reach America. I found that I could send a letter with one stamp on it if I paid enough for it, also that I could get a denomination of which it would take twenty. In Greece I put fifteen sphinxes and pyramids on the front of a letter and five on the back. As for postal cards, imagine asking for one in the Belgian language—"een Spanbriefkaart" ... [illegible]

SPEAKS WELL FOR DISTRICT

Chas. Hodgins of Welsdale Carries Off Eleven Prizes

Welsdale district secured a veritable triumph at the fair last week when Mr. Chas. Hodgins was awarded no less than eleven prizes for exhibits. Two were for grain one for fruit and eight for vegetables he as well won the special prize given for best collection of vegetables. These made a very fine display and many were the favorable comments passed on the exhibit and the adaptability of the Welsdale district for grain and vegetable growing.

The king of the first prize turnips was handed to the Standard, it is a mammoth Swede weighing 14 lbs--the six on exhibition totalled up 65 lbs the wonderful average of ten and a half pounds apiece.

SPLENDID POTATO EXHIBIT

H. A. Taylor's Display of Tubers Best To Be Seen Anywhere

One of the best, if not the very best of its kind to be seen anywhere in the country, was the potato exhibit of Mr. Taylor south of Vermilion, at the fair. Mr. Taylor has established a reputation for successful potato growing in nearly all the known varieties. In his special display, which was the most attractive on the ground there were neatly arrayed no less than 45 varieties. All these were beauties and deserving of the attention they attracted.

Mr. Taylor is to be congratulated on the display and his general interest in agricultural matters.

Warm Discussion Over Apportionment of Taxes

Mannville, Oct. 12 Meeting of Council of L. I. D. 26-D-4 called by order of the Chairman, Friday, Oct 8th at the residence of G. M. Cundal, the secy-treas., Mannville, as per resolution of last meeting.

Councillors present, Jas. J. Hope, chairman, Jas. H. Tovell, Jno. Symington and Jno. L. Summers.

Minutes of previous meeting read, and on motion of Summers and Symington, were adopted as read.

After the correspondence was read a discussion ensued on the way the money was distributed among the different divisions. According to the old ordinance Sec 68 read as follows "The council shall cause at least one half of the money estimated to be expended in the district in each year for general purposes to be apportioned among the divisions thereof in proportion to the amount of rateable property therein respectively as shown in the assessment roll." This section was repealed in 1908 and the following substituted "The council shall cause to be expended in each division at least one half of the taxes collected in the division." Now, Division II of which Mr. Tovell is councillor, has all its land, except school sections, paying taxes, while the other divisions have mostly C. P. R lands outside the homesteads, which although they are assessed, do not pay taxes. However the apportionment of expenditure was made this year according to the old ordinance, amendments having been received too late and here is where the discussion [illegible]

Sad Death of Mr. A. S. Fortner, Mr. J. J. Bell's Success, Gored by A Bull, Good Wheat Shipments

It is with much regret that we report the death of Mr. A. S. Fortner, on Wednesday, Oct. [illegible] at the early age of 31 years. The deceased was in his usual health up to Saturday, Oct. 2nd, when he was troubled with internal pains. Dr. Williams of Kitscoty, was called in the following day and prescribed treatment for a mild attack of appendicitis. On Tuesday, however, it was found to be more severe than was at first anticipated and the doctor ordered the removal of his patient to Lloydminster hospital, where he was operated on by Dr. Amos. Death took place immediately after the operation, the deceased never regaining consciousness.

Mr. Fortner was an earnest worker in the Methodist church, where he will be much missed. He leaves a widow and three small children for whom much sympathy is felt. The funeral ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Davis of Kitscoty, in the presence of a large number of sympathising friends.

Mr. J. J. Bell, who was successful with his stock at the Vermilion fair was also very successful at Lloydminster and Vegreville fairs, carrying off a large number of prizes. Mr. Bell's Black Polled Angus cattle were much admired at Lloydminster and it was remarked by one of the judges, that they were certainly the best herd on the grounds. We congratulate Mr. Bell on his success.

While driving away a number of cattle from his stacks a few days ago, Mr. P. McBride was tackled by a bull. The animal gored him and tossed him [illegible] then, apparently satisfied walked away [illegible]

STAGESTRUCK GIRLS.

Histrionic Fame Only Won by Hard Work and Genius.

"MAN ALONE SHALL WOO."

To This Decree Gertrude Atherton Attributes Woman's Deceit.

I think there is little doubt that this world old statute that the man alone shall woo has more to do with keeping down the mental and moral tone of woman, with cultivating her ignoble talents for deceit and intrigue than any of the other forces which she finds arrayed against her, says Gertrude Atherton in the Delineator for August. It is not the softening influence of the matrimonial and maternal states that works so many miracles, but the abrupt removal of the necessity to practice a demoralizing self control, to appear something that she is not, to still much ugly angry and resentment. I have known many girls, plentifully endowed with good looks and charm, to confess that they have "lain awake nights scheming how to get that man," only to also know out of ten to find him later on quite unworth the trouble.

We are all familiar with the selfishness, the slyness, the lack of real frankness, in what might be called the threshold girl—anywhere between seventeen and nineteen. This is nothing worse than the mating instinct driving her blindly until she has learned to play her part with taste and tact. During that period she gropes about in her still childish brain for those qualities that will enable her to hold her own in the great game and she is the more befuddled because of that curious tradition that a girl must seem other than she is.

Of course with only this old standard of feminity, and being still fluid and plastic, the poor things more often than not model themselves upon some favorite heroine of romance and are only knocked into shape by those in...

Woman's World

A WOMAN SCIENTIST.

Who Is Neither Old Nor Bespectacled, but Fair and Under Thirty.

At the National museum, in Washington, snuggled away in a musty corner in sight of petrified elephants and mammoths, is a young girl scientist standing shoulder to shoulder with gray haired men who have spent their lives in research work. She is Evelyn Mitchell, a small, vivacious young woman who, to all appearances, might be almost anything else in the world but a scientist who has won an international reputation. It has not been many months since the scientific world of two continents were talking of Miss Mitchell's book, "Mosquito Life," and it is difficult to imagine that the little wisp of a woman, standing blithely on the very bright sunshiny side of thirty, is an acknowledged authority on mosquitoes and many other things about which the majority of girls know absolutely nothing.

Miss Mitchell started out catching bugs and bats and frogs and such things when she was a toddler up in her parents' home in New Jersey. That she was the terror of the household, which could not understand the close relationship of such things with a happy home life, goes without speaking. But she kept right along at it and has worked her way through the ranks of scientists to a position that is unique among women of the world.

Miss Mitchell took her A. B. at Cornell in 1902, and since that time she has achieved a remarkable place in the world of scientific literature by a series of writings, which would lead the reader to the conclusion that the author must be one who had devoted

SENSE OF DIRECTION.

How Bees Are Able to Find Their Way to the Hive.

The directive sense which is possessed by bees is the object of researches made by M. Gaston Bonnier of Paris, and he seems to prove that bees possess a special sense like that of carrier pigeons.

Bees can fly for two miles from the hive and are then able to return after gathering their supply of honey. Langstroth and others suppose that vision comes into play and that bees can see a great distance and can also note objects on the way so as to find their path. Others, with Dadant, suppose that the bees are guided by the sense of smell and that they can smell flowers at one and a half miles.

The author makes experiments to prove that bees can return to the hive without using either sight or odor. As to sight, he takes bees to a distance of one or two miles from the hive in a closed box. They always fly back to the hive when released. The same is true when their eyes are covered, so that sight is not essential. As regards odor, experiments seem to prove that bees perceive odors at only short distances. When a needle dipped in ether is brought near the head of the bee it shows signs of perceiving the odor, but not so when the needle is placed back of him or near other organs.

Besides, when the organs of smell (antennae) are removed entirely the bees will return to the hive. M. Bonnier makes the following experiment. At 600 feet from the hive he places a supply of syrup, and the bees soon find it, proceeding to and fro to the hive. Such bees he marks with green-colored powder. He then places a second supply of syrup at the same distance from the hive, but spaced at 30 feet from the former. Other bees are now engaged in the to and fro [illegible] point, but these are not the same individuals as the green-marked bees, who are still working on the first supply, and he marks these in red.

We thus have two distinct sets of bees, and we see that they can distinguish two directions which form a...

SHIPS AND METEORS.

A Possible Solution of Mysterious Disappearances at Sea.

Scientists abroad are urging captains of the world's merchant marine and sailors in general to make exact observations of every extraordinarily large meteor coming within their range of vision and record what they may observe.

There is no doubt, the men of science point out, that meteors, to a far greater extent than we until now have realized, are responsible for those incomprehensible disappearances of ships in calm weather and smooth sea. We know that meteors are more frequent at certain times of the year than at others. In all probability also certain regions of the oceans are more open to meteors than are other tracts.

Conspicuous among the more recent meetings of ships and meteors is that of the English steamer Cambrian. On the way from London to Boston the ship, in the forty-second degree of north latitude, on the 10th of August last, only by a few feet escaped destruction by a meteor as huge as a four story house, says the Chicago Tribune. The meteor fell into the sea not over eighty feet away, and in spite of its 6,000 tons capacity the ship was lifted many feet high in the air by the agitated waters. The terror stricken crew came out of it unharmed, however.

The English sail ship Eclipse was not so lucky about half a year ago. In the Pacific ocean, the vessel steering for the Hawaiian islands, an immense meteor struck and crushed the forecastle and the bow part of the ship. The crew entered into a desperate but futile contest with the water streaming into the hold, but had to abandon the ship and take to the boats. After two weeks of terrible suffering they reached one of the Hawaiian islands, 300 sea miles from the scene of the disaster. Several men died of starvation on the water.

UNCANNY GUIDES.

When the Gallows Was Used as a Landmark in England.

The old time guidebooks in England were by no means cheerful reading. A journey from London to East Grinstead, a distance of five or six and twenty miles, would have taken the horseman past three gibbets, and it was just as likely as not that from one or the other of them a body would be swinging in the wind.

Up till the beginning of the nineteenth century the gallows was almost as frequent a landmark as finger posts or public houses have become now. The traveler approaching York is directed by the guidebooks to "turn round by the gallows and three windmills," and the road out of Durham is "between the gallows and Crossgill." Going out of Wells you "cross the brook and pass by the gallows."

Any number of such directions can be gleaned from the old books for the guidance of travelers a hundred years ago, and as these interesting objects were put up and the dead bodies of malefactors left upon them for the special edification of footpads and highwaymen there was a suggestiveness about them that must have given a special piquancy to cycle touring if it had been in vogue at that time.—London News.

Great Britain in vessels that will bring back cargoes of merchandise [illegible] that it will also be a great cattle route, and, moreover, that it will make the carrying of freight between the Eastern Provinces and the port which will be the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway very materially cheaper than [illegible] across the Dominion.

"This will mean the development of an important volume of traffic between the provinces down by the Atlantic and the population on the prairies. In yesterday's Free Press mention was made of the calculations that have been made indicating that coal, structural steel, cement, and other heavy freight that the maritime provinces can find a market for in the West can be carried by way of the Hudson Bay route at low rates, it being figured out that it will be possible to deliver Nova Scotia coal, for example, at Saskatoon at at a cost of $6.50 per ton, allowing a margin of 20 per cent. for contingencies. East and West thus have a common interest in the development of this national traffic route.

"It is announced that at the beginning of the session of the Dominion Parliament in November there will be submitted the government engineer's reports on the two proposed lines for the railway, the one to Churchill the other to Nelson, and also reports in regard to the suitability of the mouths of the two rivers for harbor purposes. Further investigations are necessary, to determine the nature of the approaches from the sea to each of the river-mouths the depth of water available, the season of open water, and the cost in each case of developing a harbor of sufficient capacity to accommodate the vessels that will connect with the Hudson Bay Railway. Thus far it would appear that while Churchill has the better natural harbor, Nelson possesses advantages which are more [illegible] in being [illegible]

[illegible] of the West have no preference between Churchill and Nelson; they want the better port of the two, the one which, all things considered, will be the better for the effective operation of the new rail and salt water highway.

"The decisions that have to be made they want to see made at the earliest possible moment consistent with their being made with complete knowledge, and they want, with a long-cherished desire to see the work of construction of the Hudson Bay Railway begun. Western opinion is strongly in favor of the government building the line and owning it, whatever may be the decision as between operating it as a government road or leasing it."

SEEK CONTROL OF ELEVATORS

Farmers Desire to Handle Their Own Grain

Winnipeg, Oct. 11. There is a strong probability that the C. P. R. terminal elevators at Fort William will be operated by the the Manitoba Grain Growers association and that the farmers wheat of Western Canada will be handled through these elevators next season. "The capacity of the C.P.R. elevators is, I believe, about 9,000,000 bushels and with these in our hands, the farmers of Western Canada will have all the necessary equipment to take the grain from the producers and land it at Liverpool or the consuming market at the same time that the grain will arrive on the other side [illegible] Eastern Canada markets in [illegible] good state, namely as it left [illegible] farmers hands."

This was the statement made today by D. W. McCuaig, president of the Manitoba Grain Growers association. Mr. McCuaig was [illegible] city yesterday looking into [illegible] system being operated under the supervision of the Manitoba Grain Growers association. In speaking [illegible] P. [illegible] purpose of securing a [illegible] Fort William elevators [illegible] Mr. McCuaig said:

"The advance movement on [illegible]

[illegible] to the organization which the farmers of the west are making for the handling of their own [illegible] the farmers that we must have a complete movement on wheat marketing under our own control. With this in view on behalf of the Grain Growers association, I approached Mr. Lanigan, of the C. P. R. early in August, and had a [illegible] was followed by subsequent interviews. Later he referred the subject to Wm. Whyte, second vice-president of the C.P.R. I received the following letter from Mr. Whyte: 'D.W. McCuaig, president M.G.G.A., Portage la Prairie. Dear sir, I am in receipt of your favor of the 22nd ult., a reply to which has been delayed owing to my absence from the city. The season is so far advanced now that it would not be convenient to lease any of our terminal elevators this year. In any event we would not care to lease a single elevator, and I should be glad to know if you have any proposition to make in respect to taking over our elevators at Fort William, so that if we decide to lease them all the negotiations could be undertaking and arrangements completed to handle next year's crop.'

"That is how the matter stands at the present time," said Mr. McCuaig. "Negotiations will of course be continued with the C. P. R. during the winter, and developments are probable before the movement of another crop." In reply to a question as to the value of the C.P.R. terminals at Fort William, Mr. McCuaig pointed out that at the investigation before the board of railway commissioners in Ottawa, on July 7, 1909, Mr. Lanigan fixed a valuation of $2,399,947 upon the side track and plant, so in all probabilities this would be the latest figure. The earnings of the C.P.R. terminals at Fort William have been about three per cent on the invested capital, so I presume that the grain growers will be able to secure them, if the C.P.R. desires to lease them, at a very moderate rental.

Chailey Notes

The anniversary of the Harvest Festival was held on Sunday last at the residence of Mr. Percy Richards. The decorations were arranged by some of the resident lady members of the church, which reflected great credit and taste on their part. The Rev. E. H. Webb officiated and gave a remarkably fine sermon.

The grains and vegetables for the decorations, which were an exceedingly fine sample, were contributions from the residents of the district.

On the following evening a church social was held, also at the same house. Some fifty settlers turned out and enjoyed a splendid time. Mr. Letson acted as chairman, and as everyone who knows him, knows there could be no better man for the office. During the opening remarks he said he had great pleasure in announcing the Rev. E. H. Webb as our newly appointed parson. This announcement showed its popularity as the applause was both loud and lengthy. Mr. Webb replied in a few well [illegible] words. The programme was as follows:—

1. [illegible] Selections
2. [illegible]
3. Duet. Mr. and Miss May Walker "Lochard Watch"
4. [illegible]
5. [illegible]
6. Song [illegible] "Bonnie Galloway"
7. Song. Jackson Walton

[illegible] Mr. Walker moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Richards for so kindly lending his house for the occasion, which motion drew much acclamation of "speech" and "flow" [illegible] we gain upon the wonderful fertility around us, and that by every stroke of development we do (and don't do) we advance the worth and integrity of the British Dominions beyond the seas. Chaileyites, I stand before you to awake you to a sense of your duty to yourself and agriculture at large. Agriculture is the backbone of the world. Your Rockefellers and Carnegies your Roosevelts and Strathconas are dependent upon agricultural efforts. Gentlemen, does the force of this argument strike you. Do you not know that by union of effort you have here the finest settlement in Alberta. (Too true) We must grasp with a firm hand the opportunities as they daily present themselves, and looking straight ahead carry our settlement to the topmost of progression, that our works may be realized as the results of progressive industry and determination. We have our hardships it is true (grubbing willows and digging rocks) we have [illegible] we have hardships and we have some difficulties [illegible] a menace to a modern Dreadnought. At present [illegible] deposits, whose value as yet is beyond valuation can only be equalled to [illegible] goal. The terms and [illegible] you are [illegible] of [illegible] prosperity to a future of independence, when you can look [illegible] and sing as your forefathers [illegible] claim "[illegible]" This isn't what he said, but what he ought to have said.

Mr. Richards before sitting down, moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for the splendid management and decorations and catering to the inner man. This motion found a hearty seconder in Mr. Callander. Supper was then served.

The erection of St. Albans church, Chailey, was commenced Tuesday with Mr. Harry Croft as foreman, the church being safely removed from its old site to the permanent and beautiful location on the N.W. of 20-56-9. The builders hope to be ready for the [illegible] by the Bishop in two weeks, the work being carried out by voluntary help from the resident settlers.

Magistrate D. B. McLean was in our midst on Monday on business.

We can't sleep for wedding bells and [illegible]

We are extremely pleased to announce the engagement of Miss Croft to Mr. Gilford Dudley Chute both of this settlement. We are all looking for a good time at the wedding.

Farmers are well ahead with their work here, fall ploughing is nearly completed.

Mr. Brown intends shipping a large consignment of hogs this week.

We understand that Mr. Bowers will return next week.

Chailey settlers wish to express their thanks to Mr. Carlson who on the day the prairie fire came through, turned out with two teams and a plow and plowed a furrow for a stretch of [illegible] miles to try and save all the land from being burned as well as [illegible] property. He having left his children at home by themselves was willing to risk his own place to help his neighbors. Such an example is truly worthy of being copied by others.

ON THE WINGS OF THE STORM.

There Came a Change In Her Views on the Question of Love.

By PHILIP KEAN.

(Copyright, 19[illegible], by Associated Literary Press.)

The cottage of the Bear Lake stock farm was [illegible] from the window of the [illegible] typical [illegible] after a dry spell, with [illegible] lightning and tremendous winds and the continuous [illegible].

To the unaccustomed eye it was terrifying, but Alexander gazed undisturbed. He was young and strong.

But something very like fear gripped him now as he saw between the swaying trees a wraithlike figure running toward the house.

He went to the door and opened it. He dragged her over the threshold—a little, gasping, frightened girl.

"I'm so afraid," was all she could say at first.

"How does it happen that you are out?" He put her in a big chair by the side of the fireplace. "It's so late and such an awful night."

She looked at him with startled eyes as she tried to pin up the thick brown locks that had fallen about her shoulders.

"I—I was running away," she confessed.

"Oh," Alexander said as he sat down opposite her. "You look a bit old for that. I was nine when I decided to take to cave dwelling and a man Friday."

A dimple showed in the corner of her mouth. "But—but I wasn't running away to live in a cave. I was running away to get married."

"But," Alexander said promptly, "you—you don't look quite old enough for that."

"I am eighteen," was the explanation, "and he is twenty-one."

"He?" murmured Alexander. "Where is he?"

Her lip quivered. "I think the storm must have kept him home. You wouldn't think a storm would matter to a man, would you?"

"Not a man who was going to marry you," Alexander found himself saying.

"Oh"—the warmth in his tone brought a rosy flood to her face—"of course something may have kept him."

"Where was he to meet you?" Alexander asked.

"Over there by the church. We are stopping at one of the cottages just beyond."

"And when you didn't find him there you ran to the nearest house?"

"I saw your light and ran toward it."

"And now," he told her, "if you are rested a bit I'll take you home."

"But I can't go back!" she cried. "The door locks with a spring, and I [illegible]" quiet—"It is always a man's business to see that a young and helpless girl is protected."

[illegible]

"But I"—

"I think you should take her home at once," Alexander advised, "and wait until you and she are old enough to know your own minds."

"Oh, don't preach," the boy flung out.

But Alexander's eyes were on the girl. "When a woman loves a man it is such a wonderful thing that we ought to give her all our chivalry. Wait until you are older, Bobbie, and you [illegible]."

"Oh, come on, Mollie," the boy interrupted rudely. "I've got the horses outside, and we can get away in a [illegible]."

But she stood very still in the middle of the room. "No," she said. [illegible]

"Because I know now that I—I don't [illegible] as I ought to marry you, Bobbie," she faltered. "I—I want to go [illegible]."

"Well, you can't go home," Bobbie [illegible] her—"not now. You haven't a key."

"She shall go [illegible]," Alexander said suddenly, "[illegible] sister."

They faced each other, the boy and [illegible] before the stern gaze of the other Bobbie dropped his eyes.

"Oh, well, how will you manage it?" [illegible]

"[illegible] get her mother to the telephone," Alexander said, "and she can [illegible]."

[illegible] turned to the door. "I'll [illegible]" he said to [illegible] to be in [illegible] he was gone.

"I'm afraid his feelings are hurt," Alexander said, "but it was best, wasn't it?"

He took Mollie's hand and stood looking down at her, and presently she said, "Yes, it was best. And now [illegible] call up mother, please?"

When he had given the message over the wire he took Mollie [illegible] way they said little, but just before they reached her porch she whispered, "I—I want to thank you for what you said to me about [illegible]. I shall think of it differently now. I shall never marry Bobbie."

"Perhaps Bobbie will be different," Alexander said.

"No; I couldn't marry him—now." She held out her hand. "Will you come and see us some time? Mother will want to thank you."

"Will I come?" Great joy ran through his voice. "Will I come?" Then he bent down over her. "Are you sure there isn't any chance for Bobbie?"

"Yes," very low.

"Then I'll come," he said, and he knew in his heart that some day he would teach her the things that Bobbie had not known how to teach—things of love and life and of happiness.

The Romance of Quinine.

How many of those who fully realize the value of quinine are familiar with the pretty story connected with the drug?

In the year 1638 Doana Ana, the beautiful wife of the Luis Geronimo Fernandez de Cabrera Bobadilla y Mendoza, fourth count of Chinchon and governor of the Spanish province of Peru, lay sick and, it was feared, dying of an intermittent fever in the palace at Lima. Her physician, Juan de Vega, was at his wits' end. Her husband was in despair, when the corregidor of Loxa [illegible] sent to the governor a secret parcel of powdered quilloquia bark, which he knew the Indians prized highly as a febrifuge.

The powder was administered to the countess, with the happy result that she "was cured." [illegible]

Two years later, in 1640, the much [illegible] count of Chinchon and his wife returned to Spain, and to the countess Ana brought with her a quantity of the healing bark the discovery of which [illegible] and the fame of it [illegible] into Europe. Her [illegible] the powder, which was [illegible] the famous cure of the Countess, thus [illegible] called "pulvis comitissae," [illegible] that honored the great Swedish botanist Linnaeus many afterward to name the [illegible] genus of quinine yielding trees "cinchona" [illegible].

Had One After All.

Jimmy had always announced the fact that he had no grandmother. He was [illegible] satisfied with the quality of his parents, [illegible] of his [illegible] especially [illegible] the whole, to have any grand[illegible] about the house than at [illegible] but grandma or two, [illegible] If it [illegible] him very much to think that other boys had something that he had not. There were his Hoffman and Sidney Grant, both cousins of his. Dad and [illegible] grandmother, and it didn't seem exactly fair that he was deprived of one.

One day, however, he had a happy thought.

"Ma," he said, "what does the word grand mean, anyhow?"

"Why, lofty, beautiful, noble, sublime," replied his mother.

A broad smile wreathed the boy's face as he jumped up and down on the [illegible] ecstasy [illegible]

"Hurrah!" he cried, "I have got one after [illegible]"

"[illegible] what dear?" [illegible]

"A grandmother!" he replied.

"Where is she, dear?" his mother [illegible]

"Why, you're it, mother," said the boy. "You're my mother and you're [illegible] beautiful, lofty and sublime, [illegible] you're my grandmother."

Whatever the quality of the lad's logic the source of reasoning should [illegible] "grandmother" very happy.—[illegible]

NEAR TO HEART'S NATURE.

The Billionaire and His Quiet Little Country Club.

A $75,000 automobile rolled through the $50,000 bronze gates and up the $25,000 winding avenue to the $30,000 marble steps.

Across the $[illegible] lawn a $125,000 sliver lake lay sparkling in the shadow of early evening, and beyond it rose a lordly $[illegible] hill, whose crest, cloaked with forest at an expense of $[illegible], glowed in the last golden rays of the setting sun.

The billionaire sank luxuriously into a $2,000 ivory porch chair and rested his feet on the rosewood railing of the $100,000 veranda.

"It is pleasant," he observed, "to get back to nature once in awhile. After the cares and worries of the business day I certainly love to run out to this quiet little $[illegible] country club of ours and taste a bit of simple life. It is good to keep in touch with the soil, for what is man but dust, after all?"

Feeling restored, he passed in through the $[illegible] doorway to his $1,500 dinner.—L. H. Robbins in Newark News.

Missing Trades.

A brakeman retired to a farm and started to lead the simple life. Having a piece of new land to break, he hitched up a team of mules, wrapped the lines around his waist in farmer fashion and started to work. He had gone but a short distance when he saw a stump ahead and immediately began giving the railroad "stop" signal with both hands. The plow struck the stump, and the brakeman went head first over the plow. Picking himself up, he ran angrily to the mules and roared.

"You flop eared scoundrels, don't you ever look back for a signal?"—Atchison Globe.

It Looks Well.

"I must confess," growled the dissatisfied tourist, "that I can't see why so many people want to come here—no scenery, no amusements, no good things to eat, absolutely no attractions."

"Ah, signor," said the innkeeper, "[illegible] come because we 'ave so grand label to stick on ze luggage."—Success Magazine.

The AMATEUR NURSE

"I used to lie and stare at the row of bottles."

"Mary poured out each dose at my bedside."

The trained nurse is a nineteenth century product, at least in the United States. And, despite the beneficent change she has wrought in the sickroom, we cannot disguise from ourselves the truth that there still lingers in the minds of some sane and broad-minded people a certain prejudice against her and her methods. So strong is the distaste with some that the nurse is occasionally obliged to lay aside her uniform and feign to be a neighbor who has "just dropped in to lend a hand with the nursing." It is maintained, and not without reason, that the very sight of the cap and apron is a danger signal to a nervous patient. She must be very ill, or a trained nurse would not be engaged.

She is an expensive luxury, urge other protestants, to say nothing of the tyranny some of the guild exercise over the whole household that is so unfortunate as to need her services. I could fill this and twenty more pages with authentic anecdotes in support of this objection to the sisterhood, and not abate [illegible] the stock at command of memory.

These and what may be catalogued as "sentimental reasons" incline many families to dispense with the salaried [illegible] of the trained nurse and to depend in illness upon relative, friend or neighbor, who is [illegible] for the love of the calling, or for the patient and those to whom the sufferer is dear.

A CRITICAL PATIENT

Since I began this paper what I reckon as a happy coincidence brought to my study a young kinsman recently recovered from a somewhat serious attack of illness. Knowing that he had been nursed by a [illegible] maid of his mother, who had begged for the privilege by virtue of her long residence in the family and natural aptitude for nursing, combined with experience, I catechised him upon the subject in hand.

"I have had trained nurses in several previous illnesses," he testified. "Two were methodical and perfunctorily attentive. I recognized myself as a part of the machinery of which they were the motive power. They were quietly despotic, taking absolute obedience on my part as a matter of course. If I were cross, it mattered nothing to them personally. After representing professionally that excitement would raise my temperature and retard recovery, they disregarded conditions of temper and [illegible]. It was like being in a refrigerator. No. 3 of the becapped and beaproned sisterhood was tart [illegible] if I ventured to demur to any of her measures. She dragooned my poor mother and scolded the servants and raised a tempest in a teapot generally in the well-ordered household. I got well as fast as possible to get rid of her.

METHODS OF HER OWN

"Recollections of her reign were my chief reason for seconding Mary's petition to be allowed to take care of me in this last attack. She was my faithful and tender nurse, and it would be base ingratitude to criticise her methods. Bless her old soul! But you want the truth, you say.

"In the first place, she set the room in order for a siege by arranging the medicine [illegible] and [illegible] upon [illegible] table not far from the bed and in fair sight. The table was set out with a clean napkin, [illegible] and the lesser and bigger ones in the middle, [illegible]. I used to lie and stare at them and wonder which was which and wish they did not [illegible] that I tired me to look at them. All professional nurses keep all the paraphernalia of medicines [illegible] out of the [illegible]. Mary poured out each dose at my bedside, [illegible]. I never knew how [illegible] anything else [illegible] until the trained nurse [illegible] at my elbow. It was [illegible] the glass of water that [illegible] the taste was [illegible] and the thing was over. Mary [illegible] if I wasn't [illegible] take the next dose, [illegible] or 'wasn't I hungry and couldn't I think of something I should like to eat?' or 'was the room too light?' or 'didn't I think that I could sleep if she read the evening paper to me?' There was a story of a murder that might interest me. Or, 'Wouldn't I like to have her read the report of the big football game?'

"I couldn't hurt her feelings by saying that she reads badly and that I should certainly jump out of the window if she tried to 'render' the sporting page. So I pretended to be sleepy, and she darkened the room until I could just make out the outlines of the awful array of bottles and boxes on the stand (she never threw one away!), and I could hear her 'sh-sh-sh-ing' the family out in the hall for the next hour, and croaking under her breath that 'poor dear Mr. Philip has dropped off to sleep and mustn't be disturbed upon no account whatsumever.'

"She asked the doctor in my hearing one day 'if he didn't think that sleeping so much was a bad symptom?' and I burst out laughing in her face. That was another difference between her and the trained nurse. She either retailed the account of symptoms, temperature and other features of the case audibly to him in my presence, or, what was worse, she took him to the far side of the [illegible], and chattered in an undertone as in a death chamber after [illegible] made my [illegible] to my [illegible].

"Don't forget to speak of [illegible] She [illegible] and her [illegible]

Not being prepared for so sudden a change from the genial weather which prevailed considerable temporary inconvenience was experienced in many homes. All day Monday the dealers were shipping out stoves to all parts of the town, some went on drays, others in delivery rigs, while several rushed a stove home in wheelbarrows. One thing can be said and that is the drop of the mercury made a good day's business for the hardware man.

WILL REMAIN A VILLAGE

Wainwright Ratepayers Satisfied With Present Status for Time Being

The resolution asking the Village Council of Wainwright to apply for incorporation as a Town Municipality was defeated by the ratepayers.

The chief reason assigned by the Wainwright Star for the defeat of the resolution, was the fear which prevailed among a majority of the ratepayers that when raised to the status of a town the new council would undertake a great number of public improvements and burden the town with a large debt.

A number of the ratepayers, while no doubt anxious to promote their town's best interests, were alive to the proneness of young town councils, in the zeal for expansion and growth, to go in heartily for public improvements, the necessarily accompaniment of which is a high tax rate which bears heavily upon the ratepayers for improvements, in many cases, much in advance of what the needs of a few years demand.

The borrowing power of a Village Council is limited to the sum of $2,000, while to a town the privilege is conceded of borrowing to the extent of 10 per cent. of the total assessment.

The majority of the ratepayers among the 600 inhabitants of Wainwright, have deemed it to be more in the interests of the future prosperity and unhampered prosperity of the place as well as to themselves to limit the borrowing capacity of their representatives to the sum of $2,000 for the present—and perhaps they are wise.

C. N. R. LINE FROM LASHBURN WESTERLY

Application to be Made to Construct Line to Point Between Camrose and Edmonton

Of more than passing interest is the notice given in the Canada Gazette by the Canadian Northern railway, among its list of applications to be made to parliament at the next session for an act authorizing construction of certain lines, of the building of a line from the town of Lashburn, westerly, to a point between Camrose and Edmonton.

This line must traverse the stretch of country for many miles lying between this line and the G. T. P. forty miles to the south; and running, as it will, through a well settled country in an advanced stage of development, there will undoubtedly be witnessed the rise of many new towns along its [illegible]

The knowledge of the intention of the C. N. FROM OUT THE WEST

Singly They Went to the East, but Together They Returned.

By MARY WOOD.

Missoula Ann gazed across the frozen stretches of the park with a delightful sense of ownership. The chill wind which had deterred all other wayfarers was as the breath of her own prairies.

"Just the sky for a norther, Teddy," she said exultantly. "Seems like old times, don't it?"

Teddy was not looking at [illegible]. Around a bend in the road [illegible] horse [illegible] high, [illegible]

[illegible]

If Teddy [illegible] used to red [illegible]. But verily the way of the transgressor is hard. There was an innocent appearing strip of [illegible] and the worry was Teddy's fast [illegible] and [illegible] tender [illegible] and sandy.

The [illegible] Missoula was now in the scene. Even the policeman offered his services to rescue grace. Together they picked up the fallen, whose spirits redoubled under the effort of Missoula's vigorous shaking. The policeman interfered!

"See here, now," he said good naturedly, "I'll have to arrest you if you [illegible]" could sympathize with her longing for that faraway land. Yes, Missoula was sure to be going that way tomorrow.

He was waiting for them on the next afternoon, and Teddy was swung up on the saddle in a jiffy. But now it was the big policeman who talked, while Missoula listened in shy silence. His name was Jones. "They used to call me 'Shorty' down in the Panhandle because I was so tall," he explained with a laugh. "No, they don't do it here," in answer to her questioning look. "It wouldn't be healthy for them. The men on the force call me Jim. I haven't any pals up here."

CIRCUSES.

The Old and the New and the Greatest Drawing Card.

Before the one ring days and going back a few centuries the circus was represented in the person of a mountebank, a thin visaged, clean shaven man who hitched his trapeze to the sturdy limb of a village oak and did feats to the ill concealed amazement of a people who respected God somewhat, but the devil and his black magic a great deal more.

A long and high jump this—from mountebank to modern hippodrome, from a man who lived under his hat to a tented city which houses as many as 25,000 people in one day and regularly furnishes food, shelter and transportation for 1,200 more, to say nothing of a hospital, a postoffice and a commissary where one can purchase almost anything from a postage stamp to a suit of overalls.

The big show today is as highly specialized and deviously organized as is our greatest business institution. Its maintenance costs a thousand dollars an hour. Yes, it's a long jump from the mountebank; but, after all, things haven't changed so much in some ways.

A man who was running a trick pony and dog show last year added a "thriller" to his program in the way of a dangerous flying trapeze act. To the delight of his parkets, but the intense disgust of his trainer's soul, the door receipts almost doubled. He had two men at the door one night who asked the outgoing crowds which part of the show they liked best—the trick animals or the acrobats. They answered as one, "The acrobats."

Danger—danger to other human lives and limbs—that's the drawing card, after all, excepting only the children who are too young to be gory minded and who find most delight in the clowns. We grownups like the "thrillers"—the more deadly the better. —William Allen Johnston in Harper's Weekly.

WHAT HE WAS TELLING HIM.

An Incident That Ended the Conversation at the Barber's.

"You are very bald, sir," said the barber to little Binks as the latter took up his position in the chair.

"What's that you say?" asked Binks pleasantly.

"I say you are very bald, sir," repeated the barber.

"Who is?" asked Binks.

"You, sir," said the barber.

"What paper did you see that in?" demanded Binks.

"What's that, sir?" asked the barber.

"What newspaper?" repeated Binks. "I read all the papers, but I didn't see any reference to this. Was it in one of the early editions of the evening papers?"

"Was what, sir?" queried the puzzled barber.

"This thing you were just telling me," said Binks.

"Why, I don't remember telling you"— began the barber.

"About my being bald, you know," said Binks. "You said I was very bald, didn't you?"

"Yes," said the barber, "but I didn't mention the newspapers, sir. Why should it be in the newspapers, sir?"

"Why, because it's news, isn't it?" said Binks.

"I shouldn't say that, sir," said the barber.

"Well, if it isn't news, what in thunder did you tell me about it for?" demanded Binks. "I supposed you had read about it in one of the papers and had reached the conclusion that I didn't know it. If you find a mole under my left ear while shaving me break it to me gently, please, and you may omit all mention of the fact that [illegible]"

Smart Gowns for the High School Miss and College Maid

FIG. D—A SMART AND PRACTICAL COSTUME

THE gowns which are beginning to show themselves for Autumn and Winter wear for girls of high school and college age are stamped pleasingly with good sense. There are no exaggerations of cut or material to take away from the youthful simplicity required for maiden garments, and here and there one sees the lines of many a foregoing season reproduced.

The normal waist line is definitely with us once more, and so is the pleated skirt with plain front panel, which has long proven its usefulness and grace for walking purposes. Then there is the ancient coat sleeve which goes into the armhole with the barest suspicion of top gathering, and the skirt band that, after overskirts and before them, divided the jupe in two pieces. The semi-princess effects with jersey-like upper portion and pleated bottoms that these gowns display, are widely approved and exceedingly becoming to slight young figures.

There are hints that the waist band will get tighter, but so comfortably loose are gowns still at this point that one need not fear a swift return to the old wasp waist, which emphasized the size of hips and was always unsuitable for young girls. Dresses cut all-in-one for misses sometimes show almost a wrapper looseness, these giving an added sweetness to rounded or angular young bodies and showing often the simplest band trimmings.

Misses' coats follow to a great extent the same looseness, many an odd garment on the top jacket that goes with a jumper frock revealing almost the same cut as the brother's top coat. We are growing more sensible in fact, everywhere but at our heads, for even [illegible] hats are growing larger and are [illegible] burdened with trimmings far too heavy for the peace of the [illegible] is chic and for school wear, while if made of a finer wool [illegible] would be quite modish enough for the best dress.

Figure B.—Here is another checked gown for the same ages and purposes. Since heavy linens in sombre colors are worn all Winter in the steam heated class rooms of boarding schools I will suggest this material for one dress for the girl who hates heavy clothes and only feels neat in the wash thing. A rich red or deep blue would be effective and becoming with a bias of the goods shaping the banding and at least three little wash tuckers of cambric or lawn to go with the frock. As to these last details, the washable guimpe, made separate from the gown, is still a delightful and enhancing feature of gowns smart or otherwise and with a model to go by so as not to waste material, three may be turned out at home for a dollar.

Only a lawn or cambric guimpe would go with a wool schooldress, but if Figure B were turned out in silk, cloth or cashmere, as it would be with excellent taste, net, mousseline or all over lace should shape the guimpe.

The two remaining dresses are for girls who have come to the dignity of long skirts [illegible] girls who while requiring modified effects yet demand [illegible]

Wisdom and Conduct for the Too-Ambitious Mother

OTHER family letters lie on my desk and though all were not received on the same day as you might suppose, the three were written by the same hand and are on the same subject.

My cousin Caroline writes to tell me between some gentle expressions of fondness for myself, that she does not know what she is going "to do" about Ray. During the winter there she was with her nose eternally in school books, grumpy if you asked her to dust a room, and ding-donging always that she would miss her examination. Now up at the lake, she runs wild like a hoyden, showing a preference for rough games and wanting straw rides and boat trips forever. Ray was certainly an unsatisfactory daughter when it came to the point of wondering how soon she would be a woman grown.

"Why," said Caroline somewhere—and how I wanted to box her ears then—"she can't be made to see how important the little accomplishments of manner are for a girl to make a good marriage. She only laughs and says 'Oh, Mamma, I am only seventeen.' If I let her, then she is too rough and rude to take up a profession or business, she says quite distractedly. How can you expect me to make anything?"

"It will be worse when she goes to school again," concluded my foolish cousin dolefully, "for then everything will be sacrificed for her inordinate ambition. What nonsense education is anyway. To know how to enter a room and go out of it are enough for any girl with a little German or French, of course."

In matters educational my cousin Caroline is old fashioned, and she is likewise twenty years behind the times in what she expects of a girl who still goes to school and is absorbing an education of the "higher" sort. [illegible]

[illegible] of course she is irritable when her studies are interrupted. And when they are all over for the season, her overworked, undeveloped young body cries for the outdoor exercises which are her rightful portion.

In short, to my mind, and I have watched her carefully, Ray is the usual sound, evergreen girl, with her budding nature balking at the artificialities of manner, which come later on as a matter of course. [illegible] usual dear, poor, unfinished woman, to whom the mere mention of a business or profession would be as much of a horror as that of marriage [illegible] a ways too big for her clothes, who needs only to eat, sleep and play between hours of hard study.

In fact you can see with half an eye that when her nature and mind catch up with her length of limb and long skirts she will be quite a splendid woman. Meanwhile she must grow and study.

Many a mother as I have intimated and have reason to know, errs in expecting too much grace of manner in a growing active girl, and to them I will give the same advice that I sent to my cousin Caroline.

Remember how cruel and unnatural and unreasonable some of your own beloved mother's exactions seemed long ago, and don't forget for a moment what an unpruned bough you were yourself at that age. Give Nature a chance first, then study, and look out for the small trimmings of manner. They are easy enough to acquire when a girl has fully matured, if she is entirely occupied with forming bones and gray matter before them; for after all, manners are only the ribbon [illegible] the bouquet, and not the perfume that comes from the heart of the bud. To be taught how to go in and out of a room is certainly a very important part of a well brought up girl's education, but [illegible]

[illegible]

though she is seventeen and wears long skirts, she still has the heart of a child. Then, what is seventeen after all—what but a bundle of long legs and thin arms and big sweet eyes, a thing for father and mother kisses and pink cotton when it comes to talk of the bitter hard world or of husbands? And what [illegible]

[illegible]

As a last word, let me turn again to my [illegible] letters. "Do you think I am the exacting cousin, the ambitious? You know Ray's heart is in the right place—a brave, deep, true heart."

Ah, Caroline, you will break my own. As if THAT were not all—for the manners of a true lady have their roots in the heart!

So I wrote my cousin. And I added—for she asked me to send no set rules of conduct for Ray—"Throw the dust brush out the window till she gets through with college."

VERMILION [illegible]

AT THE annual convention of the [illegible] Hanna [illegible] was strongly advocated. [illegible] of Edmonton [illegible] paper the storing of water in cement tanks was strongly advocated.

The isolation of farm life may be turned to account by the cultivation of the reading habit and the foundation laid for a liberal education. For the boys and young men this is an advantage they possess over the youths of the city. There are few attractions to lead them to spend their spare time in amusements and the result has been often seen in the number of successful business and professional men who are turned out of the country school. By directing this educational ambition in a different channel there should be a greater number of intelligent and well-informed farmers. Even if the young men cannot put the finishing touch of a course in the agricultural college there are ample opportunities for obtaining knowledge on the science and practice of farming.

Newspapers and magazines occupy the leading place in supplying reading matter to the farmer. Bound volumes are valuable in their place, but to the average man they will be supplementary to the weekly journals which are cheaper and which presents subjects in a more attractive style. The rise of the agricultural paper has kept space with the advancement of farming and to a considerable degree has been a factor in its development. It is the medium through which the experience of others can be learned most readily. It brings the farmer in touch with thousands of fellow-workers engaged in solving the same problems as himself.

At this season of the year a young man cannot make a better resolution than to devote a portion of his leisure time during the winter to the reading of papers and books with special attention to his own chosen work. To derive the most benefit, however, there must be discretion used in the choice of reading matter. Assuming that the best class of papers are received in the home there is room for the exercise of judgment as to what shall be read and what shall be left without reading. A farmer is usually devoted to one branch of farming more than to others. It is in this direction that his most careful reading needs to be done and if he is a true student he will clip out and preserve for reference such articles as are of particular value to him. —Ex.

The strained relations existing between the town authorities of Red Deer and the Western General Electric company, have gone so far that notice has been given the electric company by the town that they had forfeited their franchise, basing their contention upon the agreement between the town and company contained in the provincial statutes. The case will now, in all probability, be fought out in the courts, and the matter settled as to what the town must pay for electric lighting and telephone service.

Threshing is about completed in the Napinka district. More damage was done by the hot winds and hail than had been anticipated. The average for wheat will not exceed 13 bushels, although some yields have gone as high as 30 bushels per acre.

Arrangements in connection with the laymen's missionary movement at Red Deer are almost completed, and some of the best speakers on the subject are expected here in the near future. The churches are a unit on the matter and no doubt there will be some successful meeting.

One Client Lawyers.

The poverty of briefless barristers is as proverbial as that of the church mouse. It would not be an unnatural mistake to consider a barrister with only one client hardly better off than one with none. But the modern "one client lawyer" is usually a prosperous individual. Said a man well known in the business world some years ago to a friend: "I want a young lawyer to put down at a desk beside mine. I'll familiarize him with my affairs, and then I want him to keep me out of trouble." The counterpart of this lawyer, whose duty it is to act as his own client's ounce of prevention, may be found in the office of many large concerns. He is often connected with trust companies, banks, banking houses, railroad and other transportation companies and large wholesale mercantile houses. When a merchant found himself in a tangle it was once the custom for him to go to his lawyer for advice. The results were a written "opinion" and a fee. The business man today obtains a lawyer who shall work for him alone. Again, the field of the general practitioner is narrowed.—World's Work.

Minnie Hauck as a Drummer.

Mme. Minnie Hauck was once singing at the Berlin court opera in Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment." Emperor William I., after the opera, called her to his presence and told her she had sung very nicely, but that her true song as the Daughter of the Regiment she had to play the drum—was very small. Next morning a drum major of the First Grenadier regiment called at her hotel and said he had come to give her a drum lesson. The diva was delighted to accept the instruction and learned the whole art of drumming in a couple of dozen lessons. Then the kaiser sent to ask how she was getting on and, hearing that she had made excellent progress, he commanded a performance of "A Daughter of the Regiment." Mme. Hauck acquitted herself excellently in the drumming scene, and the kaiser complimented her warmly, sending her next day a real official military drum with a silver plate and inscription.

An Interrupted Story.

Captain Williams, a jovial Irishman, known everywhere as "Bob," used to be a favorite in Dublin society many years ago. His stories were famous. Give him an incident, and he would act it out to the general admiration.

One evening he went into the club and there began telling the true tale of rescuing a lady and her daughters from a dangerous situation into which their spirited horses had brought them.

"I quieted the ladies," said he, "and I quieted the horses. And the gratitude of the ladies! Me boys, I shouldn't be surprised if her ladyship left me"—

At that moment a little Irish page in livery appeared.

"Sir," said he, "Lady Arnold says she lost her purse when yez helped her out of the carriage, and plase, she says, do yez know anything about it?"

The captain's story was never finished.

Dodging an Interview.

A young reporter once called to interview Senator Quay and found him reading. After formal greetings had been exchanged the senator said: "Do you play poker? Of course you do once in awhile. Then you will find this one of the best poker stories you ever saw," handing the newspaper man a book. The reporter out of politeness read a page. "Ah," said the senator, "I see you are interested. Take the book along and read it at your leisure. Good evening." And the dazed young journalist was out on the sidewalk [illegible]

"Pa," said Johnny, who is a persistent knowledge seeker, "what is a lawgiver?"

"There isn't any such thing, Johnny," replied the old gentleman, who had been involved in considerable litigation in his time.

"But this book says that somebody was a great lawgiver," persisted the youngster.

"Then it's a mistake," rejoined his father. "Law is never given; it's retailed in very small quantities at very high figures."

THE BOW IN WAR.

How It Was Made and Used by the Asiatic Tribesmen.

The bow as used by Asia's horsemen assumes a curious shape. They were made of horn, generally buffalo horn, in two pieces, joined by a wooden center, and when unstrung had the form of a capital C, which enabled them to be hung over the arm on horseback. When strung, a difficult feat to those unused to them, they took the double curve of the antique bow as seen in the representation of Cupid. This was the "Tartar's bow," used by the Scythians, Parthians and Persians and up to quite recent times in India. It was drawn by the thumb alone, on which the archer wore a broad, thick ring of horn, ivory or cornelian, on whose edge the bowstring rested.

The long bow was also much in use among Indian infantry of the middle ages, but neither they nor any other Asiatics appear to have done such execution as the English archers of the same period. Bernier says, describing a battle between Aurangzeb and his brother Dara: "They draw their arrows with a marvelous swiftness, one man being able to draw six of them before a musketeer can discharge twice; but, to say truth, their arrows do but little execution. More of them are lost in the air or broken on the ground than hit."

The bow, in fact, requires more than any other weapon constant practice from childhood, and strong English men of the present day are quite unable to use the bows of the half human Mincopies of the Andamans.—Chambers' Journal.

How the Springboks Travel.

The springboks of South Africa migrate in vast herds, moving in a compact body and carrying everything before them. If a flock of sheep be in the line of march, as sometimes happens, it is surrounded, enveloped and becomes, willingly or unwillingly, part of the springbok army. An African hunter tells the strange story of seeing a lion in the midst of the antelopes, forced to join the march. It is supposed that the lion had sprung too far for his prey, that those upon whom he alighted recoiled sufficiently to allow him to reach the ground, and then the pressure from both flanks and the rear prevented him from escaping from his strange captivity.

If the springboks travels in such armies, how can those in the middle and in the rear find food? In this wise: Those in the front ranks, after they have eaten greedily of the pasture, gradually fall out of the ranks to rest and chew the cud, while the hungry ones in the rear come up, and so the columns are all the while changing.

The Fragrant Heliotrope.

You may give a heliotrope, and not a very large plant, as much water as you give a geranium and think you are giving all that is required. Your plant will fail to make a vigorous and healthy growth because it is not moist enough at the roots. Examine it, and you will find that the tiny roots have extracted the moisture almost wholly. If not given more water at once, some of the young and delicate roots are injured, and the plant takes on a diseased condition, from which it often never recovers. Do not get the idea that the soil in which heliotropes are grown ought to be kept wet. Not at all. But because it requires more moisture than many plants, because it extracts more rapidly from the soil, water should be given oftener to keep the soil in the proper condition.

The Final Straw.

A story is told of a rustic who, after imbibing too freely, fell asleep by the wayside.

The day was hot, and a swarm of flies settled on his face and proceeded to make his sleep anything but pleasant. In a little while a few mosquitoes came along to add their [illegible] of the flies. Of course the man woke up after repeated attacks by the [illegible] bined forces and vainly tried [illegible] them away. Finally along came a big wasp and stung him on the nose. "Now, for that you can all get [illegible]," he said.

The Discovery of the Fork.

Some believe that the fork was in use all over Europe as early as the year 900 A.D., but if they were their use and the fork itself were lost sight of up to about the beginning of the seventeenth century, when it was either discovered or rediscovered and popularized. Walton, Wemms and other antiquarians [illegible] to the earlier date, because a [illegible] vessel containing [illegible] [illegible] was found at Sevington, England, in the year 1834.

Obtaining Heirs in China.

The practical Chinese have adopted a simple way of obtaining heirs where there are no legal ones—the adoption of children who belong to side branches of the family. In this way the family line is kept intact. In the absence of male descendants in the side branches of the family the sons of strangers are adopted. The Chinese prefer this method to marrying second wives.

Criticus—How so?

Witticus—It is "The Decline of the Amateur." As if any one ever knew an amateur to decline.

The thanks of the Standard are due Mr. W. Ellis for turning in and slinging type for this week's paper. The editor is alone this week and besides a rush of job work, was on the sick list for a day from imbibing too large a dose of atmospheric pressure from the ventilating pores of the building.

Roseborough & Co, the main Street jewelers, have just received a new and up-to-date stock. The designs are varied, and very handsomely finished in the latest ideas of the jewelers craft.

A disastrous fire broke out on Main Street, Battleford, on Thursday morning last, as a result of which a portion of the business section of the town is in ashes. The fire originated in H. McKenzie's farm implement warehouse and spread to Cooks' butcher shop, and then to the general store of Burlington & Speers. By the efforts of the fire brigade, the flames were prevented from crossing the street, and no further damage was done. Before the fire was noticed it was beyond control and scarcely anything was saved from the burned buildings. The loss is estimated at $40,000, about half of which is covered by insurance.

Chapter 16

THE moment he entered his room he knew that he had been followed. The rather cumbersome piece of furniture which he had placed against the door was pushed back, and the door itself was ajar. He turned on the light and looked around. Everything was in its place. He looked under the bed and in the closet. Then he sat down and thought. He had been followed from the moment he left the Hotel Metropole. He had not noticed anyone in particular, but he had a vague impression that he had been followed. He had not noticed anyone in the train, but he had noticed a man in a motor car who had passed him on the road. He had noticed a man on a bicycle who had overtaken him. He had noticed a man on foot who had passed him. He had noticed a man in a motor car who had passed him again. He had noticed a man on a bicycle who had passed him again. Miss Bessie Pilkie will sing a solo at the evening service in the Methodist church Sunday.

Mrs. Percy H. Abercrombie is convalescing nicely after her operation for appendicitis, and is gradually regaining strength.

The Rev. Mr. Day and wife arrived in town this week from the Mackenzie diocese, and will assume charge of the outlying English church missions here. They are occupying the rectory.

R. C. Pinkney is busy building a fine residence on his homestead, south of town. We understand that he shortly expects a sister to arrive from England.

The annual Harvest - thanksgiving service will be held in St. Paul's Church, Islay, on Sunday next, October 24th, at 7.30 p. m. The preacher will be the Rev. G. F. Trench, of Lloydminster. All are welcome.

A farewell dance was given on Friday evening last, in honor of Roy Jackson, who is leaving town. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. Jackson of a travelling case by a number of his friends in town.

Mr. Joe Trentman of Mannville, who has been with the Standard since its establishment some six months ago, has been obliged, owing to other pressing demands, to withdraw from the staff of the paper for a time at least.

Mr. John Thomson, who recently disposed of his large implement business to the West Brothers, left this week for his old home in the States where he will spend the winter. On his return in the spring he will engage in farming and stock raising on an extensive scale, utilizing his [illegible] h. p. steam plowing outfit in turning over the prairie. Mr. Thomson also has some hundred head of young stock.

Two alarms of fire were sounded during the past week. One was incipient blaze in the waiting room of the C. N. R. depot, the other a fire running across the grass south-east of the English Church towards the Hayward Livery and feed stables. Both were soon extinguished.

We are very sorry to hear that J. C. MacPherson of the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff is shortly to leave us. We understand that he is to fill a more important post in the Elmwood branch, Winnipeg. 'Mac' has been with us for nearly three years, and will be missed by his many friends in this district. His place will be taken by A. E. Read, from the Neepawa branch.

Mr. Joseph McKone is erecting an excellent residence on his lots in the east end of the town.

Roy. C. Jackson left on Wednesday night's train for Edmonton.

R. W. Lines, architect, of Edmonton, spent last week - end in this district, the guest of Norman Murray.

Geo. Emery of Lashburn was renewing acquaintances in town on Sunday last.

John Munn, late manager of the Vermilion Creamery, is registered at the Alberta.

C. McPhee, of Kitscoty, paid a business trip to Vermilion on Tuesday last.

S. H. Roseborough is erecting a house on his lot at the corner of Laurier Avenue and Second Street North.

Olaf Larson, formerly of Vermilion, and now of Biggar, Sask., paid a business visit to town on Tuesday last.

M. G. Brimacombe has received the appointment of process issuer for this district in place of Roy. C Jackson, who is leaving town.

U. S. Steeves, who sold out his farm North of town last spring, is back in town again, and we understand that he intends to settle once more in this district.

A rather serious accident happened to W. J. Beal while driving to town on Monday morning last, his shot gun exploding, and severely injuring his foot.

A Box Social and Concert is to be held in the Allandale Schoolhouse, S. E. 16 - 52 - 5, on Friday evening, November 5th. No admission. Ladies are requested to bring boxes.

Bruce Thomas, auctioneer, is holding an auction sale of live stock and household furniture at Mannville on Saturday next, October 23rd. The sale will commence at 1 o'clock p. m. and there is a good list of stuff advertised.

Mr. Pinck and family, from British Columbia, are new arrivals in Vermilion, and have located on land south of town. Mr. Pinck has an excellent outfit of horses cattle, etc. just the right kind of an outfit to make things go in a new country.

Craig Brothers express themselves as being more than pleased with the recent change which they have made in their business, and say that the people of this district are showing their appreciation of the exceptional bargains they are offering. Their cash sales are more than double every day as a result.

GREAT EVIDENCES OF AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS

One Firm Has Sold 350 Steam Plowing Outfits This Season Immense Areas Being Broken

No greater evidence of the agricultural development that is taking place in western Canada could be shown than a statement from the Cockshutt Plow company. They say that during the past summer they sold in the neighborhood of 350 steam ploughing outfits, divided as follows: Alberta 150, Saskatchewan 100, and Manitoba 100. It is stated that other firms handling this class of implements have sold a correspondingly large number of steam plows. In many sections of the country these plows have been working day and night, and thousands of acres of prairie sod has been broken into fine wheat growing land.

Mr. Frank Cockshutt, the president of the company which bears his name, is at present in the west and the other day went to Regina in company with Mr. Mott, the local general manager of the company.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING

Sunday Services and Monday's Supper and Entertainment

Harvest Thanksgiving services were held in the Methodist Church Sunday. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion with grain vegetables and flowers and looked beautiful under its abundance of harvest fruits. The Rev. H. E. Gordon, B.A., of Strathcona, preached to a crowded church at both the morning and evening services, and his powerful discourses left a deep impression upon the congregation.

Chapter 17

THE little town had been [illegible] grateful for its new sensation. The return of Hugh Stires and his apparent [illegible] transformation was the prime subject of conversation. For a half year the place had known but one other event as startling. That was the [illegible] of a [illegible] stranger [illegible] a thicket [illegible] Prendergast [illegible]

The [illegible] of the Mountain Valley House [illegible] the pros and cons [illegible] There were many [illegible] who, starting [illegible] and nursing [illegible] face. In his [illegible] "playing a wild game."

"Your view is [illegible]," said Prendergast, "there's been a blocking in the past granted. It's give the devil his due. As for the other [illegible] no more evidence against [illegible] than there is against you or me."

"They didn't find the body on any [illegible]

... home the night you were out of your head."

Harry started. "What do you mean?" he asked thickly.

Prendergast's oily manner was gone now. His savage temper came uppermost.

"I forgot you didn't know about that," he sneered. "I made a neat story of it in the town. They've been gabbing about it ever since."

Harry caught his breath. [illegible]

"I wonder if she'd done it if she'd known all I know," continued the other malevolently. "You'd better go up to the sanitarium, Hugh, and give her a [illegible] sweet kiss for it!"

A lust of rage rose in Harry's throat, but he choked it down. His hand fell [illegible]

"The town will suit you better."

[illegible] "he growled, "and [illegible] go it alone." [illegible] "Well, it won't pay you [illegible] I know too much! Do [illegible]"

... had watched all night. There had been much guess work. The cabin on the hillside was the nearest habitation—the company's flume disgorged its flood to the gulch beneath it—and suspicion had eventually pointed its way. The sudden ceasing of the robberies with the disappearance of Hugh Stires had given form to this suspicion. Now, almost coincident with his return, the thievery had recommenced. It had been a red letter day for Devlin and his ilk, who cavilled at the more charitable. Of all this, however, the object of their "I told you so" was serenely ignorant.

Entering the town, there were few stirring on the sunny streets, but he could not but be aware that those he met stopped to gaze after him. Some indeed followed. His first objective point was a jeweler's, where he could turn his gold dust into readier coin for needful purchases. He saw a sign next the Mountain Valley House and entered.

The jeweler weighed the dust, with a distrustful frown, but Harry's head was turned away. He was reading a freshly printed placard tacked on the wall, an offer of reward for the detection of the sluice thief. He read it through mechanically, for as he read there came from the street outside a sound that touched a muffled chord in his brain. It was the exhaust of a motor car.

He thrust the money the goldsmith grudgingly handed him into his pocket and turned to the door. A long red automobile had stopped at the curb. Two men whom it carried were just entering the hotel. Something in the sight of the long, low "racer" reminded Harry—of what? His eye traced its polished lines, noting its running mechanism, its build for utmost speed, with the eager lighting of a connoisseur. He took a step toward it, oblivious to all about him.

He did not note that men were gathering, that the nearest saloon was emptying of its occupants. [illegible]

[illegible]

BALLADS OF A CHEECHACO.

My rhymes are rough, and often in my rhyming
I've drifted, silver-sailed, on seas of dream,
Hearing afar the bells of Elfland chiming,
Seeing the groves of Arcadie agleam.

I was the thrall of Beauty that rejoices
From peak snow-diadomed to regal star;
Yet to mine aerie [illegible] the voices,
The pregnant voices of the Things That Are.

The Here, the Now, the vast Forlorn around us;
The gold-delirium, the ferine strife;
The lusts that lure us on, the hates that hound us,
Our red rags in the patch-work quilt of Life.

The nameless men who nameless rivers travel,
And in strange valleys greet strange deaths alone;
The grim, intrepid ones who would unravel
The mysteries that shroud the Polar Zone.

These will I sing, and if one of you linger
Over my pages in the Long, Long Night,
And on some lone line lay a calloused finger,
Saying: "It's human true—it hits me right";
Then will I count this loving toil well spent;
Then will I dream awhile—content, content.

FROM PIT TO PARLIAMENT.

How "Tommy Burt" Became M.P. in the British Commons.

From pitman to M.P. and Privy Councillor! Such is the amazing achievement of Mr. Thomas Burt, the first miner ever elected to Parliament, and his rise from the ranks has by no means been without its struggles and hardships, as a perusal of "From Mine to Ministry," by Mr. Thomas Cox Meech, will show. At one time, for instance, when Mr. Burt entered upon the secretaryship of the Northumberland Miners' Union, the little problem he had to solve was a membership of 4,000, an extensive strike in progress, and a balance of £23 in hand!

Mr. Burt's start in life was made at the age of ten, when he was engaged as a trapper-boy in a mine.

It was his business to open and shut the door which directed one of the air-currents in the mine as the tubs came through. At this he worked a nominal twelve hours a day, not from bank to bank, as time in the pit is now counted, but he actually had the strain and the wear and the responsibility, sitting at his post in the dark, of watching the door for the whole twelve hours. From this position of youthful trust he was promoted to that of a donkey-driver, at a wage of one shilling a day.

At the mature age of fourteen the future legislator began his literary studies. He worked thirteen hours in the pit, it took an hour to go and an hour to come, and despite this fifteen hours out of the twenty-four devoted to daily work, he found time to cultivate his taste for books. His father's books were principally theological and connexional magazines. In later years he talked with pride of the first book he bought for himself. He walked into Newcastle and walked back on a pay-day to save his fare both ways, and raised enough to buy a copy of Cowper's poems.

As well as being the miners' member, Mr. Burt is the miners' idol. The story of his election, when he beat Major Duncan at the poll, is instructive. [illegible]

Decorations That Made His Majesty Explode With Wrath—A Medical Diploma For a Prince of Wales—The Duke and the Bootblacks.

Some years ago a paragraph appeared in a Berlin daily stating that Prince Henry, who had just returned from his visit to the United States, had brought home as a present to his brother a number of plants of a new variety of crimson carnation. "As every one knows," the paragraph continued, "the red carnation is his imperial majesty's favorite flower."

On the day after the publication of this news the kaiser was due at Aix-la-Chapelle. A member of the town council suggested that every one in the town wear a buttonhole of the kaiser's favorite flower.

The suggestion was at once acted on. The frock coated members of the deputation which waited next morning on the platform each wore proudly a buttonhole of the deepest crimson.

The poor fellows could not conceive why the kaiser's demeanor was so freezing. He dismissed them with a few words, got into his carriage and drove off.

At the town hall was another deputation, similarly decorated. Then his majesty's wrath exploded. "What is the meaning of this insult?" he demanded. Some one explained, and then one of the kaiser's attendants took the mayor aside. "My dear sir," he said, "surely you know that the red [illegible]

Promptly Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If your hand trembles or is unsteady, remember that this is a sure and early sign of your nervous system being at fault. The signal may develop slowly to a worse stage. You feel unaccountably weak and weary after exertion, you lose flesh; you turn against food and suffer palpitations and indigestion after eating. At times you are intensely irritable, greatly depressed and easily [illegible]. Sometimes sharp pains shoot down your spine [illegible] legs and probably neuralgia [illegible] These are some of the troubles that indicate the presence of nervous disorders [illegible] complete nervous collapse and possibly paralysis. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have won a great reputation by curing all forms of nervous disease. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually increase the supply of good, red blood, feed the supply of good, red, blood, feed, strengthen and tone the nerves, enable them to perform their functions and dispel all signs of a breakdown.

A wonderful record as a traveler has been achieved by Dash, the [illegible] haired fox terrier which accompanied Dr. M. A. Stein, the archaeological explorer, throughout his great journey of 10,000 miles, undertaken on behalf of the Indian Government, through Central Asia into China and back.

Though the aggregate of the marches amounted roughly to 10,000 in [illegible] two years and eight months, the actual distance covered by Dash, taking into account his canine habits of progression, may be estimated at well over 20,000 miles. Dash made the journey on foot practically the whole way, except when he went [illegible] for short distances [illegible] times of great heat. When in the Taklamakan Desert, Dash, like the rest of the party, had his water allowance strictly limited. It came from the supply carried on camels in the form of ice.

Dash went over mountain passes as high as 16,000 feet above sea level. Throughout the journey the dog kept well and his menu was made up of scraps from the camp larder. Each night he slept in Dr. Stein's tent, and [illegible] proved himself a very useful [illegible]. Legislative Reform

A striking fact was strikingly commented upon by Lord Grey in his speech at the laying of the corner stone of the legislature and departmental buildings at Regina. Speaking of the growth of Saskatchewan, he said the yield of wheat from nine million bushels ten years ago to the provincial government estimate of eighty odd million bushels this year, he pointed out that the latter is some

It is reported that at a recent meeting of six hundred members of the W.C.T.U., in Chicago, somebody suggested the organization of the old ballad "Where is my wandering boy to-night" with its wailing chorus that sounds like the wind blowing through a graveyard. Just as the wind was beginning to blow, a Mrs. Emily Hill arose and said: "Let us cut out the old hymn now and forever. It is a foolish bit of sentiment, and reflects upon us as mothers and sisters. If we don't know where our wandering boys are, we shouldn't be here singing about it, we should be out hunting them, and if we know where they are and that they are going astray, we should be after them with wet elm clubs. Discipline is the proper thing for wandering boys."

No man could devise his time and ability to a nobler task than that of so urging conviction upon those who produce the world's wealth should secure at least a reasonable share of it.

The Grain Growers Guide company sold half a million bushels of wheat for export during the week ending October 9th. Last Monday their sales for export were 1,000,000 bushels. Their receipts for the week were 855 cars.

Babylonian Creation Legends.

The story of the creation, as told on the clay tablets of ancient Babylon, is interesting. Several editors appear to have been regarded as in existence at the beginning of things. At least two, Apsu and Tiamat, represented chaos, and the former rebelled against the gods in consequence. The first struggle was between him and Ea, whom he slew. Ea created the world. Man was made by Ea, who is also author of the deliverance from the Deluge. Ea was the only being who could help Adapa, who broke the wing of the south wind. Merodach, Ea's son, is credited with performing the work of creation. Merodach, too, was the hero who slew Tiamat. Merodach is also identified with Nimrod, the mighty hunter before the Lord. Merodach is also identified with Bel, who is mentioned in the Bible. Merodach is also identified with Marduk, who is mentioned in the Bible. Merodach is also identified with Bel-Merodach, who is mentioned in the Bible. Merodach is also identified with Bel-Merodach, who is mentioned in the Bible.

A Razor's Edge.

Minute Teeth, Like Those of a Saw, Make to Keenness.

The edge of a razor consists of innumerable points or "teeth," which if the razor is of good material follow each other throughout its whole length with great order and cleanness. The minutest regularity of these minute "teeth" goes to make up the blade's supreme keenness. The edge acts upon the beard not so much by the direct application of weight or force as it does by a slight "sawing" movement, which causes the minute teeth to act in regular succession upon part of the hairy growth. The best blades, according to the razor's maxim, have the teeth of their edges set as regularly as those of a perfectly set saw.

The magic in the magic effect of hot water in the razor's cause the art of dipping it frequently during the finish of any group or duty of shaving with which they have been charged. It does away with the fact that a set of shaving and that they may be of right edge and be ready to take a seat. a few hasty, sad essays of the guests had loosed more than mere upon the imagination as if therein might be the key to the mystery.

The Pretty Guests who were wont to sit on the veranda rocking their pretty feet in the fresh air of the early golden of September, discussing social climbers and comparing financials and who now had a new theme. What might Miss Astor be? What was her game? Was she as poorly as she and the Monday night card party and above their social ken?

"And now you see," said Miss Hopkins Jones, a survivor of doubtful age, whose family consisted of two bridge bottles, "that one has plenty of money and—and that she's very young and is receiving a visit."

But Miss Astor continued to keep to herself in spite of her intuitive knowledge that she was doing herself no good in the eyes of the pretty people by doing so. She slept late in the morning, ruddied a twenty mountain air exercise in the forest, and on the third day she set out in search of humor.

It was on the fourth morning of her stay at Tarrytown, with a pleasant and elegant fisherman was getting his breakfast in spite of his restless knowledge that she was doing herself no good in the eyes of the pretty people by doing so, she slept late in the morning, ruddied a twenty mountain air exercise in the forest, and on the third day she set out in search of humor.

One on the Bishop.

It was Bishop Potter—of the Methodist church, who was attending some large affair, a certain entertainment. Finding it at length, the atmosphere of the hall to be unbearably warm, he slipped out to get a little fresh air and to recuperate in freedom.

The steps of a park, nearby, looked inviting, and he sat down into one of them. It was cool and comfortable. He leaned back to rest, but, alas! he was a large, heavy person. The steps settled down pretty solidly between the arms of the chair, but he tried to get up he stuck fast and was.

So he struggled to extricate himself, trying under his dignity to attract a little girl standing by regarding him with very curiosity and finally succeeded.

Marmaduke Wilson, assistant to the librarian, and Archibald Currie, messenger, with two other assistants, made frantic efforts to save some of the invaluable books, but much of his life Mr. Currie rushed into the reading room and threw bundles of papers out of the window, trusting in fate that they would come to no security. He then turned his attention to the reading-room files of newspapers files and endeavored to carry out the same. The files of the Globe, of which the province is said to have had the only remaining complete set. But at this moment the flames broke through the roof and the falling stars and timber drove the rescuers from the room.

"The most deplorable loss of all," said Mr. Wilson after the fire, "is the Canada section, although I have a number of books concerning the admirable system of Governor Hennepin's travels through Canada, which contained a valuable record of the Jesuit missions and explorations that can never be replaced. In addition to these, there were papers relating to the rebellion, portions of the Legislative Assembly and pamphlets about Canada, duplicates of which will be hard to find."

With regard to the journals, the only complete file now in existence is in the United States. A few years ago the Government sent stenographers to Ottawa to copy the journals from 1808 to 1890, as the Legislature decided these should be obliterated by any cost.

The constitutional law section was also consulted in work of this kind, and the provincial library was drawn upon to make the files complete. Many of these have now out of print, and in spite of money cannot be replaced.

The gallery of the library was largely given over to magazines. A file of the Gentleman's Magazine dating back to 1731 and a part to the Annual. This magazine was among the first ever published, and is now valued by the curious. Lots of it. Transactions of the Scientific Societies, Journals of the Quarterly, Edinburgh, London and Dublin Reviews, The North-west Territory, North Dakota and other publications are bound.

In addition to these, all the books on Canada, among the other papers were destroyed, and the library is now being refurnished. The Government has already appointed a librarian, and the work of replacing the books will be commenced.

As far as possible the books will be the same editions of the publications destroyed, but, unfortunately, many of these are out of print, and cannot be replaced. WORK OF YEARS DONE.

Handsome Library Ruined in Legislature Fire.

Serious as is the damage in the Ontario Parliament buildings in the recent fire, the really irremediable loss which the province suffers is in the destruction of the unique and invaluable state papers, manuscripts, journals of the House, newspapers and others library and historical material which have been consumed. The fire spread so rapidly that there was no time to save even a portion of the priceless collection of the main reading room. But before the flames had completed their work of ruin a large commission of leading men and subscriptions files stored in the safety, where the most valuable records are kept.

Marmaduke Wilson, assistant to the librarian, and Archibald Currie, messenger, with two other assistants, made frantic efforts to save some of the invaluable books, but much of his life Mr. Currie rushed into the reading room and threw bundles of papers out of the window, trusting in fate that they would come to no security. "Another Pennsylvania" is Mr. von Hammerstein's description of the Athabasca watershed. He did not think that the lower levels would ever be an agricultural country, but was convinced that one day there would be great mining activity around Fort McMurray. Gas and oil products would, he thought supply all the west with street paving materials and perhaps be exported to the western States.

As soon as the railway had been built, table salt would be made in the McMurray country from the rich deposits there. Possibly a great potassium industry would be created.

"The worry I have had to keep my propositions going has been enough to kill a cat," said Mr. von Hammerstein, "and the hardships I have endured would have killed a horse. Now however, the worst is over. Capital is knocking at the door and I am glad to say that I haven't to ... with a shotgun."

The spectators stood staring. "He'll never catch him," said Michael Halloran, who had joined the crowd. "Funeral Hollow's only a mile away." With others he hurried to the hotel balcony, where he could watch the exciting race. Jessica stood stock still, as blanched as Devlin, wringing her hands.

With the first bound of the car under him, as the crowd was scattered behind, a weird, sombre thrill shot through Harry's every nerve. Each bolt and bar he knew as one would tell his fingers. Somewhere at some time, he had known such flight through mellow sunlight, with the air singing past. Where? When?

Not for the fraction of a second, however, did his gaze waver. He knew the [illegible] in which the town [illegible] to a narrow ravine to the southward. He could see from the cabin doorway a stretch of break-neck road only a mile ahead. Could the child hold on? Could he distance those frenzied hoofs in time? The arrow of the indicator stole forward on the dial.

Far behind as the crowd watched a cry rose from the hotel balcony. It was Farmer [illegible], the freighter, with a glass [illegible] eye. "He's gain-ing!" he shouted. "He has almost overtaken the horse!"

Chapter 10

JESSICA bore back from the town that afternoon a spirit of tremulous gladness. In the few moments of that thrilling ride and rescue a mysterious change had been wrought in her.

In the past days her soul had been possessed by a painful agitation which she did not attempt to analyze. At moments the ingrained hatred of Hugh's act, the resentment that had been the result of that year of pain, had risen to battle for the inherent justice of things. At such times she was restless and sat much alone, puzzling David Stone by monosyllabic responses.

She could not tell him that the son whose name he never took upon his lips was so near—that he whose crime his father's pride of name had hidden through the months since then had gone down with the current, shunned by honest folk, adding to his one dismal act the weight of persistent repetition. She could not tell him this, even though that son now lived without measure of the evil he had done, though he struggled under a cloud of hatred, reaching out to clean deed and high resolve.

Now, however, all distrust and trepidation had vanished. Strangely and suddenly the complex warfare in her mind had stilled. Standing with Mrs. Halloran, she had listened to the comment with shining eyes. Not that she distinguished any sudden change of opinion to turn persecution to popularity and make the reprobate of today the favorite of tomorrow, but in its very reserve she instinctively felt a new tension of respect. Suspicion and dislike aside, there was none there who would again hinder the man who [illegible]

OLDEST WEDDING PACT.

An Interesting Contract Which Was Drawn Up Centuries Ago.

Out of the mass of so called "elephantine" papyrus in the Royal museum at Berlin on which a number of scholars have been at work several months have come some of the most curious finds the scientific world has been presented with in years.

One of these is the most ancient marriage contract in the world, according to Professor Leopold Wenger, an eminent Hellenist. Written in excellent classical Greek, from its content evidently composed about 311 B. C., the document begins, "In the seventh year of the reign of Alexander, the son of Alexander, in the fourteenth year of the satrapy of Ptolemaeus, in the month of Dios."

The contract sets forth that Heraclides has agreed to take as his wife Demetria of Kos, the lawful daughter of her father, Leptines, and of her mother, Philotis. Then it acknowledges the receipt of clothing and jewels valued at a thousand drachmas which Demetria has laid at his feet in recognition of the honor he is about to bestow upon her. Even the newly wedded couple's place of residence is given in the agreement. The rest of the contract deals with the possibility of the husband's unfaithfulness and provides for the regulation and settlement of any lapse in obligation. That Demetria should be untrue evidently was not contemplated, as no mention is made of such possibility.

In case the husband should forget his vows it is provided that each side shall appoint an arbitrator, and when the charge is proved the marriage is to be dissolved, the husband giving back the thousand drachmas' worth of clothes and jewels and paying, besides, a thousand drachmas in Alexandrine silver currency.

A NEW GUN.

It Doesn't Recoil, and It Will Fire 1,125 Shots an Hour.

Ever since men began to kill each other, which was very soon after selfish interests began to clash, a good share of their leisure time has been devoted to the elevating pursuit of inventing instruments for that killing. From the time when the early prowler in the primeval forest discovered that by tying to the end of a stick the stone destined to crack the skull of his enemy he could make the crack more surely deadly his inventive genius, sign, as it is, of his high rank among the creatures, has been busy over this problem. How to strike with fatal effect upon his foe and with safety to himself has been his study, and he has given birth to many an idea tending more and more from age to age to enable him to do this work by mechanical contrivance.

It is curious that conditions still appear in the weapons which the genius of centuries have labored to perfect and that our eye should be opened at this late day to almost ludicrous imperfections in our most cherished killing machine—the rifle. Yet it is only a few years since the smoke of black powder was done away with and comparatively a matter of days since young Mr. Maxim produced his sound choking, flame suppressing device. And now comes news from Sweden that an inventor there has found means at last to stop the kick which has made sore shoulders from the time the first blunderbuss was discharged and has constructed a weapon that will drop men so fast that a single marksman may dispose of a regiment in an hour.

Eleven hundred and twenty-five shots to the hour from a gun that is carried in the hand and fired from the shoulder is a high record. [illegible]

PHOTOGRAPHERS' RISKS

THRILLING ADVENTURES OF SNAP-SHOTTERS.

Camera Men Who Risk Their Lives For Pictures Have to Possess Intrepid Courage and Unlimited Patience—F. J. Mortimer's Work Photographing Big Waves—Snapping Wild Birds.

Although the sensational photograph has provided a fund of amusement and interest to the readers of the up-to-date illustrated periodical, few realize that in many cases the intrepid photographer-journalist has risked his life in order to obtain such splendid results.

A professional photographer with years of experience told the writer recently "that the man who desires to take up newspaper photography as a means of livelihood must have a constitution of iron, nerves of steel, and the abilities of an expert steeple-jack to enable him to climb to any eminence to secure the snapshots the public are thirsting for." However that may be, fear must be unknown to the photographer, and he must frequently be prepared to run more than ordinary risks of serious injury.

Most photographers nowadays specialize. Mr. F. J. Mortimer has won renown by his daring and skill in [illegible]

RHEUMATISM DRIVEN FROM THE BLOOD

A Remedy Which Assists Nature Makes a Cure Which is Permanent as This Case Proves.

Every sufferer from rheumatism wants to be cured and to stay cured. The prospect of the frequent return of the trouble is not attractive to anybody who has gone through one siege. Most treatments aim simply to "keep down" the rheumatic poisons in the blood. The tonic treatment by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has proved by hundreds of cures that it builds up the blood to a point that enables it to cast out these poisons through the regular channels of excretion—the bowels, the kidneys and the skin. When this is done the rheumatism is permanently cured and as long as the blood is kept pure and rich the patient will be free from rheumatism. Mr. Thomas McNeil, Richibucto, N.B., says: "Permit me to bear testimony to the worth of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for acute rheumatism. My son, Fred[illegible], was subject to this painful trouble for a period of eight or ten years and during this time periodical attacks would regularly occur. His last attack was a most severe one and the pains were excruciating in the extreme, shooting through the various parts of the body to such an extent that even the approach of any person would cause him to cry out with fear, and he had rest neither day or night. Our family doctor, a man of skill and experience, applied many remedies without avail and could give no encouragement other than that the warmer weather then approaching might prove beneficial. Just at this time we noticed where some person similarly afflicted had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. He kept on using the Pills, each succeeding box showing improvement, until he had taken ten boxes, when all pains and aches had completely disappeared [illegible]

THE MONTAGNAIS INDIANS.

Little Known Tribe Spend Most of Their Time in the "Bush."

The Montagnais Indians, dwelling for the most part on the shores of the Lower St. Lawrence, are very little known. As a rule they are considered an unintelligent tribe and are rather looked down upon by the Crees, Iroquois and Nasquapees. Although not perhaps so thrifty as the Crees nor so educated as the Iroquois, they are far from being unintelligent, having taught themselves to read and write and being remarkably quick at figures.

These Indians live for the greater part of the year in the interior of the forest, only coming out to the Hudson Bay Co.'s posts for about three months in the summer to trade their furs for such things as they require for another sojourn in the interior and to see their priest.

They leave again for the "bush" in August after having been advanced provisions and clothing by the Hudson Bay Co. and proceed by canoe up the largest rivers (usually the St. John or the Romaine rivers) until they reach the height of land, where they camp until the snow comes and they are able to continue their journey on snowshoes, carrying their provisions, clothing and tents on toboggans, men, women and children all carrying their share of the load. The very small children are carried on their mothers' backs wrapped in fawn skins and laced up in bags made of the same. This bag the mother carries suspended by a thick thong of caribou hide tied around her forehead.

They do not travel very great distances at a time, unless hungry and in search of caribou, for although the men are fast walkers the women do not walk as fast as an average Canadian girl can.

These Indians usually travel in bands of fifty families until they reach the height of land, where they separate, each family going to its respective hunting ground to hunt and trap for the remainder of the [illegible]

IT IS A MORAL FORCE

COUNTRY NEWSPAPER IS AN IMPORTANT FACTOR.

Editor Has Splendid Chance to Exert Influence for Good Upon Life of a Community—High Ideals Must Prevail—Progressive Publishers.

The following excellent article on "The Newspaper a Moral Social Factor," by Frank M. Johnson, publisher of the Lowell Ledger, Lowell, Mich., was printed in a recent issue of the Michigan Bulletin.

The city daily and the country weekly are two widely different propositions. The metropolitan newspaper, as a rule, is owned and controlled by wealthy corporations. Its editors are paid to express opinions and sentiments favorable or acceptable to the private and corporate interests of their employers, and upon their fidelity to those interests depends their daily bread.

The country publisher is usually his own [illegible] and editor, and to a greater degree independent morally and politically than is his big [illegible] brother. In many cases, however, [illegible] advantage [illegible] part of the people with whom his lot is cast or by faults and limitations of his own.

Another marked difference between city and country journalism is that in the former the editors—and the power behind them—are unknown to one in a hundred of their readers, while with the country newspaper the conditions are exactly reversed. Hence, the importance of character in the country publisher, as a stream can not rise higher than its source, and a damaged reputation will nullify the moral force of the most brilliant [illegible]

The long prevailing opinion of the office of a newspaper in the community is that it is a mirror in which the public sees itself reflected as it is [illegible]

[illegible] States [illegible] the agricultural interests, conditions are much better than ever before. While co-operation is being applied to almost every phase of American agriculture, there are four lines in which it has been proved eminently successful, namely, marketing of fruit, marketing of Vegetables, marketing of grain, and the manufacturing and marketing of dairy products. The co-operative associations of Southern California are probably the highest type in the country. They are perfectly organized and work to the satisfaction of the growers. The situation is somewhat unique in that the region is devoted very largely to the exclusive growing of fruits, consequently the matter can be quite easily handled. Co-operative creameries and cheese factories are a decided success, Iowa leading in this respect. These have considerable to contend with in the way of opposition from proprietory concerns. The shipping of vegetables by co-operative associations has succeeded with varying degrees of success all over the United States. The west, including such regions as Texas, Colorado, and Arkansas, has had excellent results.

"The grain growers of the great Mississippi valley have had the hardest fight but are gradually coming to their own. A few years ago the co-operative elevator was more or less of a joke. Today there are more than 1600 in successful operation and more than 300,000 grain growers own stock in these co-operative elevators. They handle about one-sixth of the grain produced in the United States. Eight new co-operative elevators are started every week, and the movement is only well started.

"These co-operative elevators have been compelled to fight the old line concerns. These had no [illegible] monopoly of the grain trade [illegible] great profits resulting [illegible] that they employed every possible means to [illegible] the co-operative movement. In this they were aided and abetted by the railroads. These two great influences directed all their energies against the farmers, who, lacking organization and being isolated, made slow progress at first. When a farmers' company attempted to build an elevator, building sites were refused by the railroads, switches [illegible] cars could [illegible] obtained, and every other [illegible] known to the soulless corporation [illegible]. The farmers [illegible] developed the fighting [illegible] [illegible] and to the interstate commerce [illegible] securing their rights, although the [illegible]

[illegible] business transacted by them. The keystone to success must always [illegible] the [illegible] making the enterprise will be a failure. It is claimed that the farmers are naturally [illegible]. Undoubtedly the idea has grown up from the fact that from time immemorial the tiller of the soil has been the legitimate prey for the dwellers in the cities. The farmer is buncoed and robbed and given but little return for his labor. Centuries of such treatment naturally developed this spirit of distrust, so that it was but nature when the farmers attempted to do business themselves and employ a manager they scrutinized his every act and also that of his fellow co-operators. This resulted in the failure of many co-operative enterprises which have since been very successful.

"The failure of the grange store was another body blow, from which it took many years to recover. During the last ten years, however, co-operative enterprises have been so uniformly successful, and the general principles of co-operation are now so well understood, that it is very unlikely that any serious setback will occur again. There is no reason why the progress should not be steady and substantial. In organizing your society follow the lines adopted by some existing successful enterprise. Employ a capable manager and your troubles are over.

"It is a source of constant surprise why England has succeeded so signally in co-operative effort, while the United States has had such a difficult proposition. At the last annual meeting of the co-operative societies of Great Britain the records showed that during 1908 business amounting to $517,000,000 was transacted. This was a substantial increase over the previous year. The membership of this society was over 2,500,000. Not only do the people of Great Britain market their crops successfully through co-operative agencies, but they save even more by making their purchases through the co-operative stores.

"Co-operation in Great Britain is highly organized. The co-operative society manufactures as well as distributes. The great central organization is rapidly becoming the chief factor in the mercantile life of the nation. Something of this kind will and will eventually develop in the United States. When this comes about farming will be much more profitable. The farmer will have just return for his labor. Great concentration of wealth will be impossible, while on the other hand, extreme poverty, especially in the country will be unknown. This state of affairs cannot be accomplished unless the [illegible] classes cooperate."

Two Years for Writing a Libel

John H. Welch, of Vegreville Alta., connected with the Massey Harris Company agency, charged with circulating a defamatory libel concerning two respectable citizens of Vegreville, was tried before Chief Justice Sifton, at Edmonton, and the crown proved conclusively that the accused was the author of the libel complained of, and that it was published by him. A large number of postcards and letters of distinctly libellous character were put in evidence, and proved to be written by the accused.

The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

Sir—For the information of those who listened to the evidence given in the case of Whitson vs Roseborough, tried before Judge Taylor at the district court sitting in Vermilion, Oct. 5th 1909 the following letter will speak for itself

Chicago, Oct 12th .09
Messrs. Roseborough & Co.,
Vermilion, Alta.

Gentlemen—Your letter of Oct. 6th, addressed to our factory at Elgin, is received Movement 5792546 was our grade 47. It was an 18 size nickel, full plate movement and contained 11 jewels. It left our factory on August 11th, 1894. This grade is now discontinued.

If you were to give the owner a 15 jewel nickel movement of our present manufacture, you would recompense him very handsomely [illegible] for his loss.

Yours very truly,
Elgin National Watch Co.

It will be remembered that Mr. C. F. Slater took the prescribed oath and stated that the watch in question was almost new and had 17 jewels, that the value would be $18.00.

I only publish this to vindicate my name from the odium which otherwise would attach to it.

S. H. Roseborough.

By CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT

(Chicago Record-Herald, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

As Wyld entered the parlor a young man was warming his hands at the fire toward us.

"Fred," said Wyld, "let me introduce Mr. Meredith."

"Pleased to meet you," said Meredith.

"Fred," said Wyld, "has been appointed to the consulship at Rio Janeiro, and he's going down there to-morrow to say good-by to his folks."

"Sit down, Meredith," said Wyld. "Have a cigar. Let me see, you were graduated from college in 1900, weren't you?"

"Yes," said Meredith, "and I've been in the consular service ever since. I've been pretty lucky all the way through. I've had only one bad post, and that was my first one. I was sent to Bogota, and I was there two years. Then I was transferred to Caracas, and I've been there ever since. I've had a pretty good time, on the whole, and I've got a lot of friends down there. I'm sorry to leave them, but I'm glad to get back to the United States. I've been away from home for seven years, and I'm getting homesick. I'm looking forward to seeing my folks and my friends again."

"Well," said Wyld, "I'm glad you're pleased with your appointment. I've been pretty lucky myself

20,000 BUSHELS WHEAT SHIPPED FROM ISLAY

Grain Deliveries Good Standard Correspondent Tells of All the Doings at Islay

The elevator has handled a large quantity of grain up to the present, and will apparently be kept busy for some time. The continual click of the engine is a sure indication that the grain keeps rolling in. A large quantity of grain has already been shipped from here—over 20,000 bushels—and that is only a portion of what is to come in, as the farmers who have any distance to haul their grain are waiting for good sleighing.

A carload of flax will be shipped during the week.

The hard frosts of the last few days have put an end to all fall work on the land, though one or two farmers near town were seen ploughing on Saturday.

A very successful sale was held at W.N. Trimble's ranch on Oct. 30. Several of the horses realizing from $140 to $185. R. L. Craig, Vermilion, was the auctioneer.

J. J. Bell has disposed of three of his registered sheep. The purchaser, Mr. Haggard, of Ranfurly, has had experience in sheep-breeding in the States, and evidently knows a good thing when he sees it.

Mr. W. Weldon, an Ontario cattle buyer is in town, and intends to ship [illegible] cars of beef cattle from this point: some of which he has already bought.

A meeting was called on Nov. 3 to make arrangements for a skating rink in town. It is expected a rink will be erected in the near future. Another meeting, however, will be held this week when something definite will be arranged.

Two eager sportsmen left for the north on Nov. 1 in pursuit of big game. Another party of four left Nov. 5th, also anticipating a good hunt. We wish them luck and hope they may repeat their last year's success.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon and Mr. Leslie Dixon, left town several days ago for the East. On reaching Montreal, Mr. Dixon will consult an oculist in regard to his eye, which was injured in an accident he met with a short time ago. He intends to return early in the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Madill have moved into the house vacated by Mr. Dixon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fyfe have taken up residence in town for the winter.

Mr. Coomb and family have left town for the homestead.

Mr. Geo. Seahfer left Sunday for Regina, where he has secured work at his trade.

Mrs. H. Gilchrist returned Sunday after a prolonged stay down East.

BONDS SELL AT RECORD PRICE

Alberta & Great Waterways Railway Bonds Sold at 110 For Issue of $7,500,000

The first announcement which has been received of the figure at which the bonds of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railways have been placed on the money market has come to hand.

A dispatch from London, Eng., says that J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. will shortly issue $7,400,000.

This brief dispatch contains a wealth of information. It makes public the record price obtained by the Alberta & Great Waterways railway promoters for their bonds for the Edmonton Fort McMurray line, under guarantee by the Alberta government. It also shows the total amount of money ready to be used in the construction of the road, and further shows J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., one of the world's most prominent banking firms, to be behind the railway to the north.

It was also learned that M. J. McLeod, deputy provincial treasurer, and Sidney B. Woods, deputy attorney general have been to New York, and are now returning [illegible] having had the $7,400,000 [illegible] the underwriter of the bonds [illegible] the Royal Bank of Canada [illegible] construction of the railway proceeds, under the government's guarantee, the money required is withdrawn from the bank.

Listen for the wedding bells! We expect to be scarce of bachelors before the coming year.

Mr. A. Ford has just moved into his new residence, accompanied by his mother and two sisters, who have lately arrived from England.

Mr. Robert Somerset and Mr. George Schofield have their new houses nearly completed.

Mr. Jim Sulner purchased a fine horse from the Somerset Bros., last week.

The box social, held in the Allandale school last Friday night, was well attended and everybody reports a good time.

Mr. Alex. Burns and sister, Lizzie, leave Tuesday to spend a few weeks with their sister, at Lamont and Ranfurly.

Mr. Thomas Armstrong lost a valuable horse a few days ago.

Mr. N. Darling lost a valuable brood mare.

Mr. Coulthurst is back to his old mission again. We welcome him to our midst.

Mr. Albert Burns intends leaving for Washington in a few weeks' time. He will be missed by his host of friends around here.

Mr. W. Kielty left last week on a hunting expedition, we are all waiting and watching on his return for a taste of moose.

Miss Towle, of Coyote Valley, was the guest of Miss Allen, last week end.

Chapter 20

VEL the sculptor-in-wood had never seen him so excited, so, in fact, unnatural before. He was a man of moods or whim, and his manner was often more than a little queer. "Where are you going to do?" he called.

"The work that better." It will be at my proper measure—as a prowler, a cat-burglar, a murderer, or some such—"

"Stop," he protested in a panic. "You shall not. I will not have you taken for what you are not. I have, after the, wasted not more. No one must see you into this room. Not that—I love"

He checks his breath hard. "Thank of you," he repeated hoarsely, "to there even an hour when I do not think of you. It is there a day that I would not die to serve you? Tut in my very sheet—"

He paused, gazing at her where she stood in the half light of the fading sun figure. She was curiously happy. The desirous and passionate love, the guilt, however—the guilt of the hidden, and the hereditary taint—seemed vanishing through her was for him a shrinking and even pitiful thing.

She was silent. "Forgive me," he said, "I—I am a fool. I am not—I am—myself. You can I best go?"

He opened the door and the wide door window and wretchlike. He followed—still. As she parted the curtain a second of daylight fell across the telegram envelope, the dark bodice and crimson jewel. In a moment she drew it to her, with a hushed word, pointing where the sunlight darting through the stained-glass window.

"It is a wretched, sad," she said. "Did will be gone presently."

Then very low it happened, the pent remnant of a dreams rushing to storage. "It is all I ever may have. I have I was reckless and careless then, I had dimmed the sweet fruit of that love in quivering ache. I have tried to hide it from myself—from you, but it is useless. I cannot accept you it."

On the lawn just outside the window two voices were heard through the increasing rain. They ceased for only a moment be softly mimicked the window.

"Goodby," he said.

She stretched out her hand. He touched it, then drew the window wide. As he stepped through she drew on to the springy turf the lightning flashed again, a pale quiver, and it seemed a moist before her face. She drew back, and the next instant, through the thunder, the electric bell on the wall rang sharply. She looked on her dressing gown, thrust her feet into slippers and opened the door to her room.

The noise that had startled Jordan Hatfield brought the physician and the watchman, a be stood at the corner of the building, having finished their tour of inspection. It was the latter who had heard the report, and who had aroused the doctor, believing that he had seen a man in the park. The other had pooh-poohed this, but gave by the lightning that the figure emerge from the French window and disappear in the darkness.

They ran back, the physician ahead. The window was not locked, and they stepped through it into an empty room.

"Is he sure?" said the doctor dispassionately. "He was here all the time, heard no shooting—he hasn't a revolver. What about the do?" Asked abruptly, the result mostly of nervous tension. Inner, even like reaction—he was all alone. "I thought I heard a shot, and I heard, would be robbers. But could not get him a word out of the man."

A remark of some by a word past her, and the physician's voice ceased. They stood at the door and listened the heard steps beyond the curve of the left, for Hatfield approached the breathing. Had nerves chilled. He hastened down the main avenue of stones. They came to other, and only once a gruff voice, Hatfield's, spoke, and responded not. Though how stumbled over a log, and he heard the groan-sounds. Then there was a pause, and the thought shot through the doctor's mind that Hatfield had fainted.

For a moment a silent agony—was her heart that he had come down on—there followed a hurried consultation, and then Hatfield stood up and walked on alone.

"Dead," he said, with a shiver, "a bullet in the heart. Must have been instant. Not a struggle. Not a sound. Not a sign of any one. Not a clue. Not a thing. Not a thing."

He paused, and then added, "Not a thing, except this."

He held out a cigarette case, a silver affair that the wind had blown from the body. It was open, and showed a number of cigarettes. The doctor took it, and, striking a match, examined it closely.

"Initials," he said, "and a crest. Not a common one, either. Some one will be able to identify it. Let's get back to the house."

They turned abruptly to the door, but she caught his arm. "What are they going to do?" Tom said to me?"

"The work that better." It will be at my proper measure—as a prowler, a cat-burglar, a murderer, or some such—"

"Stop," he protested in a panic. "You shall not. I will not have you taken for what you are not. I have, after the, wasted not more. No one must see you into this room. Not that—I love"

He checks his breath hard. "Thank of you," he repeated hoarsely, "to there even an hour when I do not think of you.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF INDIGESTION

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Made a Permanent Cure.

There are many medicines that will relieve indigestion for a time—there are few that will make a permanent cure. But there is one medicine that is a sure cure, that medicine is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] [illegible] Pink Pills [illegible] them for some time [illegible] disappeared and I am now able [illegible] without the least [illegible] as a permanent [illegible] Pink Pills for Pale [illegible]

Submarine Tunnels.

In 1802 Napoleon seriously considered the proposal of a French engineer to effect submarine communication with England. The proposal was that midway between Calais and Dover an artificial island should be formed, on which should be built an international town.

This was to be connected with the main land on either side by two long channels. Somehow, like other schemes of the "Little Corsican" as regards this country, the matter never progressed beyond the proposal stage.

But it is probable that this very proposal gave birth to the many schemes that have since been under consideration for connecting England with the Continent.

The latest [illegible] engineers upon this proposal is that the scheme presents no terrible difficulties as regards construction. For a long time the [illegible] obstacles in the way have been [illegible] and the question [illegible]

TRIUMPH OF THE BIBLE.

Nearly 6,000,000 Copies Were Issued Last Year.

In a few years the Bible, "the secret of England's greatness," as the late Queen Victoria once observed, will be printed in every language and dialect known throughout the world. Last year, according to the 105th report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, the languages in which either complete Bibles or parts of it were issued reached a total of 418. During the year six fresh translations were added to the society's glittering list, and were reduced to written form, so as to become vehicles of the Gospel. Two of them belong to Asia—the borders of Spiti and Thibet, two to Africa—southern Nigeria and the eastern [illegible] of Rhodesia, and two to Oceania. "The waste of force in the mission [illegible] cries aloud for unity," said the bishops at the Lambeth Conference. This principle of union has found fresh opportunity for practice in the society's work in many directions abroad, and steps have also been [illegible] to produce a unified standard [illegible] Bible. Again, the society have at least some embossed portion of Scripture now available for the blind in 31 different languages. Last year nearly 6,000,000 Bibles or portions [illegible] were issued.

The reports from distant parts of the world as to the results of this [illegible] knowledge of the Scriptures are full of interest. Writing [illegible] Korea, Mr. J. R. Mott predicts [illegible] this will be the first nation in modern times to be Christianized if the Church will take advantage of the opportunity. The Protestant [illegible] already number 85,000 communicants and catechumens, which suggests a Christian community of at least 250,000. A missionary writes that the greatest factor in the work [illegible] translation and study of the [illegible] striking stories are [illegible] the colporteurs whose adventures [illegible] days are often [illegible] Last year some of [illegible] as spies in Nicaragua [illegible] in Burma, bitterly [illegible] Social Democrats in Germany [illegible] of the villages by [illegible] who burnt their [illegible] the Philippines, and [illegible] in Baluchistan. [illegible] quake at Messina a colporteur [illegible] his family, narrowly escaped [illegible]

In the Transvaal, in one of the [illegible] the Scriptures were sold in 14 different languages during a single afternoon. As to the finances of the society, the total receipts of the year amounted to £238,000, and the expenditure to £237,041, leaving a small balance of £950.

Reader and Writers.

The late George Meredith took up the work of literary adviser to the publishing firm of Chapman and Hall in 1860 at the age of thirty-two, in succession to John Forster, the biographer of Dickens. His decisions upon manuscripts submitted to him appear to have been generally quite sound from a literary point of view, though the standard he set up was [illegible] and he hardly took account enough of popular taste. For instance, in 1861, "East Lynne" was submitted to him and he gave judgment as follows: "Opinion emphatically against it."

William Black's earliest efforts received recognition from him: "The author's mind [illegible] strong sense and poetic perceptions; he has a remarkably clear style, and a power of giving soft pathetic touches which I commend," and after pointing out [illegible] Meredith suggests that Black [illegible] to be encouraged. The [illegible] year he read MS. poems by [illegible] [illegible] "Ouida" and Mrs. Lynn Linton in the next year, the summary comment is "Decline." Thomas Hardy's first novel, "The Poor Man and the Lady," was submitted in 1868, but not accepted. Of the interview he had with Meredith at the time, Mr. Hardy says that he received [illegible] that Meredith did [illegible]

More remarkable still is the dismissal of Samuel Butler's "Erewhon" [illegible] while a more [illegible] disposed of "Immaturity" [illegible] G. Bernard Shaw. Olive [illegible] "Story of an African [illegible]" [illegible] Meredith [illegible] but the MS. was [illegible] returned to the author [illegible] "The Heavenly Twins" [illegible]

A BOON TO MOTHERS.

When Children Are Injured!

Children are always sustaining cuts, bruises, burns, etc., and not infrequently contract ringworm, scalp diseases and similar skin troubles at school. Mothers will find Zam-Buk without equal for all these accidents and diseases.

Mrs. Thomas Allen, 156 Water St., St. Mary's (Ont.), says:—"My daughter Mildred, 4 years old, was severely burned by falling on a hot flat iron. She was burned on the heel, instep and on the thigh very badly. I at once applied some Zam-Buk, which eased the pain, and in the course of a few days the wounds were [illegible] healed."

Mrs. George Aldridge, 12 Louise St., Stratford, says:—"While playing barefoot [illegible] the yard my son Bertram, 6 years old, stepped on a broken glass bottle which cut a very deep [illegible] into his leg [illegible] The cut was so deep that I went for a doctor and had the foot properly [illegible] the doctor leaving a lotion to be applied. [illegible] this treatment, however, the wound seemed to get no better but on the contrary inflammation set in. [illegible] hardly [illegible] Zam-Buk. We obtained a supply and after a few applications the [illegible] seemed to get better and the pain was very much relieved. In a few days, under the Zam-Buk treatment, the wound assumed a better appearance, and from that time healing was very rapid. Inflammation and soreness were finally completely banished, and in ten days from the first application of Zam-Buk, we took the bandage from the foot. I believe that but for Zam-Buk the child would have had a very bad time, and may have had to sacrifice the foot."

Not only for cuts, burns, bruises, etc., is Zam-Buk effective but also for skin diseases such as eczema, ringworm, ulcers, etc. It also cures poisoned sores, chronic wounds, [illegible], piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold sores, frost bites, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and all [illegible] sell at 50c. a box, or post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

Simple and Sure.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is so simple in application that a child can understand the instructions. Used as a liniment the only direction is to rub, and when used as a dressing to apply. The directions are so plain and unmistakable that they are readily understood by young or old.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

[illegible] local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. [illegible] is caused by an inflamed condition of the [illegible] lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this [illegible] is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

VALUE OF THE HEADLINE

MUST BE CONCISE AND RIGHT TO THE POINT.

Headline Bears a Most Important Relationship to the Advertisement—Poor Opening Lines Very Often Principal Cause of Failure of Ad. to Get Business.

Writing of the value of the headline in the retail advertisement, A. E. Edgar, in the Advertisers' Magazine, says:—

The newspaper spends a great deal of money in gathering news matter. This is served up under suitable headlines. These headlines furnish the gist of the news. Three or four words in the heading will be made to tell the same story as a whole column of text, or serve to make the reader curious enough to read the whole.

A great many men and women do not sit down and read the newspaper from beginning to ending as was formerly the case. Instead, they read the headlines for the purpose of getting at the news. If they run across a headline that tells them there is an item below it whose details will be interesting they read it. In this way they read several papers in less time than they used to spend over one.

Supposing then there was a local murder reported in the newspaper. It would appear on the first page, first column, with a heading that would run clear across the page. If that heading should be anything but "Murder" most of the readers would consider themselves cheated.

Supposing the editor, or headline writer should say to himself: "Now I want to call the attention of the people to this item so I'll use the headline 'Stop! Look! Listen!'" Do you suppose that would get as many readers for that item as the logical headline? It is not likely that many of the paper's readers will find out about the murder.

Now the advertisement is merely a news item. It may be that it is not so startling as a murder "story," but it may be just as interesting to a great many people. Therefore the headline of the advertisement should tell practically the story of the advertisement. It should tell as much of the message of the merchant as possible.

A great many advertisers among the smaller retail stores write their advertisements backward. They write the headline first and then construct an advertisement around it. The proper method of creating an advertisement is to first select the article to be advertised. Then write its description and name the price and lastly place a headline above it that will tell the largest number of readers what the advertisement is about. If the reader is interested in that article the advertisement will be read from start to finish.

"But," says some advertiser, "I want people who are not interested in that article to read my advertisement. I want to create demand. I want to sell my goods to people who did not know they wanted them." Very well. Follow this advice.

Take an article of merit; an article that many persons will be interested in, an article that many persons would find it advantageous to possess; write an advertisement that will bring out its strong points, an advertisement that will suggest the numerous ways in which the article can be used and a few other details and under a headline that suggest the subject matter of the advertisement and you will be doing all you can to create demand.

The amount of demand or the number of inquiries from the advertisement then depends largely upon the value of the newspaper as an advertising medium.

The headline should be an eye-attracter as well as an index of the contents of the advertisement. The eye-attracting power cannot be given it by fancy type and scroll effect. In fact sometimes the effect striven for is entirely lost on account of all [illegible]

Have the headline full of meaning, have it set in good readable type, but not of disproportionate size to the advertisement and it will serve its purpose not only as an attraction to the advertisement but as an index to its contents.

Why Horseshoes Are Lucky.

Why is an old horseshoe supposed to bring luck to the owner if hung in the hall or behind the door? Horseshoes were at one time nailed up as a protection against witches. Many houses in the West End of London had one of these emblems of superstition on the threshold, and in Monmouth street there were seventeen in 1813 and seven so late as 1855.

Lord Nelson had a horseshoe nailed to the mast of his ship Victory, and our forefathers loved to nail one on their house door.

There is a legend that the devil one day asked St. Dunstan, who was noted for his skill in shoeing horses, to shoe his "single hoof." Knowing who his customer was, Dunstan tied him tightly to the wall and proceeded with his job, but purposely put the devil into so much pain that he roared for mercy. And it was not until he had promised that he would never again enter a place where he saw a horseshoe displayed that Dunstan would release his captive.

Breaking the Sabbath Gently.

Of Sabbath-breaking north of the Tweed, there is the story of the Scot and his wheelbarrow, which has been fathered upon Sir Archibald Geikie. Donald was hammering away at the bottom of his barrow when his wife came to the door.

"Mon," she said, "ye're making much clatter. What will the neebors say?"

"Never mind the neebors," said the busy one. "I maun get ma barra mendit."

"Oh, but Donal', it's vera wrang to wurk on Sawbath!" expostulated the good wife. "Ye ought to use screws."

TOMMY'S "PERKS."

The Way Soldiers Add to Their Incomes.

"A bob a day and all found," is supposed to sum up the soldier's resources. Yet some of the most flourishing businesses in garrison towns are owned by ex-Tommies.

Each regiment employs nearly one hundred men as cooks, policemen, clerks, librarians, waiters in canteens, officers' and sergeants' messes, farriers, grooms, and so on, and such men receive an addition to their pay of from 3d. to 1s. 6d. a day, to say nothing of tips and sundry "pickings." Then there are the bandsmen, who, besides receiving from 5s. to 10s. for each outside engagement, often obtain private work in theatres, concert orchestras, etc.; and a Guards' band earns, on an average, $1,000 a week. Regimental tailors and carpenters have usually more private work than they have time to perform; the good marksmen may make as much as $15 or $20 at the regimental and district rifle meetings; and the amateur teacher, in isolated detachments, may have from ten to twenty pupils to attend to in his spare evenings, each paying him, perhaps, sixpence per week.

Although the regulations forbid soldiers to act as agents for local tradesmen or large firms, many non-commissioned officers reap substantial commission in this way. Again, when a move is contemplated, orderly-room clerks are enabled to send full particulars to contractors and tradesmen in the new garrison town, and these are early on the spot with samples to secure the regimental trade. For kindly offices in this direction one firm supplied an infantry quarter-master with free poultry and meat for a whole year, a brewery firm is said to have paid $250 to an orderly-room sergeant for useful information.

At stations like Gibraltar and Malta, quartermasters are able to choose all hawkers for supplying fruit, vegetables, etc., and wax fat on the commissions secretly given for their favors.

Two flourishing photographers in Yorkshire started in a small way in the army by taking snapshots of individuals on the "veldt," one reaping nearly $800, and there are, at least, three successful members of the variety profession—a singer, a dancer, and an acrobat and sword-manipulator who developed their skill in the barrack-room for the nightly fee of one shilling. Conjuring, or teaching animals to do odd tricks, or working the regimental badges and colors in beads or wool, are other methods of employing spare evenings in out-of-the-way, monotonous garrison stations, and of adding to the income.

Residence in isolated frontier posts abroad affords more scope for profitable hobbies. The soldier often brings home to England specimens of the bird and butterfly world which command good prices. An infantry quartermaster-sergeant acquired a collection of rare beetles in India which were valued by naturalists at from $250 to $500, though he refused to sell; a private realized $300 from the sale of rare stamps picked up in odd corners of the world, and an army schoolmaster in Northern India makes on an average from $10 to $15 per week by employing his camera on behalf of the [illegible] periodicals.

[illegible] of soldiers have been made that are said to be superior in detail and technique to anything of the kind in Germany, and have won the approval of royalty. The artistic skill of these Tommies secured them much extra cash for [illegible] whilst serving, and posts on the London press [illegible] "Tommies" are also [illegible] for skilled decorative work, particularly at Christmas time, and when [illegible] sergeants and others' balls and dances [illegible] regimental [illegible] and [illegible] taken [illegible] for work as theatre supers and for [illegible] sweepstakes [illegible] etc., on board transports, two brothers in [illegible] this way $[illegible] between them on the voyage from this country to South Africa.

Where Tourists Should Go.

The tourist has not appeared in Finland in any great numbers, and consequently the commercial spirit which his advent always marks has been absent. As an example of this, Mme. Aino Malmberg, a Finnish lady, tells an amusing story.

Two English friends had been staying with her at her house in Helsingfors, and on leaving gave the maid a tip.

The girl was very much astonished and did not know what it meant. Seeing Mme. Malmberg's son coming downstairs, she ran to him and said, "They gave me money. Did they give you any?"

Hearing they had not done so she was very much [illegible] "I cannot understand why they gave it to me and not to you, when they know you much better than me," was her perplexed comment on the incident.

A Friend to the Weak.

Lady Henry Somerset, eldest daughter of the last Earl Somers, and wife of a son of the ducal house of Beaufort, has devoted her life largely to practical temperance work, mainly amongst her own sex. Her ladyship has lately given up the platform and [illegible] of her philanthropic work, but [illegible] to carry on her Home at Duxhurst, in Surrey, where [illegible] The industrial colony [illegible] founded by Lady Henry is the pioneer institution of its kind. Women of all classes suffering from alcoholic [illegible] find there a pleasant country retreat [illegible] where amongst work rooms [illegible], poultry yards and dairies they can forget the evil influences which have dragged them down.

Provincial Cities Dull.

When a man gets rich in Liverpool he goes to London to live. The same applies to the [illegible] of Manchester. Both are good points in which to accumulate riches, London the place in which to dissipate the money. Consequently the society of these nearby cities is quiescent and devoid of brilliancy, stupid for young people especially.

Mr. Reed, Senator Wolcott and Joseph H. Choate, were having a little dinner at the Waldorf. When wine was offered Mr. Choate turned his glass down. "Gentlemen," he said proudly, "I have arrived at the age of fifty-five, and never yet have I tasted wine or tobacco, nor played any game of chance for money."

Wolcott heaved a very audible sigh: "My, how I wish I could say that!"

"Why don't you?" drawled Reed; "Choate did!"—Success Magazine.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Soap baby before tubbing

Washing legs and feet

Shaping head by gentle pressure

Tender carefully after drying

MATERNITY might have been an instinct in some of the past ages, but today, while mother love has revived in all its perfection, mother knowledge is not to be taken for granted. Very few women know exactly how to bath a baby, and, although they make apt pupils, experience will not always teach the many intricate little details of baby's morning toilet.

Baby should have a bath every morning, not as a matter of cleanliness entirely, but more as a matter of hygiene; for baby is like a flower; he cannot live without water, and during his submersion his little pores take the necessary moisture up into his thirsty little system. For this reason, then, the morning bath is necessary, and mother will find it most convenient to bathe him between the second and third morning feedings; for, directly after the bath, he needs nourishment and rest.

Before baby is taken into the bathing room mother must see that the room is warm enough—[illegible] degrees Fahrenheit is right, that the water is ready, and that all the clean clothes, soap and other necessaries are at hand, for the bath must not be interrupted by a search for mislaid articles.

Everything within reach, the process of undressing may be started. It is best to take off all baby's clothes at once, for then he will not be subjected to the handling that is necessary when each separate garment is removed. This undressing should be done upon mother's lap, although an older child may sit upon the chair. After the clothes are removed, baby is laid upon mother's lap to be soaped. Mother usually does this with suds on her hand, or else by rubbing the soap upon the rose-leaf skin.

A very small baby will not usually cry if one hand is gently pressed upon the abdomen during the soaping process. The tiny morsel is accustomed to the confining band and the lack of pressure is uncomfortable. Of course, when baby is laid upon his face the controlling hand is not needed.

After the soaping process, baby should be placed, feet first, in the tub of water, which should be about [illegible] degrees Fahrenheit. Lacking a thermometer, mother may be sure the water is not too hot if she holds her elbow in it with comfort. She cannot judge by her hands.

After baby is in the water, support his back and head always with one hand, and [illegible] then take him [illegible] him face down [illegible] Cover him [illegible] and dry him [illegible] when he is [illegible] flannel band. The [illegible] all the joints with [illegible]

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams most cordially invites her friends to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

THE DEBUTANTE, HER DUTIES AND POSITION

THERE is no English word into which one may translate debutante, nor is there a single word in any language which would express her peculiar position in regard to society and the world at large. The usual idea of a debutante seems to be gleaned from newspapers and novels where she is a feted creature, never sleeping and never eating, but continually dressing in magnificent clothes and driving to wonderful entertainments given in palaces to do her honor. This is the gilded debutante who shines between book covers if not in real life. The proverbial debutante has been trained to rule in that small part of the world known as society, but any girl may be a debutante whether she has been trained for the purpose or not.

The word means one who bows; its meaning is a girl who has been graduated from the nursery to the drawing room where she may bow on an equality with the friends and acquaintances of her parents.

Every girl about the age of 18 attains to full-fledged [illegible] therefore [illegible] dinner with her [illegible] invite her to the [illegible] probably a few [illegible] marry. By these [illegible] that she is no [illegible] woman and that [illegible] the responsibility [illegible] girls reach this [illegible] at the age of [illegible] reach [illegible]

A debutante [illegible] who has just [illegible] whether she [illegible] such entertainments [illegible] tained at [illegible] position by [illegible] income she is a [illegible] thereafter more [illegible] shelter of home [illegible] world.

While the [illegible] debutante merely [illegible] marriage market [illegible] something more [illegible] woman who [illegible] things as they [illegible] [illegible] has gained [illegible] many mothers [illegible] deserve [illegible] pleasure [illegible] will arrive [illegible]

He stumbled to a chair and sat down, his frame rigid. He thought of the robbed sluice in the gulch below, of his own unhappy adventure of the night. How could he tell what he had done—what he might do? Minutes went by as he sat motionless, his mind catching strange kaleidoscopic pictures that fled past him into the void. At length he rose and went to the window. Far down the hillside a faint line through the mist opened the gulch bottom. A groan burst from his lips.

"That is the [illegible] flume," he [illegible] has been stolen [illegible] again and again [illegible] nights ago. How did I know [illegible] the thief? Was that [illegible] dust had meant [illegible]

A shiver [illegible] "How do I know," he thought, "I can see myself—the evil side of me—when the devil had flown walking and active. I see myself creeping down there stealing from shadow to shadow to reach the gold from the riffles when the moon is under a cloud. I see men sitting from dark to daylight with loaded rifles across their knees watching. I see a flash of fire. I hear a report. I see myself there by the sluice boxes dead, shot down in the act of a thief, making good the name men know me by!"

The figure of Jessica came before him, standing in her soft white gown, her hand against her cheek and the jasmine odors about her. The dream he had dreamed could not be—never, never, never! All that was left was surrender, ignominious flight to a more barren of suggestion.

At that instant a shining point caught his eye. It came from the pan of gravel on the doorstep, on which the rain had been beating. He thrust the draft into his pocket and seized a double handful of the gravel. He plunged it into a pail of water and held it to the light. It sparkled with coarse, yellow flakes of gold. He dropped the handful with a sharp exclamation, threw on his coat and rushed from the cabin.

All day, alone on the fog soaked hillside, Harry toiled in the trench without food or rest.

* * * * * * *

It was a fair, sweet evening, and the room where Jessica sat beside David Stires' bed, reading aloud to him, was flooded with the falling sunlight. Since the old man's seizure in the night he had been much worse, and she had scarcely left his room. Today, however, he had sat propped by pillows, able to read and chat, and the deep personal anxiety that had numbed her had yielded.

A knock came at the door. It was a nurse with letters for him from the mail, and while he opened them Jessica laid aside the book and went slowly down the hall to the sun parlor, where the doctor stood with the group gathered after the early supper, chatting of the newest "strike" on the [illegible]

"We'll be famous if we keep on," he was saying as she looked out of the wide windows across the haze where the sunlight drifted down in dust of gold. "I've a mind to stake out a claim myself."

"We pay you better," said one of the occupants grimly. "Anyway, the whole of Smoky mountain was staked in the excitement a year ago. There's no doubt about this find, I suppose?"

"It's on exhibition at the bank," the doctor replied, "more than $5,000 [illegible] in a crevice in the glacial age as neat as a Christmas stocking."

The talk went on about her.

"Where is the lucky claim?" some one asked.

"Just below this ridge," the doctor replied. "It is called the 'Little Pay [illegible]'"

The name caught her ear. The Little Paymaster? That was the name on the tree on Hugh's claim! At that instant she thought she heard David Stires calling. She turned and ran quickly up the long hall to his open door.

The sight of his face at first startled her, for it was held captive of emotion, but it was an emotion of joy, not of pain. A letter fluttered in his grasp. He thrust it into her hands.

"Jessica," he exclaimed, "Hugh has paid it! He has sent the $5,000 [illegible] and [illegible] for the [illegible] my account!"

"Hugh has paid it!"

For a moment she stood transfixed. The talk she had [illegible] [illegible] into significance and her [illegible] ran back to [illegible] [illegible] left the [illegible] at the cab[in]. She caught the old man's head and knelt by his chair, laughing and crying at once. During these last few days the impulse to tell all that she had concealed had been almost irresistible. Now the barrier had fallen. The secret she had repressed so long came forth in a rush of sentences that left him mute and amazed.

"I should have told you before," she ended, "but I didn't know—I wasn't sure"— She broke down for very joy.

He looked at her with eyes unnaturally bright. "Tell me everything, Jessica!" he said. "Everything, from the beginning!"

"He was young and irresponsible, Jessica," said the old man. "Money always came so easily. He didn't realize what he was doing when he signed that draft. He has earned a lesson out in the world. It won't hurt his career in the end, for no one but you and I and one other knows it. Thank God! If his memory comes back"—

"Oh, it will!" she breathed. "It must! That day on the Knob he only needed the clew! When I tell him who I am he will know me. He will remember it all. I am sure—sure! Will you let me bring him to you?" she added softly.

"Yes," he said, pressing her hand. "Tomorrow. I shall be stronger then."

She rose and lighted the lamp, shading it from his eyes.

"Do you remember the will, Jessica," he asked her presently—"the will I drew the day he came back? You never knew, but I signed it the night of your wedding. Harry Sanderson was right, my dear, wasn't he?

"I wish now I hadn't signed it, Jessica," he added. "I must set it right! I must set it right!" He watched her with a smile on his face. "I will rest now," he said. And she adjusted the pillows and turned the lamp low.

Crossing the room, she stepped through the long window on to the porch and stood leaning on the railing. The words of the Biblical narrative flashed through her mind: "And he arose and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off his father saw him and had compassion and ran and fell on his neck and kissed him." So Hugh's father would meet him now!

Harry had labored, spurred by a fierce haste to make restitution. Till the last ounce of the rich "pocket" had been washed and the whole taken to the bank in the town no one had known of the find. It had repaid the forgery and left him a handful of dollars over—enough to take him far away from the only thing that made life worth the effort.

A gradual feeling of apprehension had come to Jessica—an impression of blankness and chill that affected her strangely. She stood still, frightened at the sudden sense of utter soundlessness.

She caught up the lamp and, turning the wick, approached the bed. She put out her hand and touched the wasted one on the coverlet. Then a sobbing cry came from her lips.

David Stires was gone. A crowning joy had goldened his bitterness at the last moment, and he had gone away with his son's face in his heart and the smile of welcome on his lips.

Chapter 22

DARK was falling keen and cool, for frost was in the air, touching the fall foliage on the hills to crimson and amber and etching delicate hoar tracery on the spidery framework of the long black railroad bridge that hung above "the hole." The warning light from a signal post threw a crimson splash on the ground. Its green pane cast a pallor on a bearded face turned out over the gloomy water.

"It was here," he said aloud. He stood a moment, his hands clinched. "The new life began here. Here, then, is where the old life ended." From where he stood he could see blossoming the yellow lights of the little city, five miles away. He set his shoulders, whistled to the small dog that nosed near by and set off at a quick pace down the road.

Once in the streets he turned up his coat collar and settled the brim of his felt hat more closely over his eyes. He crossed an open square and presently came to the gate of a Gothic chapel set well back from the street. Its great rose window was alight, for on this evening was to be held a memorial service for the old man whose money had built the pile, who had died a fortnight before in a distant sanitarium.

He turned at the sound of wheels, and the blur absorbed itself apart to reveal a kindly face that looked at him for an instant framed in the window of a passing carriage. Inside the carriage Bishop Ludlow settled back, with a sigh. "Only a face on the pavement," he said to his wife, "but it reminded me somehow of Harry Sanderson."

"How strange it is," she said—the bishop had no secrets from his wife—"never a word or a sign, and everything in his study just as he left it. What can you do, John? It is four months ago now, and the parish needs a rector."

He did not reply for a moment. The question touched the trouble that was ever present in his mind.

"I know," he said at length. "I may have failed in my whole duty, but I haven't known how to tell David Stires, especially since we heard of his illness. I had written to him—the whole story. The ink was not dry on the paper when the letter came from Jessica telling us of his death."

Behind them as they talked the man on the pavement was walking on feverishly, the dog following with a reluctant whine.

At last he came to a wide, dark lawn set thick with copses clustering [illegible] He [illegible] a moment, then walked slowly up the green, weed grown garden path toward its porch. In the half light the massive silver door plate stood out clearly. He had known instinctively that that house had been a part of his life, and yet a tremor caught him as he read the name—Stires. The intuition that had bent his steps from the street, the old stirring of dead memory had brought him to his past at last. This house had been his home!

He started. A man in his shirt sleeves was standing by a half open side door regarding him narrowly.

"Thinking of buying?" The query was good humoredly satiric. "Or maybe just looking the old ranch over with a view to a shakedown?"

The trespasser smiled grimly. It was not the first time he had seen that weather beaten face. "You have given up surgery as a profession, I see," he said.

The other came nearer, looked at him in a puzzled way, then laughed.

"If it isn't the case we picked up on the railroad track," he said. "Dog and all! I thought you were far down the coast, where it's warmer. Nothing much doing with you, eh?"

"Nothing much," answered the man he addressed. Others might recognize him as the black sheep, but this nondescript watchman whom chance had set here could not. He knew him only as the dingy vagabond whose broken head he had bandaged in the box car.

"I'm in better luck," went on the man in shirt sleeves. "I struck this about two months ago as gardener first, and now I'm a kind of a sort of a watchman. They gave me a bunk in the summer house there"—he jerked his thumb backward over his shoulder—"but I know a game worth two of that for these cold nights. I'll show you. I can put you up for the night," he added, "if you like."

The wayfarer shook his head. "I must get away tonight, but I'm much obliged."

"Haven't done anything, have you?" asked his one time companion curiously. "You didn't seem that sort."

The bearded face turned away. "I'm not 'wanted' by the police, no, but I'm on the move, and the sooner I take the trail the better. I don't mind night travel."

"You'd be better for a rest," said the watchman, "but you're the doctor. Come in, and we'll have a nip of something warm anyhow."

His guest followed him into a spacious hall, scarce conscious of what he did. A double door to the left was shut, but he nevertheless knew perfectly that the room it hid had a tall French window letting on to a garden where camellias had once dropped like blood. The open door to the right led to the library.

There the yellow light touched the dark wainscoting, the marble mantelpiece, dim paintings on the wall and a great brass bound Korean desk in a corner. What black thing had once happened in that room? What face had once looked at him from that wheel chair? It was an old face gray and lined and passionate, his father doubtless. He told himself this calmly, with an odd sense of apartness.

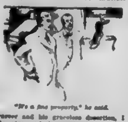
The other's glance followed his pridefully. "It's a fine property," he said. "The owner's an invalid, I hear, with one leg in the grave. He's in some sanitarium and can't get much good of it. Nice pictures, them," he added, sweeping a candle round. "That's a good looker over there. Must be the old man's daughter, I reckon. Well, I'll go and get you a finger or two to keep the frost out of your lungs. It'll be cold tonight. Make yourself at home." The door closed behind him.

The man he left was trembling violently. He had scarcely repressed a cry. The portrait that hung above the mantelpiece was Jessica's, in a house dress of soft Romney blue and a single white rose caught in her hair. "The old man's daughter!" The words seemed to echo and re-echo about the walls, voicing a new agony without a name. Then Jessica was his sister?

As he stared dry eyed at the picture in the candle light the misery slowly passed. He must know. Who she was, what she was to him, he must learn beyond peradventure. He cast a swift glance around him. Orderly rows of books stared from the shelves; the mahogany table held only a pile of old magazines. He strode to the desk, drew down its lid and tried the drawers. They opened readily, and he rapidly turned over their litter of papers, written in the same crabbed hand that had etched the one damning word on the draft he had found in the cabin on Smoky mountain. Most of the papers the searcher saw at a glance were of no import, and they [illegible] him no clew to what he sought. Then, mysteriously guided by the subtle memory that seemed of late to haunt him, though he was but half conscious of its guidance, his nervous fingers suddenly found and pressed a spring, a panel fell down, and he drew out a folded parchment.

Another instant and he was bending over it with the candle, his fingers tracing familiar legal phrases of a will laid there long ago. He read with the blood shrinking from his heart:

"To my son, Hugh, in return for the care and sorrow he has caused me all the days of his life, for his dissolute career and his graceless desertion, I do give and bequeath the sum of $1,000 and the memory of his misspent youth. The residue of my estate, real and personal, I do give and bequeath to my ward, Jessica Holme"—



"It's a fine property," he said.

The blood swept back to his heart in a flood. Ward, not daughter! He could still keep the one sweet thing left him. His love was justified. Tears sprang to his eyes, and he laid the parchment back and closed the desk. He hastily brushed the drops away as the watchman entered and set down two glasses and a bottle.

"There you are. That'll be worth five miles to you!" He poured noisily.

His guest drank, set down the glass and held out his hand. "Good luck!" he said.

The dog thrust a cold muzzle into his hand as he walked down the gravel path slowly, feeling the glow of the liquor gratefully, with the grudging release it brought from mental tension. He had not consciously asked himself whither now. In some subconscious corner of his brain this had been asked and answered. He was going to his father. Not to seek to change the stern decree, not to annul those bitter phrases—"his dissolute career, the memory of his misspent youth!" Only to ask his forgiveness and to make what reparation was possible, then to go out once more to the world to fight out his battle.

Some Natives Still In the Stone Age Says British Explorer.

After two years among the savages in Dutch New Guinea, Mr. Pratt, a British naturalist, and his two sons have returned to [illegible]ng, Java, with strange experiences to tell. Mr. Pratt (says The Pall Mall Gazette) is a seasoned explorer of 56 years. His travels have extended over wide territories in China, Thibet, South America and Asia Minor. He had four years in the British and Dutch sections of New Guinea, and then took a vacation in Great Britain. Two years ago he came out with his two sons and landed at Doreh, in Geelvink Bay, where missionaries have been stationed for over 50 years. Behind Doreh stretch the Arfak Mountains, with two large lakes lying at a height of 8,000 feet above the sea. There the naturalists took up their quarters, in the midst of savage Papuans, whose characteristics they soon discovered were untrustworthiness and thirst for blood.

They found the savages far below the African natives, without knowledge or understanding of the most elementary virtues—even kindliness or thankfulness. They were of good physique and lived partly by agriculture, but their habits were loathsome. It was largely due to his ability to keep his temper, even under provocation, that Mr. Pratt was able to manage them. They fancied that the traveler must have supernatural powers to control his anger, and in addition to that they were notified by the Dutch authorities that any harm to the naturalists would meet with prompt vengeance. At night the tent of the explorers was guarded by a fierce watch-dog, of which the natives were much afraid. In the day time this dog always remained with one of the party left on guard, while the others always explored in company invariably.

For food they had tinned provisions, plantains, and potatoes, but so tough were their constitutions that this scanty range of diet did not affect them. Besides, the climate around the lakes was glorious. Two thousand feet higher up the mountains it was bitterly cold at night, but the natives could stand it without any clothing at all. At night they have a process of providing themselves with fire. They carry on scarcely any trade, and live mainly on plantains and potatoes, the latter having been introduced by missionaries in 1868. Perpetual warfare is waged among the tribes, for treachery is constant, and every death leads to blood vengeance. The naturalists were often goaded to near the danger point of shooting, but restrained themselves, and so won to some extent the confidence of the savages. Head hunting is a custom of the land, and not merely are villages, but also houses at war against houses. The result is that fear and treachery stalk like twin demons through the island. Women never go out except under armed masculine guard. They do the work in the fields with a man guarding them with his native weapons.

As an example of these creatures' intelligence I would quote the following instance. One wasp that I had for some time and that was exceedingly tame used to be [illegible] constantly, and she was so [illegible] at dodging me when I tried to catch her to put her home that I resorted to the ruse of placing a piece of [illegible] stuff in front of her so that when she unsuspectingly walked on it I [illegible] stop both it and her into her [illegible]

After a time she learned this and would on no account get on to the stuff. Suppose she was walking toward the north. Directly I put the stuff in front of her she would [illegible] or and to the south and go off in that direction, but no sooner had I [illegible] the cloth than she was again [illegible] to the north. She knew that [illegible] blue stuff meant home and [illegible] would have nothing to do with [illegible] This same wasp would often creep down my neck inside my collar and then go to sleep there, and [illegible] occasions I nearly lost her [illegible] way, for I would forget [illegible] about her and on one occasion [illegible] any went out of the house before I remembered. The Same Old Fair.

The old county fair with its fun and its labors
The old county fair that's the same every year—
The prize stars and fowls and the movers and rubes
And Mandy's that giggle and strolls that stare
The pink lemonade and the shell games that went on
The old village band that squeaks in the square—
Hurrah! Rah rah, rah! It's more fun [illegible]
Heaven for a day at the old county fair!

ANTS PROTECT PLANT.

How They Defend It Against Leaf Destroying Insects.

A standing army of ants for defensive purposes is kept and provided with food by a sensitive plant of Nicaragua. In this acacia there are two large thorns at the base of each leaf inhabited by the colonies of ants, which bore into the thorns and make a home for themselves by eating out the soft inner tissue. On the leaf stalks there are honey glands, and at the tip of each leaflet there is a sausage shaped body about as large as a pin's head, consisting of albuminous food. The ants sip the nectar and eat the food bodies and, being contented with their lot, remain on the plant without doing it any injury.

When the plant is threatened by an invasion of leaf-cutting ants which would damage it the ants composing the plant's army or police force rush out and repel the intruders. Many similar arrangements exist in tropical plants.

In one of the most remarkable of these ant plants the female ant bites a hole in the stem and brings up her brood inside it. The stalk of each leaf is swollen at its base and bears food bodies, which are eaten by the ants when they emerge to find for themselves. As the old food bodies are eaten new ones are formed, thus keeping the ants, which are of a fierce disposition, in the plant's employment. Plants of the same species which do not happen to be inhabited by ants fall an easy prey to leaf-cutting kinds of ants, which are only too plentiful in the tropics. In other cases the defensive ants are provided only with shelter in cavities of the stem, and various naturalists have observed that these ants pour out in troops whenever leaf-cutting enemies attempt to attack the foliage.

The ants which thus defend these plants are small, but sting with extreme virulence, their small size making them the more formidable. The leaf-cutting ants cut off the leaves and pile them up in heaps, forming a sort of kitchen garden of leaf mold, upon which they cultivate a fungus belonging to the mushroom family. They sow the spores of the mushroom and make a pure culture of the fungus, nibbling at it to prevent the development of mushroom heads and thus promoting the growth of spawn.

Lord Halsbury's Lucky Number.

The figure "5" seems to have played a prominent part in the life of the Earl of Halsbury, whose eighty-fourth birthday fell on the fifth. Born in 1825, the earl commenced his career at the Bar in 1850, was made a Q.C. in 1865, Solicitor-General in 1875, and Lord Chancellor in 1885. Known as "the judge-maker," his lordships never smokes, detests tobacco, was an expert fencer, held the Lord Chancellorship for the longest period, has been mistaken for a celebrated "bruiser," and was instrumental in inaugurating the special service at Westminster Abbey for lawyers.

When he first went to the House of Commons to take his seat for Launceston, in 1877, he found himself writless. He searched high and low, and turned out a remarkable collection of articles, ranging from collar-studs and a ten-bladed knife to bootlaces. Ultimately, the missing writ was discovered in a member's hat.

Old Time Reporting.

"No," said the old tramp printer, "reportin' hain't what it used to be. The rugged strength, the grandeur and ginger is all gone."

He took out his worn wallet.

"Listen," he said, "to this here description of T. DeWitt Talmage what Comp Stick of the Tin Can Scimitar writ in '71."

In a voice vibrant with admiration the veteran read:

"Sweat trickled from the back jungle of his disordered hair along the ravines and furrows of his haggard face. He advanced and retreated, rising upon his toes and coming down on his heels with a dislocating jerk that made the windows rattle, pausing occasionally to inhale through his dilating nostrils tempestuously and then emitting a shrieking epigram or apostrophe that thrilled the blood like a wild cry at midnight in a solitary place."

Pat Was a Sideboard.

An Irishman went to a foundry in Lancashire after work. When he arrived he found another man there on the same errand. The foreman came, and Pat, being unaccustomed to asking for work, stood back, with the intention of hearing how the other fellow went about it.

After the man had asked the foreman said, "What trade are you?"

"I'm a dresser," replied the man.

"Come to-morrow," said the foreman. "I'll start you."

Turning to the Irishman, the foreman asked him what he was.

A Rule of Thumb.

The thumb is a guide to a knowledge of the mental condition of the owner. He who is in full possession of all his faculties makes use of the thumb, but whenever there is a tendency to insanity this generally useful and active member falls out of work. A physician in charge of a lunatic asylum states positively that if you see a person whose thumb remains inactive, standing at right angles and taking no part in the act of writing, salutation or any other manual exercise—you may be sure that he has a diseased mind. He may talk intelligently and appear sane in every respect, but undoubtedly a tinge of madness is lurking within his brain.

An Early Riser.

"Pat," said a manager to one of his workmen, "you must be an early riser. I always find you at work the first thing in the morning."

"Indade and Oi am, sor. It's a family trait [illegible]"

"Then your father was an early riser too?"

"Me father, is it? He roises that early that if he went to bed a little later he'd meet himself gettin' up in the mornin'."

QUAINT TOWN FEASTS

ENGLISH MUNICIPALITIES WITH [illegible]

Uckfield Has a Pea Supper Every Year — Colchester Dines on Gin, Gingerbread and Oysters—Memory of Sir Francis Drake Honored at Plymouth—Bread and Cheese and Spring Onions.

Uckfield has just held its annual pea supper, a function which owes its origin to a practical joke. Fifteen years ago a plot of land belonging to a resident became, on account of its neglected state, such an eyesore to his fellow-townsmen that they took the matter into their own hands and dug it up. The owner resolved to profit by their labor and plant the field, but on his next visit to the spot he found, to his annoyance, that it had already been sown with peas.

Soon, however, anger gave place to amusement, and he laughingly told the perpetrators of the joke that they would have to eat the peas. This in due course they did, and from that day the celebration has grown yearly in popularity. Over fifty sat down recently to a capital repast of peas, bacon, and other excellent fare.

The Colchester oyster feast, which has acquired world-wide celebrity, is annually preceded by another function at the opening of the oyster season, when the corporation of the Essex town, who are the owners of the Colne fisheries, steam down the river to Brightlingsea, where they dredge for a few samples of the bivalves—a mere prelude to satisfying their appetites on the hundreds that await their coming in the packing-house at Pyefleet Creek. Previous, however, to this ceremony the worthy citizens fortify themselves with a meal of gingerbread and gin.

The "Fishynge Feaste" is held every August at Plymouth. It commemorates the deeds of Francis Drake, to whose enterprise the town owes its water supply. "To the pious memory of Sir Francis Drake" is first drunk in water from two golden goblets, which afterwards, refilled with wine, are emptied to the toast, "May the descendants of him who gave us water never want wine." Then, after having lunched off Devonshire pasties, those present go about their several amusements until summoned to the feast proper, at which fried trout, caught during the afternoon in the lake, and sucking pig are invariably served.

November is the month wherein Clacton-on-Sea holds its whiting dinner. Then this usually tasteless fish undergoes a marvellous metamorphosis, appearing at table in delectable and unrecognizable guises that fully justifies the concluding toast, "Success to the Whiting Feast and Prosperity to Clacton-on-Sea." Another seaside town, Yarmouth, boasts a sprat banquet which commences with sprat hors-d'oeuvre, and, after having run through some thirty courses, is brought to a conclusion with sprat biscuits.

Sausages and champagne are Peterborough's speciality. Every October at Bridge Fair time the mayor and corporation proceed in solemn procession to the bridge beneath which flows the Nen. There a halt is called and the town crier declares the fair open, both in Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire. Having transacted the official business of the day, the mayor and his guests adjourn to a neighboring hotel, where a repast consisting of the afore-mentioned delicacies awaits them.

Equally tasty although simpler fare is that spread before the company who attend the annual auction of the White Bread Meadow at Bourne, the rent of which goes to supply certain poor people with bread. Every Easter a curious custom is observed, the auctioneer putting up the field and accepting bids only so long as a number of boys are running a race over a fixed course. The moment the hindermost boy reaches the goal the hammer falls, and the meadow is knocked down to him who has made the last bid. This having been satisfactorily settled, those present sit down to a meal of bread, cheese, and spring [onions].

On Easter Monday the game of bottle-kicking takes place at Hallaton. Previous to the start of play, a rough-and-ready meal is provided in the shape of a [illegible] for two large [illegible] and [illegible] penny loaves. Then appears upon the scene a large wooden bottle, bound strongly with iron and filled with ale. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, in the course of a recent [illegible] argument in New York, said with a smile:

"Too many of my sisters appear to think that the woman shouldn't be the head of the house. They would have her dominate over her husband as Mrs. [illegible] was said to dominate over hers.

"Mrs. [illegible] to give you an idea of her perfect domination—said one day to her husband, sharply:

THE HOSTELRY OF GOD

JEANNE MANCE'S LABOR OF LOVE IN MONTREAL.

Great Hospital Founded by Romantic Young French Gentlewoman Two Hundred and Fifty Years Ago Stands a Splendid Monument to Her Memory—Defied Her Relatives and Crossed to New World.

"Hotel Dieu"—God's hostelry, how sweet, how quaint, and yet how appropriate; for, is it not through suffering that many are brought back to the arms of an All-seeing and kind Father—is not this often like the corn-husks of old, the means which brings back to the paternal hearth the erring prodigal? Is not man like to the playing child which may temporarily forget the mother, but which, on the slightest injury, betakes itself to the maternal knee, there to receive the only balm effective to soothe its fretted little heart? Yes, and the guests at this hostelry are all sufferers; stricken units of the great human family, washed in by the buffets of a cold and often cruel world, like wreckage on the seashore. Truly is it called "Hotel Dieu."

In the dim and distant past of some 250 years ago, when this country's greatness was but in embryo, and when enthusiasm over the colonization of what was then New France was widespread in the Old Land, affecting both King and peasant alike, there was one,—a gentlewoman, still in the springtime of life, raised in the very lap of luxury, the well-beloved and idol of her family,—who was affected by the general sentiment. The mind of Jeanne Mance—for of her we speak—was filled with jubilation, and her heart throbbed at the thought of all the good to be done in the new land. Many the roseate dreams had she, but the realization was rendered possible only by the death of both her parents. Opposition arose, friends, relatives put forth the dissuading hand, her family rebelled, the idea of a young girl crossing to what was then a virgin wilderness, a stronghold of barbarism, was unheard of—but her quiet, God-given determination overcame all obstacles. Thus she aroused curiosity. Ladies of the highest society—even the Queen herself—sought the society of this romantic girl, and finally Madame de Bullion, a widow of wealth, saw in her the means of accomplishing a lifelong desire of her heart—the establishment of an hospital in the new world.

Where at present stands this mighty gateway of Empire—this metropolis of a vast Domain, there once alighted a frail, gentle girl. Hers were the first white woman's feet to press the virgin sward. Alone she stood in the darkness—vainly she sought for some welcome sound, but naught broke upon the ear but the weird Indian war cry, or mayhap the echo of an Indian drum beating wildly and mournfully on the mountain-side. Her woman's heart beat in trepidation, but her heaven-given resolve bade silent its flutterings.

An angel of mercy had she come, nor was there a dearth of field for her endeavors. Strife was rampant; blows were given and returned, blood flowed and danger stalked about on all sides. Never did she fail, [illegible] wide-open arms of Christian Charity she recognized her brother in both Red man and Colonist. Alone in the improvised hospital, a mere hut, we see her in the dreary stillness of the midnight hour, keeping [illegible] dying embers, making a soothing draught for parched lips, or with a tenderness more than motherly [illegible] the fevered brow of some French boy or bathing the wounds of some untutored savage whose eyes return but dark hatred and whose lips muttered in accents of rage as she bent over his couch.

For some fifteen years did she thus expend herself [illegible] humanity. With no other assistant than a pious woman to account [illegible] she carried on the great [illegible] ing in person all the offices [illegible] with the hospital. It is [illegible] that oftentimes she would be seen in the grey dawn of an autumn morning with her gentle [illegible] the ice-bound [illegible] repulsively reeking with filth and contagion.

Probably on one of these errands of mercy was it that she met with an accident, the result of a fall on the ice, which deprived her of the use of her arm. Through a lengthy period of excruciating agony did she pass, only to be assured that consultation of some renowned Old World physician would be the sole hope of relief. Broken-hearted at seeing her work thus brought to an apparently tragic end, she braved the vicissitudes of an ocean voyage. There was no [illegible] she was maimed for life. Repressing the first movements of despair surging upon her deeply Christian heart, and buckling on her pristine heroic courage, she again turned her face to the New World, this time accompanied by three sisters, who had volunteered to take up the work. With hearty acclaim was she received, and the wild woods rang with the sounds of rejoicing, the faces of man and woman beamed joyous welcome when the news passed round that the "Angel of the Settlement," the hallowed Mademoiselle Jeanne Mance, had again taken up her station in their midst.

That is some two hundred and fifty years ago—and the same gentle, whole-souled angel of mercy is still doing her work. What matter it, if her institution has changed from a mere hut—through the various stages—till it is now the largest of its kind on the Continent of America? What matter, if, in the ceaseless roll of years, the personnel has been transformed from one solitary self-sacrificing attendant to hundreds not one whit less self-sacrificing? What matter it if, instead of the lurking form of a crouching savage, the signs of a highly-cultured civilization are seen from the windows? Jeanne Mance is as surely at the head of her well beloved institution to-day as she was then.—Montreal Standard.

TAMING WASPS.

The Way One Woman Managed to Make Pets of the Insects.

Directly I catch wasps I give them honey from my [illegible] and then place them in a large glass jar and leave them to themselves for several hours. By that time they are generally hungry again, so, uncovering the jar, I put my hand in with some honey on it. As soon as they are comfortably settled on it I withdraw my hand slowly from the jar, so that on flying off after their meal they find themselves in free space. The first things to be explored are the windows, and then, when they have quite satisfied themselves that they cannot get through the glass, they fly about the room, alighting first on this object, then on that, until I catch them and replace them in their home. The easiest way to catch them to begin with is by inclosing them with one's hands as they are flying. Later on they get so accustomed to this that they will dodge about in the cleverest manner and refuse to be caught in this way, but as by that time they are generally sufficiently tamed to be picked up gently between the finger and thumb it does not matter. If they are never fed except from the hand they soon come to know their feeder, and all my wasps when loose in the room would fly on to my hand if they were hungry and refuse to go away from it until fed.

GOOD BLOOD AND GOOD HEALTH

Is the Result Obtained When Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are Used

To have good health you must have good blood. It is only when the blood is bad that the health is poor. The blood is the life-giving fluid of the body, it is therefore an absolute necessity that it should be kept free from all impurities and poisons. To do this nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These Pills make new, rich blood with every dose; they drive out every impurity, every poison and thus give good health. Do You Realise the Danger of a
POISONED FINGER
DEATH OFTEN LURKS IN A CUT.

YOU see this danger illustrated in the case of Mr. W. C. Edwards, a well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. He cut one of his fingers with a piece of glass, and instead of applying Zam-Buk to prevent blood poison and to heal it, he neglected the cut, and blood poison followed. He says: "The blood-poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After two months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place if I intended to save my arm. I left that doctor and consulted another. After a few weeks' treatment, he also told me that operation would be necessary. He said the bone had become diseased and the finger would have to be opened so that the bone could be scraped. I went away to consider when I would have the operation performed and met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk.

"That night I bathed the wound and put on some Zam-Buk. I got a little sleep for the first time for many nights. In the morning the wound began to bleed instead of the foul discharging as in the past. This was a healthy sign so I went on with the Zam-Buk. Well, to cut a long story short, in a few days I put away the sling, and in a few weeks the finger was healed completely. To-day that finger is as sound as a bell and I owe it to Zam-Buk. I spent over $20 in doctors' fees and when I think how Zam-Buk at such a trifling cost saved me from amputation I am very grateful for the balm I can tell you."

GREAT BUDGET BATTLE IS ON

[illegible]

... over the country's finance, was followed by silence. Lord Crewe, the government leader in the House of Lords, listened to the motion as though it was of no importance or interest whatever.

A more perfect illustration of the schooled reserve, the traditional repose of the House of Lords could not be afforded. When the newspaper men stampeded from the press gallery to the telegraph office to send the important news to the four corners of the globe, the peers seemed only bored.

On the rejection of the budget bill it is expected that the premier will move in the House of Commons a resolution strongly condemning the peers' action and affirming the sole right of the House of Commons to deal with matters of taxation and declaring the peers attempt to force a dissolution to be unconstitutional.

What further course Premier Asquith will take is not yet known, but it is unlikely that the cabinet will resign unless the government is defeated at the election. Some measures are needed to meet the financial difficulty involved in the rejection of the budget, and to this end it is suggested that a conference of party leaders should be held to devise means for financing the country until the great question is settled.

A. J. Balfour, the leader of the opposition in the House of Commons, is under engagement to deliver a speech at Manchester tomorrow night which probably will outline the Unionist party's election manifesto. In the meantime, Winston Spencer Churchill is the first in the field with a manifesto from the Liberal standpoint. In a letter he says that the power to force dissolution is the prerogative of the crown and that finance is the exclusive privilege of the House of Commons. Therefore, he argues, the rejection of the budget is a double invasion by the Lords, both of the royal prerogative and of the Commons and that further, if the Lords establish at the general election their right to control the country's finance they will make themselves the predominant power in the state by their ability to destroy the budget, stop the king's revenue and force the dissolution of Parliament every year.

The election campaign which has been set afoot already with the greatest activity will now be carried on with redoubled energy. The chief Liberal whip tonight issued an urgent appeal to the Labor party, inviting a friendly agreement with the object of avoiding tri-angular contests, which already have lost several seats for the Liberals.

The Liberal newspapers this morning describe Lord Lansdowne's motion as an act of war. The Daily Chronicle in an editorial says that not since the revolution of 1688 has the Commons right to control the finances of the country been challenged. The Lords, says the paper, have chosen the way to destruction. It is as though some malign influence has been at work to bring the House of Lords into the people's gaze ... [illegible]

HUDSON BAY ROUTE

[illegible] Minister of Railways [illegible] Matter

[illegible]

... at Port Nelson, on [illegible] the Churchill route from [illegible] Point 165 miles, of which [illegible] 120 miles have been surveyed, [illegible] the cost at $11,608,585. The length of the Port Nelson route is 397 miles and the estimated cost $8,877,350 to which in both cases the cost of terminals has to be added."

He considers that the probable total cost of either road would be seventeen or eighteen million dollars. This estimate, however, as he explains, is based on incomplete surveys and exploratory reports. The unit prices used in Mr. Armstrong's estimate he considers too low. He (Armstrong) observes that while Churchill harbor seems to be the best natural harbor on the west coast of the bay, much excavation probably in rock, would be required to obtain the necessary depth for a commercial port. As for the river Churchill itself, he states that it is full of Rapids and falls, and not of much use as a transport route, though offering great facilities for the development of power for electrification of the railway if desired.

"Port Nelson harbor is described as requiring improvement by dredging a channel for a distance of about ten miles, but this would probably be in easy material. Comparing the two harbors by the light of information obtained by records of the Hudson's Bay Company, kept between the years 1884 and 1894 in respect of Fort Churchill, which was compiled and published by the geographical department in 1897, and information in respect of like records of York Factory (about twenty miles from Port Nelson) kept between 1828 and 1879 and published by that department in 1879-80, appears that the average length of the open season at Fort Churchill is five months, at York Factory is six months, and at Port Nelson seven months. The harbor at Port Nelson is said never to freeze over, though the ice drifts up and down it with the tides. Further surveys, however, are necessary to determine the relative value of the two harbors as terminals for a railway.

"Mr. Armstrong has directed attention to the possibility of the construction at some future time, of a canal from the bay up the Nelson River to Lake Winnipeg, and, in this connection furnishes some interesting information.

"The Nelson river is described as about 400 miles in length, extending from Lake Winnipeg. It discharges an immense volume of water, deriving the same from the summit of the Rocky Mountains through the North and South Saskatchewan rivers and draining all the water of the province of Manitoba and an immense area of North Dakota, Minnesota, and western Ontario.

FIRST SOD IS TURNED

On the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway

Edmonton, Nov. 15—Dirt will be made to fly on the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway this fall, as was predicted by the railway officials some months ago. The men and the money are available and only the weather will be able to prevent a great deal of grading being done during the winter months. A gang of forty men, with thirty-five teams, left for a point about sixteen miles north of Edmonton yesterday, to be ready this morning to turn the first sod of the railway. The men are under instructions from E. Manders, who has signed a contract to grade seven miles of the line at least, and as much more as climatic conditions will permit. The work will consist of brushing and clearing the right of way in a north-easterly direction from Hodgin's farm and will be under the direct supervision of engineer Lynn.

But actual grading will be done, although the frost is already in the ground. Steam ploughs are available and these will be used to tear away the sod. Mr Manders says these steam outfits will do the work most effectively even if there were five or six inches of frost to contend with. The graders will be put to work after the ploughs have done their part.

Mr. Manders says that the construction may not be carried on in the open stretches of country all winter but that there is nothing to prevent the men from operating on the several cuts that will be necessary along the course mapped out for the railway line.

Assurance was given to the Bulletin this morning that the money deposited to the credit of the province in New York for the sale of bonds has all been transferred and deposited in local branches of the chartered banks of Canada. This money will be available to be paid out on progress reports of the work from time to time.

ELECTRIC WONDER INVENTED

Winnipeg Chemist has Outwitted Edison

Winnipeg, Nov. 15—An electrical invention of great interest to the west is attracting much attention here. It is the system by which electric light and power are generated from the primary batteries, the same as those used in telegraphic offices by chemical agencies only.

The light is extremely brilliant and the power is sufficient to drive small motor boats, cream separators, etc. Prof. Frank Allen, Manitoba University, after a severe test pronounced the invention of great commercial value and great possibilities. The cost of material consumed in the test in 57 hours was about 25 cents. It is considered one of the electrical wonders of the age, and the experts say that Dr. Darby, the city's talented chemist, has accomplished something that Edison has been striving to attain.

Drifts Eight Feet High

Grand Forks, N.D., Nov. 14—The first real blizzard of the season struck here this morning and raged all day. Snow fell all day and, driven by strong winds, soon piled drifts eight feet deep. The blizzard has been general over the northern part of the state and reports from Devil's Lake and Langdon says the storm is growing in severity. No telephone connection is possible west of Churches Ferry. Drifts eight feet in depth are reported at Fargo and the train schedules are all demoralized.

Animal Superstitions.

There are many animals that the superstitious consider it unlucky to kill. Among them may be mentioned a ladybird, a martin, a robin, a stork and a money spider, while to kill a wren means that you will break a bone before the year is out. Many animals are also supposed to herald death, and superstitions in this direction are so numerous that only a few can be mentioned here. The most commonly known is the clicking or tapping of the beetle called a death watch, which is reckoned as an omen of death to some one in the house.

The howling of a dog at night near a house is supposed to predict the death of a sick inmate, as also the settling of a white pigeon on a house foretells death to some one in the house while, again, an old saying among the superstitious runs, "No person can die on a bed or pillow containing the feathers of a white pigeon."

That the gnawing of furniture by rats presages death is also a common superstition. To meet certain animals is considered lucky, while to meet others is the reverse. For instance, to meet a sow with a litter of pigs is very lucky, but it is unlucky if a sow crosses a traveler's path. To meet a weasel is lucky, but should a hare run across the road in front of you it augurs bad fortune.

Passed the Bottle Too Quickly.

Will Low, the painter, told a story of the late quarter dated [illegible] Robert Louis Stevenson. Low and Stevenson were great friends in their youth. Their [illegible] continued up to the time of the writer's death.

"Louis," said the artist, "was no less diplomat than brave. He could be merry and [illegible] justice. One night, I remember, we sat in a garden in Montmartre. The red wine had been flowing pretty freely and one of our party got bound [illegible] aggressive.

[illegible]

"'Tut, tut George,' he said to the thrower [illegible]. If the bottle is passed so quickly none of us will be able to stand out the evening.'"

Reason to Be Happy.

What is the use of being at odds with the world? What is the use of being glum and despondent? The world is full of trials for us all—has plenty of trouble and worry to hand out even to the best of us from time to time. But there would be no need for men and women—we could all be babes—if there were no great life problems to solve, no burdens to bear, no sorrows to live down. These are the balance wheels of life. They are the trials we have to face in order to strengthen us and broaden us to the opportunities and the real happiness that riches do not command nor poverty bar.

The Butler Was In Doubt.

The recent St. Andrew's dinners, according to the Westminster Gazette, have been noteworthy for the profusion of Scotch stories, which in several cases fairly set the tables in a roar. Some of them have an ancient ring, but there is one that is perhaps not generally known. A doctor was attending a dangerous case where a Scotch butler was engaged. On calling in the forenoon he said to Donald, "I hope your master's temperature is much lower today than it was last night." "I'm no' one very sure about that," replied the butler, "for he dee'd this morning."

An Authority.

Peter McArthur was once talking with a friend when he quoted another man as a financial authority. His friend disputed the right of the person quoted to be considered an expert. Mr. McArthur insisted that the man had a right to speak like an oracle.

"What is your definition of an authority?" asked his friend.

"My idea of an authority," retorted Mr. McArthur, "is a person who bluffs beyond my limit."

Strained Relations.

It took place in a dairy.

The dairyman was pouring large quantities of milk through a fine wire netting.

There were microbes in the milk.

Other microbes by the hundred were sitting on the edge of the crock and partly looking on.

Their relations were being strained.

Science to the Rescue.

Housekeeper—Has any way been discovered to kill the pests that destroy carpets?

Great Scientist—Yes, madam. Take up the carpets, hang them on a line and beat them with a heavy stick.

"Will that kill the insects?"

"Yes, madam, if you hit them."

After the Fact.

What a pity it is that our learned anthropologists never discover that a man has criminal eyes, mouth, ears and nose until after he has committed a murder! Oh, science, how many blunders are perpetrated in thy helpless name!

Painless Pulling.

Sufferer—Do you pull teeth without pain?

Dentist—Well, not always. I sprained my wrist last time I pulled a tooth, and it hurts me yet occasionally.

It makes some men prouder to be the friend of a rich man than it makes other men to be rich.

The Bible and Its Contents.

There are no less than 3,566,480 letters in the Bible, 773,697 words, 31,180 verses and 1,180 chapters.

The number of verses in the Bible commencing with A are 12,630; B, 2,207; C, 183; D, 17; E, 207; F, 1,707; G, 209; H, 1,164; I, 1,449; J, 138; K, 65; L, 411; M, 437; N, 961; O, 502; P, 149; Q, 4; R, 127; S, 1,080; T, 5,286; U, 83; V, 37; W, 1,306; X, none; Y, 236; Z, 17.

To read the Bible through in a year means reading three chapters every weekday and five chapters each Sunday.

All the letters of the alphabet are contained in the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra.

The Bible was not divided into chapters, as it is now, until the thirteenth century. Early Hebrew Bibles were marked into sections and verses by means of accents, which served as marks to be observed in the eastern manner of reading. The work of dividing the Bible into chapters has been attributed by some to Stephen Langton. The division into verses was made by a printer of the name of Robert Stephens in 1548 and was adopted throughout all editions.

The American Language.

"It used to be considered a witticism to ask a man whether he spoke 'United States,'" said an English university man at the Lawyers' club the other day. "But there is in fact an American language distinctive from the king's English not only in idiom and in the use of particular words, but in the clipping of words to save time and breath. On this side of the Atlantic one scarcely ever hears 'I have' and 'you are.' You hurrying Americans say 'I've' and 'you're.' You often cut 'cannot' into 'can't,' and your purest speakers use 'don't' and 'won't' ... [illegible]

... words that are [illegible] shortened by a syllable [illegible] and as usage makes language [illegible] Americans are gradually constructing a speech that is quite distinct from that form of English which Oxford and Cambridge are preserving with such care."

Falcon Lore.

No one can pretend to any acquaintance with English literature or even with the English language without being [illegible] how many phrases have been left upon them by the art and practice of falconry. Such words as "haggard," "eyas," "mews," "cadger," to lure, to "stoop," to reclaim, all belonged originally to the falconer's jargon and were thence adopted into common parlance.

A whole host of well worn quotations, including the long misunderstood passage in Hamlet about the "hand saw" (heron shaw), can only be properly explained by reference to the falconer's craft, and several of the most picturesque metaphors used by our best poets derive their virtue from the hawking field.—London Saturday Review.

Had His Money's Worth.

On one occasion when a boarder had devoured almost everything eatable on the table within his reach and when the landlady had supplied him until her strength and patience were well nigh exhausted she suddenly broke out with:

"I shall certainly have to raise the price of your board!"

"Don't think of doing such a thing," he replied. "It is nearly killing me now to eat all I pay for, and should you raise my board and compel me to eat more it will be the death of me."

How He Declined.

Lady—Doctor, I wish you would call around to see my husband some evening when he is at home. Do not let him know that I asked you because he declares he is not sick, but I know he has consumption or something. He's going into a decline.

Doctor—I am astonished, but I will call. What are his symptoms?

Lady—He hasn't any except weakness. He used to hold me on his lap by the hour and now even the baby [illegible]

Rupert—But he looks distracted.

Harold—Yes, he can't invent a plausible excuse to give his wife for being late, and he daren't go home.

A Happy Hour.

He—Do you remember the night I proposed to you?

She—Yes, dear.

"We sat for one hour, and you never opened your mouth."

"Yes, I remember, dear."

"Believe me, that was the happiest hour of my life!"

He Was Lucky.

"Young man," said the pompous individual, "I did not always have this carriage. When I first started in life, I had to walk."

"You were lucky," chuckled the youth. "When I first started in life, I couldn't walk."

CHAILEY NEWS NOTES

Happy Event Takes Place—Other Events in the District

On Saturday, November 13th, the marriage ceremony was solemnized in St. Alban's church, the contracting parties being Mr G. D. Chute and Miss A Croft. The Rev. E. H. Wood officiated.

The settlement turned out en masse the church being filled long before the appointed time. At 3 p.m. sharp the bride's carriage drove up.

The bride entered the church escorted by her brother, Mr. Harry Croft, who gave her away. The bridegroom having Mr Jackson Walton as best man.

[illegible]

... headdress being a costly fur toque with plume and ... satin, it was impossible for anyone to look sweeter than did the bride on this occasion. Naturally being the possessor of good looks and winsome ways combined with the most effective dress, drew words of admiration from all present.

The wedding breakfast was given at the house of Mrs. Croft, Sr. The table resplendent with silver and glass intermixed with the choicest of viands presented the most attractive appearance.

Guests numbering twenty-eight sat down to the table and enjoyed a most luxurious breakfast.

Mr Jackson Walton toasted the health of Mr. and Mrs. Chute, it receiving a hearty response from all present. All expressed their heartfelt good wishes for the future happiness and prosperity of the happy couple, and to which the bridegroom neatly replied on behalf of Mrs. Chute and himself.

The lowest point of the mercury as yet is 10 degrees below.

The debating society resumes its sessions on Nov 19th.

Mrs. Croft, Sr., left for Strathcona on Monday 15th ult, but expects to return in the near future.

We are pleased to hear that Mr Macklin is recovering having met with a bad fall and severely spraining his ankle and which not only caused him great pain but necessitated laying up for several days.

We are glad to report the return of Mr John Walker, himself as well as his musical talent will be a welcome addition to the settlement.

All in the district are glad to hear that a school is to be built in the district early in the spring.

On Nov 17th, the home of J. Burt Davis on the S. E. 1 [illegible] West of 4, together with the contents was totally destroyed by fire caused by an overheated stove while the owner was absent [illegible]

Cowley, Alta., Nov 10.—J. C. Deary a wealthy rancher living near Cowley, was summoned before Justice Bedell of Cowley and Inspector Belcher, of the R. N. W. M. P., Pincher Creek, for threatening to shoot E. W. Bowerman, who runs a threshing outfit in this vicinity. The trial took place at Cowley on Saturday last, the hearing taking all afternoon and evening. It appeared from the evidence that Deary refused to pay in full for the threshing because of [illegible]

"My idea," said Lady Cook, "is to interest the attention of the intelligent women of this country. The women who rouge their faces and wear rats in their hair are too busy primping themselves and filching money from their husbands to think about the ballot and public questions."

$35,000 To Be Spent In Advertising Vermilion Real Estate And District Lands

R. S. King Company of Seattle, Recognise Town As Future Metropolis Of North-Eastern Alberta

One of the most vital announcements which has yet been made in connection with the destined commercial importance and expansion of Vermilion, is that the R.S. King company of Seattle, Wash., have undertaken to expend some thirty-five thousand dollars in advertising Vermilion town property and farm lands throughout the United States.

A. E. Howard representing the company in the matter, is in town gathering together data and details and states that the company above-mentioned, will handle the Eastern Division of the Town Site and further, that he will take out to the Company some 60,000 acres of farm lands to dispose of.

The R. S. King company is a corporation composed of a group of Nevada and Eastern capitalists, and one of their recent purchases has been the town of Othello, on the transcontinental line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railway. The same company took over a controlling interest in the British Columbia Farm Lands association of Tacoma and absorbed the Prince Rupert Land Syndicate, Ltd.

The B. C. Farm Lands association owns great tracts of agricultural lands in Western Canada. Mr. King, though until recently a resident of Nevada, is well known in Tacoma and Seattle where he has held large interests for several years. He is interested in banks and mining properties, owning stock in no less than 60 different silver mines in Nevada and Colorado. Following closely upon the announcement of the purchase of the town of Othello by the R. S. King company, the information has been given out by the railway that it would immediately increase its shops located there and the roundhouse capacity from 10 to 40 engines and that work on the divergent lines of railway to extend north and south from the main line would be commenced immediately. It is predicted by Mr. King and his associates that their young municipality will number 10,000 inhabitants within the next two years.

The foregoing gives an idea of the methods of the man whose company, Mr. Howard states is prepared to spend $35,000 in disseminating information, disposing of lands and aiding in developing what we believe to be one of the coming important railway, manufacturing and agricultural centres in the north eastern portion of the fair young province of Alberta.

Vermilion, though comparatively but an infant, [illegible] its growth [illegible] general. The Massey-Harris Co. [illegible] A $15,000 [illegible] school is situated in the east end [illegible] the municipal council transacts its business in a building of its own. Following these the announcement has [illegible] courthouse [illegible] The bonds have also been guaranteed by the Alberta government for a railway from Vermilion [illegible] the north and west, grading upon which is expected to start in the spring. A milling company is negotiating with the town for the erection of a 125 bbl. flour [illegible] This being an important divisional point of the Canadian Northern [illegible] branch lines [illegible] Railways are [illegible] to open up an industrial [illegible] [illegible] understood, interested parties are at the present time in Winnipeg consulting the railway officials regarding a spur line.

Vermilion, undoubtedly has a brilliant future before it, to forecast [illegible] history. Its situation [illegible] the [illegible] attainment of its destined goal

CHAPTER 23.

[illegible]

"The prodigal is yourself."

The living man [illegible]

[illegible]

"It is all wonderfully strange and new," he said. "It is as though I had rubbed Aladdin's lamp and suddenly had my heart's desire. How could I have thrown my pearl away?"

"We are not to think of that," she protested. "never, never any more."

"You are right," he rejoined cheerfully. "It is what is to come that we must think of." He paused an instant, then he said:

"Last night when you told me of the white house in the aspens I did not tell you that I had just come from there—from Aniston."

She made an exclamation of wonder. "Tell me," she said.

Sitting with her hand in his, he told of that night's experiences, the fear that had held him as he gazed at her portrait in the library, the secret of the horong desk that had solaced his misery and sent him back to the father he was not to see.

At mention of the will she threw out her hand with a passionate gesture. "The money is not mine!" she cried. "It is yours! He intended to change it! He told me so the day he died! Oh, if you think I"—

"No, no," he said gently. "There is no resentment, no false pride, in my love, Jessica. I am thinking of you and of Aniston. You would have me go back, would you not?"

She looked up, smiling, and slowly shook her head. "You are a blind guesser," she said. "Don't you think I know what is in your mind? Not Aniston, Hugh. Some time, but not now—not yet. It is nearer than that."

His eyes flowed into hers. "You understand. Yes, it is here. This is where I must finish my fight first. Yesterday I would have left Smoky mountain forever because you were here. Now"—

"I will help you," she said. "All the world besides counts nothing if only we are together. I could live in a cabin here on the mountain always, in a forest of Arden, till I grow old and want nothing but that—and you."

As he did not answer, she faced him with crimsoning cheeks; then, reading his look, she suddenly threw her arms about his neck.

"Hugh," she cried, "we belong to each other now! There is no one else to consider, is there? I want to be to you what I haven't been—to bear things with you and help you!"

He kissed her eyes and hair. "You have helped, you do help me, Jessica!" he urged. "But I am jealous for your love. It must not be offended. The town of Smoky Mountain must not sneer—and it would sneer now."

"Let it!" she exclaimed resentfully. "As if I would care!"

"But I would care," he said softly. "I want to climb a little higher first."

She was silent a moment, her fingers twisting the fallen leaves. "You don't want them to know that I am your wife?"

"Not yet—till I can see my way."

She nodded and smiled, and the cloud lifted from her face. "You must know best," she said. "This is what I shall do, then. I shall leave the sanitarium tomorrow. The people there are nothing to me, but the town of Smoky Mountain is yours, and I must be a part of it too. I am going to the Mountain Valley House. Mrs. Halloran will take care of me." She sprang to her feet as she added, "I shall go to see her about it now."

He rose and walked with her through the bracken to the road. They came out to the driveway just below the trail that led to the Knob. The bank was high, and, leaping first, he held up his arms to her and lifted her lightly down. In the instant as she lay in his arms he bent and kissed her on the lips.

Neither noted two figures walking together that at that moment rounded the bend of the road a little way above. They were Tom Felder and Dr. Brent. Both men saw the kiss and instinctively drew back. The doctor noted now the telltale flush on his companion's face.

"We have surprised a romance," he said as the two unconscious figures disappeared down the curving stretch. "Who is the man?"

"He is the one we have been talking about."

[illegible] "His cabin is just below here on the hillside."

"Good Lord!" ejaculated the doctor. "What an infernal pity! What's his name?"

"Hugh Stires."

"Stires?" the other repeated. "Stires? How odd!" He stood a moment, tapping his suit case with his stick. Suddenly he took the lawyer's arm and led him into the sidepath.

"Come," he said, "I want to show you something."

He led the way quickly to the Knob, where he stopped as much astonished to his companion, for he had known nothing of the statue. They read the [illegible] "The prodigal son," said Felder.

"Now look at the name on the head stone," said the physician.

Felder's glance [illegible] to peer through the screening bushes to the cabin on the shelf below and returned to the other's face with quick comprehension. "You think"—

"Who could doubt it? 'I will arise and go unto my father.' The old man's whim to be buried here had a meaning after all. The statue is Miss Holme's work, nobody in Smoky Mountain could do it—and I've been her assisting to stay at the sanitarium. What we saw just now is the key to what might have been a pretty riddle if we had ever looked further than our noses. It's a case of a clever rascal and damnable propinquity. The ward has fallen in love with the black sheep."

BEING SICK IN CHINA.

What Happens When a Devil Jumps Down a Patient's Throat.

It is the custom for a Chinaman to visit the barber every week to have a general overhauling. First, the head and face are shaved; second, the ears are scraped and cleansed with a small brush made of duck's hair; third, the upper and lower eyelids are scraped with a dull edged knife, all granulations being smoothed away, and then an application is made with a duck's hair brush of salt solution.

This is the reason why you will find so much blindness in China. They take no antiseptic measures whatever.

Finally the patient's back is massaged, and after paying a fee of 3 cents and no tip he leaves the shop, feeling clean outside, but now must consult his regular physician.

After going through the usual examination, which is a form of military inspection, the doctor diagnoses the case and treats it unless a devil happens to jump down the patient's throat. If this has happened the doctor can do the patient no good until he promises to set off a hundred firecrackers and to make a daily visit to the joss house. This done, he receives the usual pills for those vacated by the devil.

These pills may consist of spotted rhinoceros horns, said to be a wonderful cure for intestinal troubles. The spotted rhinoceros horns come from southern China, and in the market at Singapore a single specimen will bring $25.

Tiger bones when ground to a powder and mixed with Chinese wine make a great blood tonic which is used by all classes of Chinese in northern China. The recipe is held by a firm in Shanghai that has become very wealthy by the sale of this tonic.

Old deer horns are boiled down to make the medicinal g[illegible] the fifty ingredients composing the average Chinese pills. As in these you may get anything from a pinch of gunpowder to powdered cobra tail dust it is not the fault of Wong Yih Chee if just the right kind of specific escapes the patient.

Equal in medicinal efficacy to the above are three high grade tiger remedies, the eyeball, liver and blood. As may be imagined, tiger eyeball, the genuine article, can be prescribed for only the exceedingly wealthy Chinese. Similarly the liver, when dried and reduced to a powder, is worth its weight in gold all over China. Tiger blood, when evaporated to a solid at a temperature of 110 degrees and taken as a powder, is believed by Asiatics to transform a craven into a hero.—Medical Record.

The Political Millennium.

Two Kansas farmers, one of them a Republican and the other a Democrat, were quarreling over their political beliefs. The more they argued the further apart they drifted. Finally they called in a neighbor to settle the dispute. This neighbor was a man who seldom said anything, who went about his business, was a good citizen and substantial in every way.

"Well," he replied after both had stated their sides, "my son and I have been hauling wheat nearly forty years now. There are two roads leading to the mill. One is the valley road and the other leads over the hill. But never yet has the miller asked me which road we came. He always asks, 'Is the wheat good?'"—Kansas City Journal.

Making It Plain.

The following simple and explicit directions are posted up in a hotel on the Nordfjord:

"The fire escape! Directions for use: The one end of the rope is to be fixed at the hook in the window frame, the other is to turn out of the window. The plaited another, which is fixed at the log of wood, is to be put under your arms, whereupon you may safely let yourself slide down. You may regulate the hurry by keeping the rope under the log. If more persons are to be saved you have to pull up the contrary end of the rope, fix this at the hook and go on so till nobody is left."—London Punch.

Forever Dry.

There is a youngster in college who combines the poetic instinct with a keen sense of humor. He is not a close student. In fact, he regards books as instruments of torture. One of the professors picked up a text book belonging to him the other day and found on the flyleaf this bit of verse, which no doubt expressed the student's opinion of it:

Should there be another flood
For refuge hither fly
And should the whole world be submerged
[illegible] still be dry.

HE HAD A FLIGHT.

It Was His Machine, and He Insisted Upon Having It Started.

A good story is told of how M. Delagrange disposed of the monoplane with which he made his record flights last year. He was at his shed one morning recently when a wealthy Russian fresh from St. Petersburg was introduced to him.

"Is your aeroplane for sale?" asked the stranger.

"Yes, if you like."

"Would you mind taking it out of [illegible] me see it?"

"Certainly," said M. [illegible]

The Russian examined it all over, then asked the price and was told 12,000 francs. "I will take it," said the Russian, drawing out his pocketbook and handing the astonished M. Delagrange twelve new notes of 1,000 francs each.

"Then the machine is mine?"

"Yes," replied the aviator, "it is."

Thereupon the Russian got into the pilot's seat and, looking up at M. Delagrange, he said to him: "Turn on the motor, please. I want to see how the thing goes."

There were laughter and astonishment all around among the persons present. M. Delagrange in vain tried to explain to the Russian through an interpreter that a good deal of preliminary practice is required before one can fly.

"But I paid for it," said the Russian.

"I know you did."

"Then it is mine."

"Yes, certainly."

"Then turn that handle and let me go."

Everybody tried to persuade the Russian not to attempt it. All he would reply was that he paid for the machine and he wanted to see himself go up in it. At last M. Delagrange did turn the handle, the motor started purring, the aeroplane ran along over the grass for some yards, rose a few feet into the air and then came down with a smash. The Russian was extricated from the wreck considerably scratched and bruised, but he did not complain. On the contrary, he seemed to be delighted at having had any sort of flight, no matter how disastrous it was, for his money. "I shall have the machine repaired, then I shall try again," was all he said.—London Telegraph.

A Tree Curiosity.

In California there is a tree trunk which has stood for the last sixteen years entirely severed from its base. The stump is fifteen feet in diameter, and the trunk towers seventy-five feet in the air. This remarkable freak is located near the sequoia forest reserve in Tulare county, Cal., and was sawed off by lumbermen for timber. Through some miscalculation when the cut was finished the tree still held its position, and dynamite was resorted to to bring it to the ground, which accounts for the deep gash on one side. After the first charge of the explosive had been ignited the tree still remained standing, and it was discovered that the entire trunk had been shattered by the discharge and was therefore useless for lumber. Accordingly the work was stopped, and the giant has remained upright, withstanding some of the severest wind storms that the state has known, held in its natural position by its great weight.—Wide World Magazine.

Dentist Outwitted Thief.

A respectable looking individual called to see a dentist in the Rue Hermel, Paris. He was shown into the waiting room and told that Dr. Papon would see him in a few minutes. The dentist was attending another case, but, glancing through the open door, he caught sight of the man removing various silver ornaments about the room and conveying them to his pockets. He was about to leave the room when the dentist requested him to come in and be seated. His teeth appeared to be in excellent condition, but Dr. Papon informed him that to avert serious consequences he would have to undergo a painful ordeal, for which he must take gas. The patient was very much distressed, but without further ado Dr. Papon administered a powerful narcotic and then sent for the police. The man was removed and woke up a couple of hours later in his prison cell.—St. James Gazette.

Historic Acapulco.

Acapulco, now ruined by earthquake and tidal wave, is classic ground to all good sailors, for it was from this Mexican port that the Spanish galleons used to sail laden with ill gotten treasure to enrich hidalgos at home. It is associated with the very earliest and most alluring of the stories of the buccaneers. Captain Hall describes the harbor as beau ideal. "It is easy of access," he writes, "very capacious, the water not too deep, the holding ground good, quite free from hidden dangers and as secure as the basin in Portsmouth dockyard. From the interior of the harbor the sea cannot be discovered, and a stranger coming to the spot by land would imagine he was looking over a sequestered mountain lake." But Acapulco has always been an unhealthy town, and the destruction of its buildings may not be an unmixed evil.—London Chronicle.

Heaton, whose father and wife were on board the tug, was in excellent spirits, and by mid-day had arrived abreast of the Varne Buoy. About two hours later he complained of feeling sick, but fortunately this passed off after a little while. At three o'clock he crossed the half-way line.

At 6.10 Heaton had beaten his own record, and was cordially cheered by those on board. As time went on, however, it was seen that Heaton was not making the progress he ought to have been, owing to the adverse tide which was setting him off the land.

At 11.37 he accepted the advice of those on board the tug and decided to abandon the attempt. He climbed up on to the tug unassisted.

AT LAST IT IS FOUND.

The Safest Place on Earth Is on a British Railway Train.

A British railway train is the safest place on earth, as only one passenger in every 70,000,000 is killed and one in every 2,300,000 injured. This deduction is based upon a careful survey of the Board of Trade report on railway accidents during the year 1907. Last year the number of fires in trains amounted to 170, but it should be explained that many of these were of the most trifling description, says The Railway Magazine. It is a significant fact that of the number of fires reported not one occurred either directly or indirectly through a lightning flash. It would appear that for some reason railway trains are practically immune from the disastrous effects which usually mark the track of a violent thunderstorm.

In explanation of this we are told, first that the telegraph poles alongside the railway provide a measure of protection to passing trains. These poles are usually spaced 3 chains, or 66 yards, apart, and on each pole is stapled a thick galvanized iron wire, projecting about 6 inches above the pole roof, and terminating 5 or 6 feet below ground. This earth wire, as it is technically known, tends primarily [illegible] but there can be no doubt that it also serves as a lightning conductor, and that, too, of a very efficient character.

The Abercorn district in Rhodesia lies to the northeast of Salisbury, and is a recognized goldfield. Some of the gold discoveries there have been of extraordinary richness, and the rush is not viewed with any astonishment by people in close touch with Rhodesian conditions.

UNSATISFACTORY SWINE BREEDING SITUATION.

Prices Very High, With Swine Very Scarce—Trade in Pure Bred Hogs in Bad Shape—Farmers Apparently Out of the Business—A Prominent Authority Gives his Opinion.

Just at present the hog market is one of the most puzzling features of the trade in commercial live stock. Prices have for some time been on a record or near-record level, and yet supplies are utterly inadequate. Packers are buying lard in the United States to supply their customers. The Canadian bacon hog furnishes little lard. What few swine have been received of late have gone into the fresh meat trade and the packers have not been able to accumulate even small stocks of lard. Lard, however, is an essential feature of the domestic culinary economy and must be supplied. Lard is also used commercially in ever-increasing quantities, and the packers must furnish it when it is demanded. Consequently, the present shortage of swine is forcing our good money out of the country. It is a very strange situation and is admirably described by an acknowledged authority, whose opinion we sought, but who declines to have his name mentioned. His letter, in part, follows:

"Regarding the present hog situation it seems to me that there are two or three factors in the case which are responsible mainly for the present conditions. First and foremost of these is the high price for feed which has prevailed during the past two years. Another factor is the belief on the part of the farmer that if he went into hogs, the price of hogs would drop just when he was ready to market his product. It is true that in the past farmers have had some rather bitter experiences in this connection, and the agricultural press in some quarters at least, has done its best to foster the belief in the farmer that packers are [illegible]

Never, perhaps, were the feelings of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's Birmingham partisans aroused so much as in the spring of 1882. Just before the Phoenix Park murders, and at a time when there was much hostility towards Mr. Chamberlain harbored on the part of many Liberals, who believed he was acting contrary to the interests of the party, two of his brothers were nominated as candidates for the Reform Club.

It was an unfortunate moment for they were blackballed [illegible] from Sir Wemyss [illegible] "great was the ferment that [illegible] [illegible] Reform [illegible] only to Mr. Chamberlain [illegible] to that section of the Liberal [illegible] great people of Birmingham [illegible] Mr. Chamberlain [illegible] and they even [illegible]

... bushels to the acre, but it ripened seven days earlier. [illegible] ple Red Fyfe wheat, sown on April yielded 24 bushels and fifty pounds to the acre, but took 123 days to ripen. This is the longest time taken by any grain to ripen in the plots. The Red Fyfe is thus proven to be thirteen days later than Preston, although it was sown seven days earlier and in the fall would be only one week behind as a result. Red Fyfe however, makes up in quality over the Preston what it lacks in time.

The feature of the oat crop is that there is no average lower than 60 bushels to the acre. Some of the grain went over 82 bushels, and the vast majority of the samples ran between 70 and 80 bushels to the acre. Irish Victor and Golden Beauty took 108 days to ripen while Orliff came through in 94 days, pioneer yielding the highest with 82 bushels and 32 pounds to the acre, took 107 days to ripen. Banner Oats, the staple in this country took 107 days to ripen and yielded 62 bushels and 22 pounds to the acre. It was second lowest in the list of yields.

Ninety-six days was the longest time taken by barley to ripen, and several varieties required that long. Oderbruch took the full time and yielded the highest, averaging 61 bushels and 2 pounds to the acre. Black barley ripened in 90 days but yielded only some 48 bushels to the acre.

TO BROADEN POWERS OF RURAL COUNCILS

Edmonton Bulletin

It has been given to be understood for some time the Local Improvement Act will be overhauled at the coming session of the Legislature, for the purpose of broadening the powers of the local improvement councils and thus placing the management of strictly local affairs, more fully in the hands of the people of the community affected.

The change may be regarded as a step in the evolution of the rural municipality, a form of rural organization common to older countries but as yet unknown to Alberta. The nearest approach we have had to it yet has been the local improvement district but the powers [illegible] of the local improvement districts have been [illegible] in the governing bodies of [illegible]. The purpose [illegible] is understood [illegible] in the direction of a municipal council [illegible].

The proposed change [illegible]

[illegible]

It is desirable, however, that rural organization should keep pace with the changing conditions, it [illegible] necessary that it does not too far outrun the conditions of the time, and thus become a coercive force. It is necessary, too in making changes to see, that the changes made remedy the grievances complained of but do not in themselves give rise to other grieviences. It is understood in this connection that the acceptance of the new act will be a matter of choice to each local improvement district, that those which wish to come under its provisions and exercise the larger powers conferred by it may do so, but that those which wish to remain under the provisions of the old act will be free to remain as they are.

The principal for such legislation is of course, the common one that people should be allowed to manage their own affairs. This is the foundation of government of all kind in this country, the local improvement system included. The aim of the new measure as indicated in the addresses of Ministers to the convention of local improvement councillors in Strathcona is to put into the hands of each district desiring it a more full control of the matters which solely affect that district. What these matters are, and how far the extension will go, remain to be threshed out in the Legislature when the measure comes in. The resolutions passed by the convention will no doubt be duly considered in settling these points. Whatever its details may be, however, the principal of the proposal is thoroughly sound.

Premier Rutherford dropped an excellent hint at the convention in allusion to the municipal system which has been created or allowed to grow up in the Province of Ontario. Such system he very well said, he did not want to see established in Alberta. In general that system creates two municipal governing bodies, the township council and the county council. It is unnecessary to those familiar with its working to outline the disadvantages of this duplication of machinery. There is no clear reason for the existence in Alberta of secondary authorities corresponding to the county councils. And in the absence of such reason these could only be a nuisance and an expense. From the Premier's remark it is gathered that the idea is not to proceed at all in the direction of multiplying the numbers of governing bodies, but simply to broaden the powers of the existing authorities. The district council or municipal [illegible] should be able to handle [illegible] of local government [illegible] powers in keeping [illegible] the country [illegible] Alberta will have to be a [illegible] before there is any [illegible] need of imposing a second [illegible] the council of the local [illegible] district or the municipal [illegible] the Provincial Legislature.

LAST MEETING L.I.D. 26-D-4

Business Wound Up for the Year Returning Officers Appointed

Mannville, Nov. 22. The last meeting of Council, L.I.D. 26-D-4 met at John L. Summers, N.W. 32-51-8, Nov. 15th, 1909 as per resolution of last meeting. All the councillors present: Jno. J. Hope, (chairman), Jas. H. Tovell, Jno. L. Summers and Jno. Symington.

After the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, the council discussed the advisability of sending a delegate to the Local Improvement Convention to be held in Strathcona Nov. 17 and 18 where certain proposed changes in the act were to be discussed. It was finally decided to send a delegate and on motion of Summers and Symington, Mr. Hope was appointed a delegate. He was to give a detailed report at the next meeting of Council.

Pay lists to the amount of $692 were passed and ordered paid.

Div. IV A. Gellisch, at A. Gollisch N.W. 16-52-8

On motion of Tovell and Summers the Secretary was instructed to get the necessary supplies for the election.

It was decided on motion of Hope and Tovell that each councillor send the secretary a list of tools in his division and where kept, so that there will be a record of their existence and less liability to get lost.

After the customary fees were voted and the councillors had complimented each other on the friendly way all the meetings had been conducted, the meeting adjourned.

A MARINE AUTOCRAT.

The Captain of the Battleship and His Absolute Authority.

Over the vast establishment rules the captain in supreme and isolated authority. All his accomplishments must be those of the seaman, for he directs the movements of the ship in all evolutions, and his decision upon all professional points is final. His responsibility at all times is grave and exacting. In time of war it will strain the stoutest nerves. In the hour of battle it is nothing short of appalling when he stands alone in his conning tower, having control of all the tremendous forces lying latent in his ship only to be released at the proper moment by a touch of his hand. He is the guiding spirit of an enormous projectile of 15,000 tons that rushes through the water at a speed, it may be, of fifteen knots, and he knows that the slightest mistake of his head or heart may mean a national disaster.

But besides being the naval and military chief of the establishment he is a lawyer—a kind of justice of the peace, as it were, who holds court every morning, investigates reports of misdemeanors and assigns punishment to the guilty. The delinquents are brought to the "mast"—the quarter deck—with their accusers. Both sides are heard, and swift judgment usually follows. In this capacity it will be noted that the captain is court, judge and jury. Not infrequently he acts as clergyman and as such is the bishop of his diocese, acknowledging no ecclesiastical superior, reading the service on Sundays, officiating at the burial of his dead and in the old days occasionally marrying lovers.—Lieutenant Commander Gleaves in World's Work.

A Case of Interpretation.

"What shall we do with the prisoner?" demanded the spokesman of the mob. "Do thou, O royal chamberlain, haste to the presence of his majesty and learn his wish."

The royal chamberlain hurried to the presence and bowed himself thrice to the floor; then he asked the monarch's pleasure regarding the desperate outlaw.

"Away with him!" said the king in a loud, harsh voice.

But the chamberlain was something of a humorist, and when he returned to the mob he laughingly announced that in regard to the mishonga with the prisoner the king had said only that it was "a way with him."

Whereupon the mob reluctantly released their quarry.

But in trying to explain the joke to the obtuse king the royal chamberlain became confused and completely lost his head.

Color of Judas' Hair.

In very early times all pictures of Judas were shown with great shocks of red hair falling down well on the shoulders. This and the fact that the Judas in the "Miracle Plays" was provided with a red bristle worked the superstitious people of the middle ages up to such a degree that it was actually unsafe for a red haired person to appear in company. Seeing that things were coming to a serious pass, writers of all classes began to rebuke and denounce "the senseless prejudice against those of lively colored hair." Cyrano de Bergerac in his "States and Empires of the Sun" boldly praised and glorified the despised color in the following words: "A brave head covered with red hair is nothing else but the sun in the midst of his rays, yet many speak ill of it because few have the honor to be so."

Some Examples of "Nerve."

In a recent big libel case the foreman of the jury received a letter from a publican apparently otherwise sane, asking him to insure that the jury should find for the defendant because he had a heavy bet on the result, and this astonishing epistle was read in court. It is interesting to note that the writer lost his bet anyhow. Equally bland was the request once made to Mr Balfour during his premiership to have dismissed from the commission of the peace a justice who had very properly sentenced the author of the request, a notorious ruffian, to a stiff term of imprisonment for sending begging letters.—London Answers.

Cautious.

A lawyer happened to be acquainted with a juror in a petty civil case, and he met him during a recess of the court. The lawyer was just "lighting up," and under ordinary circumstances he would have offered the other a cigar unhesitatingly, but it occurred to him that it might not look right.

"I suppose," he said guardedly, "that a cigar would not influence your verdict?"

The juror was equally cautious.

"A good one wouldn't," he replied, "but a poor one might prejudice me."

He got a good cigar.

Poor Mamma.

The Dear Child—Oh, Mrs. Bloom, when did you get back?

Mrs. Bloom: Bless you, dear, I was not away anywhere. What made you think so?

The Dear Child: I thought you were. I heard my mamma say that you were at loggerheads with your husband for over a week.

Absolutely Past Hope.

"She is the most inconsistent woman I ever knew."

"Never does what she ought to or what you expect, eh?"

"That is just it. Sometimes she does. She is inconsistently inconsistent."

Beware of the man who offers you advice at the expense of a mutual friend.

None are less eager to learn than they who know nothing.

FARMERS' ELEVATOR PAYS

Islay Grain Handled by Farmers to Mutual Advantage—Skating Rink Being built—Stock Shipments

Work has commenced on the skating rink and it is expected it will be opened for the season in about ten days. A hockey club is to be organized and a good winter's sport is anticipated.

Fred Philcox has moved from Vermilion to Islay and has taken up residence in the house lately vacated by Mr. Coomb.

Mrs. Leitch returned on Sunday night from her visit to Saskatchewan, accompanied by Miss Douglas, who will reside in Islay for the winter.

Neil McEchran and A. M. M[illegible] leave for the East on the 2[illegible] where they will spend the winter. [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Macdonald made a business trip to Edmonton last week.

Mr. Weldon is shipping several cars of cattle and hogs from here this week.

A. Beacroft has taken over the management of the elevator.

A general meeting of the shareholders of the elevator was held on Saturday 20th. Quite a number of the shareholders were present, and after hearing the general report, they were quite satisfied that a farmers' elevator was a very beneficial thing for them. Another meeting is called for Dec. when a more complete report will be given.

Grain continues to come in from all directions, and the farmers can safely say their elevator has handled a good percentage of the grain grown in this district. There has also been a quantity of grain from outside points.

Jack Holland has accepted a position with Mr. Madill in the hardware business.

PRESBYTERIAN ANNIVERSARY SERVICES ISLAY

Rev Forbes of Peace River the Special Preacher Supper and Programme Monday

Special to the Standard.

Rev. Mr. Forbes of Fort Saskatchewan was the special preacher at the anniversary services in the Presbyterian church on Sunday 21st. There was a fair congregation at the morning service and in the evening the church was filled to the doors.

On Monday evening an excellent supper was served by the ladies of the church, to which a good number sat down. After supper Mr. Forbes gave an account of his journey through the Peace River country, which proved of great interest to the audience. Owing to the severe weather however there was not as large an attendance as there might have been under more favorable conditions.

Vocal and instrumental selections were rendered during the evening by local talent. The singing of the national anthem concluded a very pleasant evening.

NICKNAMES IN COMMONS.

Familiar Cognomens of Some of Great Britain's M.P.'s.

In nothing, perhaps, is the boyish love of the British Commons for the conviviality of the playground and the cricket-field, the river or the racket court, more forcibly illustrated than in the free and easy fashion in which members address one another.

Nicknames follow their victims sometimes to the end of their lives. Those who were at Eton with Mr. Herbert Gladstone still speak of, and [illegible] to the present Home [illegible]. Cure That Obstinate Sore.

Where Ordinary Salves Fail Zam-Buk Succeeds.

Chronic sores which cause trouble by breaking open, may be cured by Zam-Buk, as well as recent injuries and diseases. If you suffer from some old sore—hidden, perhaps, but none the less painful for that—don't dally, apply nature's healing essences as provided in Zam-Buk. Mrs. [illegible], of 111 Vickers St., Fort William, tells how valuable Zam-Buk is as a family balm. She says: "We first used Zam-Buk for cuts, bruises, etc., and found it so satisfactory that my husband started using it for a chronic sore. For a long time he had been bothered with an ulcer on his leg, and had used various preparations, yet nothing had permanently cured it. He began applying Zam-Buk balm, and was very soon agreeably surprised to notice a great improvement.

"It was only a matter of a short time before Zam-Buk had thoroughly cleansed the sore of all foul matter and healing commenced. It is now [illegible] months since the sore was completely closed, and there is no likelihood of its breaking out again.

"Since then my baby, eighteen months old, has been cured of eczema of the scalp by Zam-Buk. This eczema came in red pimples, and if rubbed or scratched, formed into sores. The child was very fretful from the irritation of the scalp, but whenever Zam-Buk was applied it seemed to bring her great relief. Frequent applications were effective in clearing all traces of the disease from the baby's scalp in a short space of time. I feel it my duty to give the credit where due, and I cheerfully recommend Zam-Buk to all sufferers from chronic sores, boils or eczema."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm. [illegible]

PRINCE EDWARD GOT THIS FOR POCKET MONEY.

Young Heir to the Throne of Britain While at Osborne Has Had No Privileges Over the Ordinary Lad—In Engine Shops He Has to Learn How to Make Things With His Hands—Is Immensely Popular.

It is said that when King Haakon VII. of Norway presented himself for the first time on the Dreadnought League as a naval cadet—"a small boy with a big canvas bag full of sea clothes on his shoulder"—he was accosted by the sentry with, "Who goes there?" The young prince dropped his bag in sheer fright, and it would have fallen overboard if the sentry had not caught it. After, in fear and trembling, the boy had been induced to give his name and number, the sentry turned to the officer on duty with these words: "Officer on guard, I report a skinny little enemy outside who's only got a name in front—and a poor one, too—and none behind. He doesn't know anything, and he looks it fore and aft."

Such was the introduction to the Danish navy of the future King of Norway, and although Prince Edward of Wales, the coming King of England, had no such humiliating initiation as a sailor-boy, since his royal father himself took him to Osborne to introduce him to his new career, [illegible]

[illegible] FOR MR. G. T. BELL

His New Gavel is a Unique and Interesting Piece of Furniture.

Everyone who has ever come in contact with the genial presence of Mr. George T. Bell, [illegible] passenger traffic manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, will be pleased to hear the story of the closing incident of the fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents recently held at Toledo, Ohio. At this convention Mr. Bell presided, and it is interesting to note that he is the first Canadian to be elected president of the association, which is the oldest organization of railway men in the world. This fact, together with the great personal popularity of Mr. Bell with the delegates, were considerations which contributed to the making of the customary presentation of a gavel to the retiring president of the association an affair of more than usual interest and significance.

The Grand Trunk Railway being a great international road with lines in several of the New England States, is a member of a number of the territorial passenger associations there, and it was thought fitting that the New England Passenger Association should make the presentation to Mr. Bell. Then came the problem of securing for the Canadian president a gavel which would be at once emblematic of cordial international relations among railway men, suggestive of future as well as present transportation achievements, and significant as a personal gift. The thing was ingeniously done. The association includes representatives of rail [illegible]

Simple Etiquette For Church Weddings

JUST as love and marriage is an ever old, ever new story, so, too, the matter of etiquette for a church wedding seems to be an ever old, ever new subject. At least, I judge so from the many requests that have come to me lately, asking that I write an article dealing with the customary social rules and regulations governing a wedding held at a church. It would seem that no bride-elect desires to go to the altar without a full knowledge of the etiquette of the occasion, and because so many brides-elect have taken the trouble to write me on this score I shall devote the etiquette articles [illegible] week to the more important rules for the formal church wedding.

First, as to the ushers, who, though they do not shine at a wedding so gloriously as do the bride and her sweet attendants, are, nevertheless, very important accessories of the church wedding. Indeed, on their understanding of the etiquette of the occasion, and their ability to observe it to the slightest detail, depends much on the brilliant success of the function.

The ushers practically direct the ceremonies of a church wedding and receive their directions from the bride or her mother. They are selected from the friends of both bride and groom, and custom requires that each send the bride a gift in accordance with his means. The groom's best man is the most intimate friend of his bachelor life, and upon him devolves the matter of paying the clergyman's fee. At a simple wedding where the bride has no mother he also frequently makes all the church arrangements.

The usher's dress at a day wedding is generally a black frock coat, gray trousers, a white tie and white gloves. He also sometimes wears a white ribbon on his left arm, or if not this a large white boutonniere.

Upon the day of the marriage the ushers must be at the church quite twenty minutes before the ceremony, in order that the guests that come early may be as ceremoniously seated as the last.

[illegible]

Upon approaching the altar she must walk with her head modestly [illegible] her veil completely covering her face. But after the nuptial blessing [illegible] the bride's veil and gracefully disposes it at the back of her coiffure with the pin with which the bridesmaid has provided herself. In this case the bride returns to her carriage on her new husband's arm with her face uncovered. She may fling a ghost of a smile then to somebody in passing, to her mother perhaps, but somehow no recognition of any of the church company is thought better form.

Upon leaving the church nobody enters the carriage of the bride and groom, and at the house congratulations, as the word goes, are given entirely to the groom, for the bride is supposed to be conferring the joy and not receiving it.

In the Episcopal Church it is the custom for the bride and groom to sign their names in the register before leaving, when the best man serves as first witness and the first bridesmaid as second. [illegible]

Johnny Cardinal, a well known half breed and a successful hunter, brought a load of furs in on Wednesday last. He returned, loaded, to his hunting grounds the same night.

Buyers of fowl require fat birds, killed in the month, dry plucked, started before killing, undrawn and with heads on. Stephens Brothers will pay highest cash price for birds handled in this way

Townsend and Francis Swanson of Dewberry, were in town on Friday and report successful hunting in their part of the country. They and their father have secured 500 fat chickens up to that time beside other fur

The threshing outfit owned by Messrs Stone, Hicks, Pearson and Hicks will complete a most successful season about the 20th inst. They have put in a long season, having done 70 days' work uncommencing

Mr. A. Lord was in town for supplies on Saturday. He finished threshing 500 bushels of wheat and 2000 of oats the Friday previous. All the grain yielded well and is a very fine sample.

Several local Oddfellows, namely Messrs Fee, Hayward, Gullen, Bonnell, Slater, Bennamoule and Reed left, were in attendance at the Grand Encampment of I.O.O.F held in Edmonton last week and report a splendid time. An encampment is to be held here January 4th 1910. Those are preliminary steps towards the attainment of a Grand Lodge for the Province of Alberta.

The sacred cantata given in the Presbyterian church by the young people of the choir of the local church, was a great treat to those who had called their patronage to appreciate the talent and efforts of our local musicians. The choruses and quartettes were excellent, and the solos of Miss Plant and Miss Glanville and others deserve special mention. Mr Bennamoule the conductor, and Mr Davis the organist, do were great praise and better encouragement for their efforts to develop the latent talent of the young people of the town

Sunday was a decidedly cold day and Monday cold and stormy.

A very successful social was held at the Queens Creek school last Friday the 19th inst. The house was crowded in a very close behaviour by Mr. T. Morris, realized $5200. A concert followed in the course of which were well rendered and enthusiastically received. The dance, which closed the evening was by no means a failure in any way in this respect, as by all appearances Mr. D. J. Anderson a faithful the duties of M. C. W. A. must feel he amply thank to those who helped to make the affair pass off so well and to those who braved the elements to attend.

Many people are laboring under the delusion that they can have freight prepaid on $25.00 orders by the catalogue houses. This is emphatically not the case. In a letter recently received from one of these houses they state distinctly «We cannot pay freight on any order no matter how large.» Moreover the most freight that can be charged on any shipment must equal the first class freight on 100 pounds so if you order 100 lbs or less of 2nd, 3rd, 4th or 5th class goods you must pay at least 1st class freight on 100 lbs which from Winnipeg equals one and a half cents a lb. A great many think that they can make up an order of 100 lbs of third class stuff, say canned goods and get it in at the 1st class rate of 27 cents. This is a mistake as it will cost them the full $1.14 This information is not given in the catalogue but it may be had from any C. N. R. agent.

WHEAT THE BEST IN ALBERTA

Exhibited at Seed Fair Yesterday. Splendid Array. A Large Attendance. Interesting Addresse by Judges

The second annual seed fair in connection with the Vermilion Agricultural Society was held yesterday and was a pronounced success both in point of attendance and in the quality shown. The quality of the grain exhibited was just excellent, most quite plainly was this the case in the ten exhibits of spring wheat. T. H. Woolford, one of the judges, stating that never had he been put to such a test in so close competition of grain samples. Only half a point decided first and second prizes and only some eight points lay between 1st and 10th.

«Without a doubt the best wheat I have judged in the Province of Alberta and every sample worthy of a prize which I wish I could give it.» Such was the decided utterance of Mr. Woolford, thus placing Vermilion in the front rank for the quality of wheat grown. The quantity as well as the quality will soon come.

The fair was held in the council chamber of the town hall and the grain exhibits lined the four walls. From start to finish the chamber was filled by a manifestedly interested crowd who were fully imbued with the importance of and vast educational benefits resulting from fall fairs of this nature. THE LAWS OF CASTE.

Purification of a Hindu Who Went Abroad.

The complexities of caste in India are well illustrated by a remarkable correspondence published in The Bihar, a Bankipore paper. A certain young Hindu was selected by the Behar Industrial Association at Bankipore for education in agriculture in England and in other parts of Europe. In notifying this fact to the Kayastha Brothers in Behar, the student's father gave the text of letters exchanged between himself and his son, by which the latter bound himself to fulfill certain conditions in order that on his return he might be taken back into the Society of Karan Kayasthas. Among the conditions imposed were the following:

That you will go to the foreign countries with no other object than education; that you shall abstain from politics and that you shall not attend any political meetings whatever.

You will take no prohibited food as ... enlightened people in Behar and as forbidden by the sect ... to which we belong, in your journey to and fro on board the steamer and in your sojourn in foreign countries.

On your return to India you will cease to dine with people other than Kayasthas received in Society.

That immediately on your return you will do the necessary "Prayaschitta" as inculcated by the Brahmins of the country.

You shall have, till then, to remain ... and have no access to your ... and the family goddess.

You shall not eat and drink without invoking the Supreme Being as inculcated by your spiritual preceptor.

You will conform to all the ... and their ... after your return home, and ... private life you will live as you are doing now.

In case of breach of any of the above conditions you shall not be able to remarry, and shall have to incur the expenses of your present family and be liable to be debarred from inheriting your father's and ancestral property.

Tribesmen Active.

The Indian Northwest frontier is presently in an unsettled state, owing to the activity of the Khostwal tribesmen. The border police have been strengthened as the Khostwal men recently made an attack on ... in the Kurram, and ... wounded in the fray. Owing to their reverse they have apparently collected in some numbers, and are bent on revenge. The disturbed conditions in the neighborhood ... still continue. As bands of the Khostwals bring about ... road ... Miranshah has to ... officers ... travelling ... Bannu, and escorts have to be provided for officers of the militia journeying from post to post. A sense of insecurity is felt also in British territory since the mail tonga for Kohat was attacked fifteen miles from Bannu. On that occasion the Naib Tahsildar of ... was carried off, but ... by the raiders owing to the hot pursuit of the border military police. The tonga was carrying English mails, but fortunately none of the bags were taken. Only one bag of Indian letters was stolen, and this was recovered.

Getting Rich in Australia.

What thrift and energy may do, even for the farm laborer in Australia, is well illustrated by a case which recently came before the Wagga Land Board. One of the applicants for a selection was a lad between 18 and 19 years of age. It was shown in evidence that while working as a farm laborer the applicant had saved sufficient money to buy farm horses, costing in the aggregate $350, and that he still had $390 cash in hand. During harvest time he had received $9 per week and his keep for driving five horses in a stripper, while ... he received $6.25 and for the rest of the year $5 per week and keep. A member of the board remarked that if the Premier would have a report of this case printed and circulated in England, there would be no difficulty in securing desirable young men of the farm-laboring class as immigrants, the trouble would then be to keep them away. One resident of the district intimates that he could place at once ten young men of this type at $6.25 per week.

Her First Part.

Miss Wynne-Matthison, who is taking a leading part in the new Adelphi piece, "The Great Divide," found her first efforts to gain a footing on the ladder of theatrical fame in London far from encouraging. It is true that she recited and acted as an amateur in Shakespearian and other roles from the age of ten, but when she came to seek for professional engagements she found she could get nothing but a one-word part ... that was thirteen years ago. Since then Miss Matthison, who in private life is Mrs. Charles Rann Kennedy, has achieved much, and holds the distinction of being Sir Henry Irving's last leading lady. She is probably the last woman to whom he ever spoke, for she was playing Fair Rosamund to his Becket on the night of his tragic death.

That everything should be neat and shipshape is most important aboard a yacht. A writer in the Mariner's Advocate tells the story of the captain of a certain sloop, who crossed the deck in a hurry, seemingly very much perplexed. A lady stopped him and asked him what the trouble was.

"The fact is, ma'am," he said, "our rudder's broken."

"Oh, I shouldn't worry about that," said the lady. "Being under water nearly all the time, no one will notice it."

[illegible] ... of roads.

This proposal [illegible] the lines of the much-debated British budget, for it proposes to take from the owners of idle land some part of the value which is given to such land by the industry and enterprise of the people of the surrounding community. The justification of the proposal lies in the fact that it is from this industry and enterprise the land derives its value. The land without the surrounding people, would be worthless. It is because the people are there and are putting capital and labor into productive effort, that it is valuable and is becoming more and more valuable. It seems reasonable that some part of the value created by their exertions and without any assistance from the holder of the idle land should be devoted to the general benefit of the district.

But in another sense the proposal is simply a measure of self-defence, designed to recoup the settlers in some degree for the disadvantages they suffer and the extra expense to which they are sometimes put because the land is left idle. [illegible] settlement [illegible] ... the settler and his family more attractive, or which to put it another way, relieves present [illegible] ... hardship. To the families of the settlers these are very real handicaps, and it is not unreasonable that some monetary compensation should be made to the community for the disadvantages thrown upon its people.

Land holding of this character strikes the settler in another way and in another spot. The government grant to schools in this province is determined in part by the attendance at the schools. [illegible] ... other makes it [illegible] large dividends [illegible] ... its [illegible] lack of [illegible] ... it will at least return the people something for the inconvenience they suffer.

Nor would the holder of the idle land have any very good ground for objection. The proceeds would go to the improvement of the roads and this would of course increase the value of his land, probably many times the amount of the tax. The proposal seems one for which many substantial arguments can be advanced and against which there is really not much to be said. If to avoid the tax the holder of such land should be induced to bring it into cultivation or sell it to some one who would do so, the community would be much better than if he paid the tax and continued to keep the land in idleness.

Alaska's population is estimated by the United States Census Bureau officials to be some 11,000 less than it was in 1900. This is strange considering that President Roosevelt some four or five years ago was declaring in speeches in the Western States that Alaska was destined to become one of the greatest agricultural sections of North America.

The importance of the assertion of T. H. Woodford that the wheat on [illegible] annual seed grain for yesterday, cannot be overestimated in its bearing upon the district. Mr. Woodford is not indulging the love of cheap talk and would not have made such a far reaching statement unless he was convinced that such was the fact from personal knowledge. Sale of Work at Pleasant Valley

The Ladies of the W. A. in connection with All Saints' church, Pleasant Valley, held a sale of work on Thursday 25th last. An exceedingly pleasant evening was spent in the mission house which has just undergone extensive alterations and enlargement, and which Mr. Edward had placed at their disposal. Supper was served at 7.30 downstairs while the articles for sale were disposed in the rooms above.

The chief piece of work was a beautiful quilt which sold for $3.00. There was also quite a rush for the splendid cushions at $1 each. Hardly anything remained after the sale, a noticeable feature of which was the way in which some of our bachelors were beguiled into buying aprons, infants clothing, [illegible] and the like. Of course this may have been done with the laudable desire of helping the ladies with this sale, as it is just possible that the spirit of matrimony, which has been so busy in this district generally, and which has been specially hovering over the mission house of late, may be an inle[illegible] one, and thus have [illegible] the purse strings of the stronger (?) sex. Anyway the ladies did a good business and are to be congratulated on the result of their labours.

Music and vocal selections rendered the evening still more agreeable. The proceeds will be devoted to the interior furnishing of the church.

MOVEMENT REACHES VERMILION

Representatives of Laymen's Missionary Movement Banqueted by Business Men of the Town

The complimentary banquet by the business men of Vermilion to the representatives of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, held in the Presbyterian Church, Friday evening last was attended by the local clergy and representative business men of the town, besides the three visitors, fully forty sitting down to the tables.

The catering was in the hands of the ladies of the church and [illegible] ... During the course [illegible] ... the foreign field. Dr. [illegible] ... Laymen's Missionary Movement. Mr. Ryan's address was an especially fervid effort and made a deep impression upon the audience. Mr. Marks dealt more particularly with the business details and scheme of the movement.

Upon the conclusion of the addresses the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

Moved by Dr. Ryan and seconded by J. B. Hunt, and resolved that, having with pleasure listened to the addresses of Messrs. Brown, Ryan and Anderson, presenting the objects and claims of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, we, the men of Vermilion and vicinity here assembled, hereby express our endorsation of the principles and policy of the Movement so far as we understand them.

We believe that a Men's Missionary Committee should be appointed in every church in order to assist in bringing the congregation up to the highest Missionary efficiency. We recognize that as some [illegible] obligation to do all in our power to bring up the standard of giving in our congregation to at least two dollars per communicant member for the Missionary work carried on by our respective denominations in home and foreign fields. We also recommend the use of the weekly offering envelope both for the local [illegible] and for the Missionary gifts [illegible]

The singing of [illegible] closed the proceedings.

FASHIONABLE FURS.

Scarfs of Fur Trimmed Mousseline Very Modish.

In Paris women have been wearing thin frocks edged with fur and scarfs of mousseline with bands of pelt, but it is only lately that these scarfs or mantles have appeared in our midst. The modish ones are of a color harmonizing with the gown, and there are three or four narrow bands of skunk fur on the width of material. ...

MODISH MATTERS.

Jet a Feature of Winter Millinery—Sequin Frocks For Evening Wear.

Jet is used on the winter millinery, but it is not so heavy or cumbersome as it was in the spring trimming schemes.

Any woman who has put away a sequin gown as quite hopeless may get an entirely new and attractive effect by having it made up under instead of over a frock of pale green or yellow chiffon, which in turn is to be veiled in white.

Odds and ends of embroidery that have been left over from the summer sewing or picked up as bargains may be effectively used as trimmings for aprons as a couple of strips will make bretelles. The raw edge should be shaped to bring the work wide on the shoulders and narrow at the belt.

Moire promises to have a considerable vogue. Coats made entirely of moire or of cloth trimmed with the moire will be much worn, and it will not be at all surprising if moire skirts appear.

School dresses made of plaid, with trimmings of plain material, are especially smart this season...

WHAT NEGLECT DID FOR HIM

JAS. E. BRANT SUFFERED TORMENTS FROM KIDNEY DISEASES

Then he Used Dodd's Kidney Pills and Became a Well Man—His Experience a Lesson for You.

Athabasca Landing, Alta. (Special)—That Kidney Disease, neglected in its earlier stages, leads to the most terrible suffering if not death itself, and that the one sure cure for it in all stages is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is the experience of Mr. James E. Brant, a farmer residing near here.

Mr. Grant contracted Kidney Disease, when a young man, from a strain and like hosts of others he neglected it, expecting it to go away itself.

But it kept gradually growing worse till after thirty years of increasing suffering the climax came, and he found himself so crippled that at times he could not turn in bed, and for two weeks at a time it was impossible for him to rise from a chair without putting his hands on his knees.

...

A COBBLER SHAKESPEARE.

Hans Sachs is the Great German Dramatic Genius.

The stage in Germany is as much indebted to Hans Sachs as the English stage is to Shakespeare. This immortal was born in the year 1494, of lowly parentage, being the son of a tailor and apprenticed to a shoemaker.

In those days apprentices and masters of the craft wandered through the country, going from town to town, and were classed under the title of trade companies. On his journeys through the country he combined with cobbling the art of song, which was cultivated by these itinerant artisans, especially in South Germany and the Rhinelands.

Returning to Neuremberg, he threw himself heart and soul into the art of song, poetry and dramatic production, but at the same time continuing at his trade. Sachs had in his travels visited Frankfort, Wurzburg, Cologne, Munich, Vienna, Lubeck and many other places, and he learned things new, not only about boots and shoes, but about poetry, and when, at the age of twenty-two, he settled down in Neuremberg, he was able to stand up as a reformer of the German drama.

Poetry and Parents.

"You never can tell whether poetry is loaded or not," said a professor, descanting upon the Muse, "and what a poet writes in the moments of his fine frenzy rolling may be susceptible of changes which would make him curse the pen did he but know whence it pointed. Now, listen to this couplet.

"'Help us to save free conscience from the paw
Of hireling wolves whose gospel is their maw.'

"It sounds like some kind of a family poem, doesn't it, with paw and maw coming in to make the rhyme? Do you imagine the poet when he wrote the lines ever thought of the parents represented in such a homely way, and how the meaning of the whole thing could be changed by changing the meaning of the end words of the two lines? Was he a beginner? ... He was John Milton. You remember he wrote 'Paradise Lost' and two or three other pieces of considerable merit, though he never quite got into the six best sellers list, and these two lines I have quoted close his sonnet to Lord Protector Cromwell, written in 1652."

Why Stanfield's Make Underwear

UP to 20 years ago, most everyone considered that all Underwear—no matter how well cut and made—would shrink and harden.

In those days, the makers were working on the wrong idea. They were trying to find a way to finish Underwear so that it would not shrink, instead of trying to find a way to get the shrink out the wool before the yarn went to the knitting machines.

The late C. E. Stanfield—who knew wool as only a man can know it who studies it from the sheep's back to the wearer's back—gave his attention to the problem for years.

Living in Nova Scotia, he soon realized that woolen underwear, and the best of pure woolen underwear, was the only kind that would and could protect the Canadian against the rigorous Canadian Winter. He found that as underwear was then made, he could not make woolen underwear that would not shrink, mat and harden. He devoted himself to the problem and after many years of experimenting, he finally discovered a method by which he could take the shrink out of the wool before the garments were knitted.

This method, improved and perfected, has made possible the immense business of Stanfield's Limited, with a larger output of their special classes of Underwear than any other factory in Canada.

The Stanfields make underwear to-day because Canadian people find Stanfield's Underwear the most comfortable, the most durable, and the warmest for its weight.

The Stanfields are making more underwear every year because the buying public demands more of it. Popularity is a good test of quality.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and samples of fabric, sent free for your address.

Bronze Ties No Longer Fashionable. Lace Yoke Adjustment.

Bronze ties have evidently had their day, as those contemplating buying late summer footwear must select some other kind of leather. Suede low shoes are always in good taste, and cravenette ties with kid vamps are natty looking. And there

The lace yoke in an unlined waist often works up and does not lie smooth, no matter how neatly it has been fitted. To obviate this sew a tab to the lower edge of the yoke, back and front, and pin down to the corset cover with a tiny safety pin.

CHOOSING A LORD MAYOR.

Quaint Ceremony of Naming London's Chief Executive Officer.

Candidates for the office of Lord Mayor must be aldermen of the City of London who have already served as sheriffs. On Michaelmas Day the Lord Mayor, sheriffs, aldermen, city officials, and liverymen assemble at the Guildhall, where a nosegay is handed to each one of them. They then proceed to the Church of St. Lawrence Jewry, where a sermon is preached by the Lord Mayor's chaplain. In days of yore the Sacrament also was administered.

Divine service over, the civic dignitaries return to the Guildhall and proceed to the "dais" in the great hall. The electors having assembled, the Common Crier commands all persons present to uncover, and those who are not liverymen to leave the hall. This gentleman then makes an old-time proclamation, beginning with the thrice-repeated "Oyez!" stating for what purpose the meeting has been called. The proclamation having been concluded, the Recorder informs the electors that in order that their choice of a Lord Mayor might be unfettered the Lord Mayor and aldermen should retire from the hall during the election.

These high officials having retired, the Common Serjeant submits a number of names to the livery, who choose two, the names being afterwards conveyed to the Court of Aldermen, who secretly vote for one or other of the two names submitted.

Last year the names selected by the liverymen were those of Sir George Wyatt Truscott, alderman and stationer, and Sir John Knill, alderman and goldsmith. Sir George Truscott was elected by the Court of Aldermen and the Recorder announced the fact on the return of the aldermen to the great hall.

The Town Clerk then calls on the Lord Mayor-elect to "come forth and declare his assent to take office." Sir George Truscott [illegible] accepted office, and [illegible] the liverymen [illegible] ... [illegible]

A WINDSOR LADY'S APPEAL

[illegible]

ABOARD A SUBMARINE.

The Crew, the Work and the Kind of Life the Men Lead.

Life aboard a submarine is not so unpleasant or dangerous as one might imagine, but it is entirely different from that led on other types of ships.

The crew, usually consisting of two officers and fourteen men, is selected from volunteers after a most rigid medical examination. Service rarely extends beyond a period of two years, and real work on a submarine is limited to about [illegible] weeks in the summer and one in the winter. During the remainder of the time the men live on a "parent" ship or on shore. The boat is, however, put through the various evolutions once every week.

The first impression on entering a submarine is one of heat, the air being rather close and heavy, but the men soon become accustomed to it. Standing room space is about six and one-half feet, and toward both ends the boat tapers away almost to a point. There are no portholes. The hatchway to the conning tower is the only aperture. Under water electric light is used. There are ventilators, but when the boat dives they are shut off with a cap.

Life on board a submarine is essentially "in common." The way men and many objects are crammed together in a narrow space is almost miraculous.

Cooking is done in an electric oven, and no foods which have a strong or disagreeable smell are used. Of course smoking is allowed only when on the surface and then on the bridge. Owing to the character of the men selected discipline is perfect.

There is scarcely any noise in a submarine when submerged. The greatest depth the boat descends does not exceed thirty feet. At that depth her speed is about [illegible] knots. The air is quite "breathable" for four hours, but in case of emergency the crew can remain closed in for seventy hours without danger.

The men love the life. With the officers they are as one family, sharing everything equally, including the dangers, which are not much to speak of, provided every one does his duty. When the weather is fair there is very little rolling. In rough weather the men escape knocking about by holding on to "steadying lines."—New York [illegible]

JURIES IN ENGLAND.

They Get Through Their Work Quickly and With Little Fuss.

The working of the British jury system exhibits a marked contrast with that of our own. It is possible that my experience in British courts was exceptional, but in not a single instance did I see a juror challenged or rejected. In all of the courts requiring juries the necessary number of men were present, and they were sworn in without question. In the sheriff's deputy court in Scotland the presiding judge gave notice to the jury that he expected to adjourn the court at 2 o'clock and stated that if they could all remain until that hour he would at once dismiss the men who had been called for a second panel. The jurors conferred together and decided to remain till 1 o'clock, whereupon the judge notified the other men to appear at 12:30. The one jury impaneled for the morning session rendered six verdicts in cases involving prosecutions for thefts, fraud and burglary.

In the court of quarter sessions at Taunton, England, I saw a single jury in one day render eleven verdicts. I found that it was customary in the several sorts of court that I attended for the same jury to act in successive cases. In no instance did I see a jury leave their seats to make up their verdict. Usually the issue before them was made so plain that all who gave attention knew in advance what the decision would be. I made note of an exceptional instance of delay when the court was forced to wait nine minutes for the report of the jury. In this case the judge who gave the instructions was himself in doubt as to what the verdict ought to be.

A Scottish jury consists of fifteen persons, and a majority may render a verdict. In England the number is twelve, and unanimity is required. But I noted no difference as to practical results in the two countries. The twelve men in the English jury were as prompt and certain in their action as were the eight out of fifteen in the Scottish jury.—McClure's Magazine.

Up on Grammar.

When she was eighteen Mabel thought she was old enough to go out to work and naturally turned to stenography as the line of her endeavors.

"I've studied grammar," she told her mother, "and I know all about punctuation, spelling, division and those things."

"I don't think," teased her mother, "you would know a pronoun if you saw one."

However, Mabel was firm and secured a place. She did not reveal her ignorance (for, of course, she did not know everything) until she wished to divide the word "invisible." Then she turned to a girl working on her right.

"Say," she remarked, "invisible is divided invisible, isn't it—divided and accented on the pronoun?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

In Saskatchewan, however, conditions are very different. During the year 76 new stations have been added to the list, giving in all 380 points at which elevators have been erected. The number of new elevators for the year is 219, while the storage capacity had been increased from 17,921,500 to 24,279,000 bushels, or a gain of [illegible] bushels.

The increase in Alberta is even more striking. There are now in Alberta 121 points where elevators have been erected, against 65 last year. There are 22[illegible] elevators, a gain of 119 for the year, and the capacity has been almost doubled, being now [illegible] bushels, as against 1,092,400 bushels last year.

These figures show that in the western provinces west of Winnipeg, there are now 7[illegible] stations where elevator storage has been erected, that 1,7[illegible] elevators are in active operation and that there is a storage capacity of 54,241,000 bushels, or an increase for the year of 11,197,500 bushels. THE RAT KING.

His Method Was Successful, but It Remains a Secret.

In the early sixties of the last century the Smithsonian institution was infested with rats. Nothing in the building seemed to be rat proof. They ate skins cured with arsenical soap or table [illegible] of the [illegible] of Professor Henry [illegible] without discrimination. Every [illegible] from Professor Henry [illegible] had one subject [illegible] that was "rats."

[illegible] who lived in the east [illegible] building was the [illegible] of the rats [illegible] during that day [illegible] had been [illegible] of the family [illegible] that there [illegible] Philadelphia who [illegible] rats."

[illegible] the "rat king" [illegible] He was [illegible] was broad and [illegible] for description. [illegible] He carried a large [illegible] covered basket. His [illegible] eyes were a most [illegible] eyebrows, and his [illegible] but ragged. His [illegible] was short and [illegible] he went straight to the point [illegible] Professor Henry in [illegible]

So they left him in absolute darkness and carried out his directions.

On Sunday morning the queer old man emerged from the darkness so confident of his success that he refused to accept the money which was his due then and there, but insisted that Professor Henry mail the check to him in Philadelphia the following week.

"Now you can leave your food in the basement, and it won't be touched. And I won't take a cent if you are troubled with rats," were his parting words.

Cheese and cake were directly placed about the building to tempt the rats. Morning after morning they were found as they had been left, and from that day to this the Smithsonian institution has never been seriously troubled with rats. And no one has ever found out the secret of the "rat king's" method.—Youth's Companion.

Washington's High Priced Shad.

Washington's steward was a man named Fraunces, who liked good living and with whom Washington continually quarreled about the marketing. One time he bought a shad in February, and as Washington saw it coming into the dining room he was charmed and asked what fish it was.

"It is a shad," replied the steward, "a very fine shad. It was the only one in the market, and I bought it for you."

"But what did you pay for it?" said Washington sternly.

"It is a very fine shad," continued the steward, "and it is cooked to a [illegible]"

"But I want to know the price—the price!"

"It cost $3," stammered out Fraunces.

"Take it away," said Washington as he raised his head, "take it away. It shall never be said that I set such an example of luxury and extravagance."

And with that he drove the steward out of the room, and the shad was eaten in the servants' kitchen.

She Liked Silk Hosiery.

Susan B. Anthony was a woman of simple taste in dress, but her close friends knew of one pretty feminine vanity that she always held to. She had a weakness for silk stockings. [illegible] pressed on one occasion for an explanation of what most women at one time regarded as an unnecessary extravagance, she laughingly exclaimed: "Oh, I just love em! They are an inspiration. If I have my silk stockings on when I rise to make an address I feel just as if I am walking among the clouds. They help me to soar away on flights of eloquence. I wouldn't be without them."

Just the Thing.

The poet took his silver mounted plate from the bureau drawer.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Its Effect Upon the Customer to Whom It Was Made.

A business man of Lington, O., tells this story of some commercial friends of his:

A customer who bought in a small way from the wholesalers and whose credit was not of the sort known as gilt edged visited the city and purchased a $2,800 bill of goods, paying $2,500 in cash and giving his note for the remaining $300.

After the transaction had been closed and the paper and currency had changed hands the customer said:

"Now, after a deal of that size it is customary to give a purchaser a present. Come across with it."

"We'll throw in a pair of suspenders," laughed the salesman temporizingly.

"A pair of suspenders, eh! Say, quit fooling. I really mean it. I expect you to do something in acknowledgment of my patronage."

The salesman went to the manager with the problem, and the manager said:

"Well, if he feels that way about it we might encourage him a bit. We'll do something that ought to please him greatly. Give him back his $300 note. Make him a present of his paper. That will make him a cash customer and raise his credit and save him money besides."

The salesman went back, pleased to be the bearer of such joyful tidings of liberality in business.

"Well, sir," he said, "we've arranged about that present all right. Here," with a flourish, "is your note. We give it back to you."

The customer did not seem enthusiastic. Instead, without looking at the note, he asked:

"Is it indorsed?"

"No," said the salesman in astonishment.

"Then I guess you better gimme the suspenders," said the disappointed customer.—Chicago News.

HOW A HORSE GALLOPS.

The Natural Way and the Conventional Pose in Art.

How does a horse gallop? Owing to the rapidity of action it cannot be seen by the human eye. However, just as the individual spokes of a rapidly revolving wheel can be made visible by a flash of lightning, so the action of a galloping horse can be and has been analyzed by instantaneous photography.

The statuette of Sysonby, the thoroughbred, has been made from photographs taken at the instant when all four legs are off the ground. The back is arched, the hind feet are directed forward, the fore feet backward, so [illegible] are tucked under the animal's body.

When the limbs again touch the ground the first to do so is one of the hind feet, which is thrust far forward so as to form an acute angle with the line of the body and thus serve the purpose of a spring in breaking the force of the impact of the hoof when the horse is going at top speed.

In the conventional mode of representing a galloping horse all four legs are off the ground at once, but the front pair are extended backward in such a way that the undersurfaces of their hoofs are directed skyward, the body being at the same time brought near the ground. This [illegible] a dog running, when the front and hind pairs of legs are respectively extended forward and backward, with the soles of the hind feet turned upward.

This pose, it is thought, was adopted to represent the gallop of the horse by the goldsmiths of Mycenae between [illegible] and 1100 B. C., whence it was transmitted by way of Persia and Siberia to China and Japan, to return in the eighteenth century as the result of commercial relations to western Europe.—Chicago Tribune.

The Earwig.

There is no insect which has puzzled naturalists as to its proper classification more than the earwig. Some have asserted that it belongs to the beetles, of which it is an "aberrant type;" others that it is connected with the grasshoppers. Even about its very name there has been endless discussion. Some have thought the name earwig is the result of the creature's supposed habit of getting into the ears, while others are equally certain that it is derived from the original name which they say was earwing, from the fact that the wing when spread resembles the human ear. At all events, one thing is certain—the earwig as we know it now is a survival of an early type of which almost every other member has become extinct.

"Now, children, choose one hymn to finish up with, and then you must all say 'Good night.'"

"Let's have 'Here Again Our Sabbath Close,'" suggested a bright little girl of about seven years of age.

"Well, I think that would be more suitable tomorrow evening," replied [illegible]

ECONOMY in HIRED LABOR

"Off for the office and the factory to bring in $5 per week."

"Our girls have higher ideals than housework."

THE fourth of a series of articles on the necessities for economy in the time of high prices is presented today. Previous articles were: "A Stubborn Fact," written with a view to awakening housekeepers to the present necessities for economies, "Economy in Buying" and "Economy in Cookery."

Marion Harland will welcome letters and suggestions from readers of these articles. Every idea may be a help to some one who wants help.

IF I were required to indicate the chief source of wastefulness in the average American household, I should say, without hesitation, "The Hired Domestic."

The reason there[illegible] is patent. It is older than the Christian era. "Whose own the sheep are not." The principle of self preservation informs human motive. It would be folly to expect the hireling to take as good care of our possessions as we do. This is especially true in a country where she is a recognized nomad, here today and nobody knows where tomorrow. A high order of conscientiousness is needed to move one to absolute fidelity to neighbor and employer. And the antecedents of our paid employe do not tend to the cultivation of the finer virtues.

[illegible] the blame of extravagant mismanagement of our property and finances upon the foreign peasant or the descendant of an enslaved race whom we have promoted to a place upon our domestic staff.

The monumental fact stands fast that she is the most expensive of modern luxuries. A stranger to the responsibilities of the property owner, she knows little and cares less for the value of what has cost the employer more money than she has ever seen in her life. How could it be otherwise? A pearl [illegible] that family silver [illegible] the mind of Bridget [illegible] gaudy plated ware she gets by hoarding trading stamps stripped from the soap her mistress [illegible] Like ignorance of values, fostered by the sight of [illegible] that is wealth to her unaccustomed eyes, makes her leave the cake of soap to melt in the tub or dishpan when there is a [illegible] in the storeroom.

But why waste time and space in [illegible] what is an ever present and fretting [illegible] Each of us knows that her servants [illegible] more than their nominal wages [illegible]

[illegible] aim especially to reach families where the daughters have sought situations in offices, shops and factories, leaving the mothers to the mercies of third-rate maids-of-all-work. Call the class, if you will, by the apt title we learned last week from a clever magazine article, "The half way poor." The father's income provides house rent, food, fuel, and plain clothing. Florence and Gladys would dress better than the family means warrant. They are fond of a "good time" and don't fancy gallery seats at the theater and, above all, they like to have money of their very own to spend as they please and no questions asked.

[illegible]

Since I began to reflect seriously upon the subject of this paper I have made it my business to collect data as to the number of young women engaged in shops, offices and mills who are eking out the family income by their labor, and whose parents find the addition to what is made by the men of the household welcome and even necessary to a comfortable maintenance. My conclusion, after consultation with employers, superintendents and [illegible] is that, at the lowest computation, one-fifth of these are thus employed from choice rather than from necessity. I have given a summary of the motives that lead them to prefer this kind of work to remaining at home and taking part in domestic duties.

BIG EVENT ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Dramatic Society Puts on "A Brace of Partridges"

Everyone is anticipating the play "A Brace of Partridges," Friday evening by the Vermilion Dramatic Society and judging by the sale of seats to date there will be an overflow house to greet them. Those who have delayed securing seats are advised to procure them at once or they are likely to be disappointed. The committee have extra attractions to announce, arrangements having been successfully completed to have an orchestra in attendance and they have as well engaged Miss Bessie Pilkie, soprano to render solos between acts. With these additions to the programme the public are doubly assured a treat and more than full value for their money.

When the efforts put forth by the Society are considered and the objects of their endeavors, which are charitable, the hall should be filled to the doors on Friday night.

Chapter 26

As the sound of steps in the ... corridor and the harsh grating of the key in the lock, Harry rose hastily from the iron cot whereon he had been sitting and ... forward.

"Jessica!" he exclaimed.

She ... toward him, her breath hurried, her cheek pale. ...

"I had not been here an hour when he came," he said.

"I know you have no money," she went on. "I know what you did with the gold you found. And I have begged him to let me pay for any other counsel he will name. I have not told him—what I am to you, but I have told him that I am far from poor and that nothing counts beside your life. He says you have forbidden him to do this —forbidden him to allow any help from any one. Hugh, Hugh! Why do you do this? The money should be yours, not mine, for it was your father's! ..."

...

"Look! Look!" The sudden cry went up, and a thrill of awe ran through the crowd. The glass Hugh had shattered had formed the face of the penitent thief in the window design, and his outstretched arms fitted those of the figure. It was as though by some ghastly miracle the painted features had suddenly sprung into life, the haggard eyes opened in appeal.

... at once there came a shout of warning. The wall spread outward, tottered and fell.

Then it was that they saw the writhing figure tangled in the twisted lead bars of the wrecked fane window. Shielding their faces from the unendurable heat, they reached and tore it to safety, laying it on the crisp, snowy grass and tearing off the singed and smoking ... robes.

Judge Cotswold was one of these. In the flaring confusion he leaned over the figure. The gleam of the ruby ring on the finger caught his eye. He bent forward to look into the drawn and distorted face.

"Good God!" he said. "It's Harry Sanderson!"

(To be continued.)

MODISH MATTERS.

Muffs of Various Shapes and Materials That Are New This Winter.

The cub bear is the newest muff in the furrier's shops. It is large, round in shape and is made of the pelt of the young bear.

Muffs will be carried earlier this year than usual, but they will be of chiffon, silk and marabou or combinations of all three. The smartest are built of cumbersome frills of chiffon, and some of the muffs have marabou edgings, and on other models lace the color of the chiffon is used.

Laurel is one of the new shades of green used by the milliners. A brilliant red is combined with the green, and the two colors make handsome button ornaments for small hats.

A chic one piece dress seen recently was of navy blue serge made with a long waist and short plaited skirt. The trimming consisted of bias folds of plaid silk which edged the waist ...

WHAT IS WORN.

Up to Date Girls Are Wearing Bows on Their Stockings.

Some very up to date girls are wearing tiny bows of ribbon set about two inches apart all the way up the fronts of their stockings instead of having the hose embroidered. The more conservative have the bows of the same color as the stocking, but occasionally there is seen a pair in which the ribbons contrast in color.

Maize colored taffeta forms a captivating motor bonnet. The silk is laid in plaits over a frame in the shape of a Dutch bonnet, completely covering the head at the sides and in the back. A long scarf of ivory chiffon is wound loosely around it, held in the center front by a big oblong buckle covered with taffeta and tying below the chin.

The fad for stenciling has extended as far as the children's wardrobe, and mothers of young children are decorating the hems of skirts, yokes, collars, etc., with this artistic work.

Dog collars of velvet are especially pretty when embroidered in tiny rosebuds and flowers or a spray of foliage in natural colors.

A LONG KIMONO.

CHIC STYLES.

Some of the Season's Attractive Colors. Soutache Popular.

Maroon blue and currant red are two new colors. Eolienne and semitransparent cloths are particularly beautiful in these shades. Dull pink, a tone that is not really pink, but so called by costumers, is very much used both in the dressmaking and millinery worlds.

Soutache, and still more soutache, is the dressmakers' cry. Braids upon braids circle and outline and finish velvet, cloth, chiffon and tulle—in fact, braid is combined quite impartially with heaviest cloth or thinnest gauze.

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected, It soon reaches the Lungs and may Prove Fatal.

Mr. G. L. Carrow of 116 Millicent St., Toronto, wrote under date of September 13, 1908, "One year ago this spring I contracted a severe cold in the chest, which developed into Bronchitis. I took three kinds of medicine and found no improvement. A friend of mine advised me to try PSYCHINE and in three days I felt like a new man again. I desire to let others know what a valuable cure you have in PSYCHINE for it cured me when all other medicines had failed. A Woman's Time to Dress.

"A correctly-gowned woman cannot dress herself in less than one hour and a half."

Mme. Marguerite Sylva, the prima donna, thus sets the feminine sartorial time with finality.

A well-groomed woman allows:
Fifteen minutes for a bath.
Ten minutes to adjust corsets and underwear.
Fifteen minutes to go over the face with a light massage and powder.
Fifteen minutes at least to arrange the hair.
Ten minutes to adjust the hat.
Twenty-five minutes being all that is left in which to arrange the outer costume.—Kansas City Star.

For Sprains and Bruises.—There is nothing better for sprains and contusions than Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. It will reduce the swelling that follows a sprain, will cool the inflamed flesh and draw the pain as if by magic. It will take the ache out of a bruise and prevent the flesh from discoloring. It seems as if there was magic in it, so speedily does the injury disappear under treatment.

A LADY'S MEMOIRS.

Countess of Cardigan's Book Causes a Sensation.

No book of recent years has created such a sensation in London as the "Recollections" of the Countess of Cardigan, which have just been published. It is the main topic of conversation in the boudoirs of Mayfair and the West end clubs. It has been characterized as a "volume of blazing indiscretions," and consternation reigns among the elite on account of her ladyship's very frank revelations concerning members of their families. There is no attempt to disguise names, and the annoyance and pain which have been caused by the piquant character of the stories told by the countess have led to many protests against the manner in which she has raised the veil and exposed the immoralities and wickedness of "high society."

"I repeat emphatically," says a writer in The World, "that this is a shameless book. I cannot conceive that the authorities are so feeble and so indifferent as to permit of this book remaining on sale. I call upon them instantly to withdraw it from circulation."

Meantime, while the storm of indignation is raging, the countess has retired into the country to enjoy the sensation she has raised. As a matter of fact, it was her original intention, it is said, to make the book even more outspoken than it is. In the heyday of her charms she counted among her followers royal as well as aristocratic admirers. From these she received countless love-letters, which she treasures as souvenirs of bygone triumphs. It was her intention, so the report goes, to include in her book facsimiles of billets-doux from high-born personages, some of whom are still living. When an inkling of her proposal leaked out, however, strong representations were made to the countess from very high quarters, and in the end she consented to omit certain epistles.

Here are some tit-bits from a book which will be talked about for a long time.

The countess resided in Mayfair at a time when, as she wittily puts it, "society was composed of brilliant men and witty women, beauties and dandies who held sway without puffing paragraphs in the newspapers." ...

"Hey, ya' Gid! What fo' yo' want to look in dat jug fo'? Can't you git the cork out?"

"Tain't no cork in. Say, Mingo," broke off Gid, perplexedly, "how come can the darkness in this yah jug keep the light from going in at the hole?"

"Taint that way," was the knowing reply. ...—Success Magazine.

"John, if you don't do something for that cold of yours you'll be down sick with a fever. That's just the way with you. You let a cold run on and on, and never pay any attention to it, and the first thing you know you are flat on your back. I've told you a thousand times that you ought to take better care of yourself, but it doesn't do any good. What you need is a—"

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended.

It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of the company ... develop the sheep raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and ... to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted.

The value of this discovery ... by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $...

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear.

Drew the Crowd

"The Bonnie Brier Bush" drew a splendid audience Monday night all the available seats in the assembly hall being occupied. It was played under the auspices of the Fire Brigade of the town.

This Scotch comedy drama combines several of Ian McLaren's best known stories of life in Drumtochty and delighted the large audience, especially our Scotch populace, full as it is of the atmosphere of the thistle, the heather and "Dear old Scotland." The play is wonderfully true to life in its delineation of Scotch character, where the Calvinistic doctrines of redemption and damnation are lived up to so closely that domestic ties are apt to become sacrificed on what the "guid," consider the altar of religious duty.

TUESDAY NIGHT DECEMBER 21 ST

District Court Sitting

The regular sittings of the District Court opened in the Town Hall on the 9th inst. presided over by His Honor Judge Taylor. The docket was very light. Only one criminal case was heard the prisoner pleading guilty to the charge of stealing a coat and getting three months. The case of Vermilion Creamery vs Oren Haker, for call on stock, was opened, but was adjourned for evidence on behalf of the defendant. Murray & Ebbett for plaintiff and C. L. Freeman for defendant.

Heslup vs. Davis, conversion of hay was decided in favor of plaintiff who got damages to the amount of $...

R... vs. ...lore, resulted in judgment for plaintiff for $131.00, some $40 less than his claim.

Ferguson vs. Beesch, for interest ... was also given to plaintiff. Mr C. L. Freeman, Vermilion, represented the successful parties in these three ones.

Besides the local members of the Bar present were W. Carbert, Esq., representative of the Attorney General and Mr Russell son of Mr Justice Russell of Halifax and a member of the firm of Morrison and Russell, Vegreville.

The next sitting is in March.

Mrs M Sullivan and Miss Genevieve Sullivan of Vermilion are visiting Mrs Harry Sullivan, Edmonton.

... rehearsed for six weeks. On the first night nothing went wrong but the piece. There was not one laugh nor one round of applause from start to finish. We took off the comedy in ten days, during which we rehearsed as a stop gap a conventional three act farce with no literary pretensions. I think it ran for a year."

Queer About the Eyes.

Prince Troubetskoy, the artist, once painted in Paris the portrait of an American who was cross eyed. The painter thought a great deal about the matter and finally made his picture cross eyed, too, so that it should be a faithful likeness.

When it was done, the original looked at it and said:

"It seems to me—it seems—why, hang it, this picture is cross eyed, isn't it?"

"Why, no more than you are, sir," said Prince Troubetskoy.

"Well, perhaps you're right," murmured the American. "It seems to have a queer look about the eyes, though."

Her Fathomless Eyes.

It was the hermit Thoreau, whose mistress was wood and stream, who wrote: "The lover sees in the glance of his beloved the same beauty that in the sunset paints the western skies. It is the same diamond here lurking under a human eyelid and there under the closing eyelids of the day. Here, in small compass, is the ancient and natural beauty of evening and morning. What loving astronomer has ever fathomed the ethereal depths of the eye?"

Cause and Effect.

La Montt—Children are so much worse than they used to be. What do you attribute it to?

La Moyne—Improved ideas in building.

La Montt—What has that to do with it?

La Moyne—Much. Shingles are scarce, and you can't spank a boy with a tin roof.

Hard Work.

"I suppose you have heard about young Chumley? He is very seriously ill as a result of overwork."

"You don't say so! What has he been doing to bring it about?"

"Trying to collect his thoughts."

Giving Him a Chance.

Master Pickles—I think that if I went out of the room Mr Spooner would kiss you, Ada.

Miss Pickles (sternly)—Leave the room this instant, you impertinent boy!

It is a lot of fun being in love if a man doesn't care if he saves any money or holds his job.

A NOBLEMAN'S WEALTH.

How the Duke of Buccleuch Came by His Money.

There are not wanting those who assert that the "Bold Buccleuch," the founder of the wealth owned by the family today, was a [illegible] Buccleuch, in fact that he was nothing more or less than a raider who acquired cattle and land by might, without a thought of right. They were stirring times in which he lived, however, and he was no worse, if no better, than hundreds of other [illegible] noblemen who made [illegible] upheld their King by warfare and obtained rewards as best [illegible].

[illegible] can be said for the [illegible] of the family he never lacked [illegible] Sir Walter [illegible] he carried on a [illegible] warfare against the English and [illegible] of a peaceful [illegible] between Queen Elizabeth [illegible] was sent to England [illegible] the latter. When [illegible] the haughty [illegible] demanded of [illegible] dared to kill so many [illegible] that for once the proud Queen met her match, for the [illegible] "What is there [illegible] not do?" Struck by [illegible] turned to a lady-in-waiting and said, "With ten thousand such men our brother of Scotland might shake the firmest throne in Europe." The "brother" alluded to, of course, was James VI., who, on becoming James I. of Great Britain, lost little time in making Sir Walter Lord Scott of Buccleuch for his gallant deeds.

This was in 1606, and it was the first of a long list of titles which was subsequently to come to the Buccleuchs. Much land had been acquired by the bold Buccleuch in [illegible], Berwick, Selkirk and Dumfries, but it was not until [illegible] that the head of the family was created a duke. The story of how [illegible] came to him makes interesting reading. In 1651 Francis of Buccleuch [illegible] leaving two daughters, Mary and Anna, Mary being the [illegible] four years. The latter died, however, and Anna, who as heiress [illegible] Buccleuch estate was regarded as a great matrimonial prize, was [illegible] legitimate son of [illegible] had created him Duke of Monmouth.

[illegible] after the marriage the King [illegible] the Duke of Monmouth Duke of Buccleuch, with the Earldom of [illegible] and although he was afterwards executed for rebellion the titles were unaffected, being held jointly by his wife, and came to her descendants.

It was by the marriage of Francis, second Duke of Buccleuch to the daughter and heiress of the Duke of Queensberry that the immense estates of Dumfries, amounting at the present time to 253,514 acres, were acquired by the Buccleuch family. Other acres were acquired by fortunate marriages, until the total swelled to close on 460,000, which is the number of acres owned by the Duke of Buccleuch at the present time. The annual rental of his estates is £230,401, of which amount £43,630 is derived from the English estates.

The Vogue of the Farthing.

Farthings were not, at one time, regarded so contemptuously as they are by most people to-day.

Since the Budget perturbed publicans and brewers, the retailers of beer in many places have experienced some difficulty in levying the extra farthing for the half pint on poor people's drinks, because of the aversion in which the smallest coin in the realm is held by the masses of our day.

But in the fourteenth century the London innkeeper was compelled, by order of the Lord Mayor, to supply farthing's-worths of drink to any customer who asked to be served therewith.

John Northampton was the chief magistrate who made the ordinance, and he enforced consideration for the farthing on the baker also, who was obliged to make farthing's-worths of bread to the poor. The priest, too, was not allowed to charge more than a farthing for a mass to his humble flock.

Supplies of farthings were obtainable at the London Guildhall, and, furthermore, if change could not be given by innkeeper or baker, any customer was privileged to take his drink or his bread, and leave without paying.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

THE LONGEST WORD.

A Short Cut to Some English Claimants to the Honor.

This moot point has never been satisfactorily settled. About 1870 The Liverpool Daily Courier came out with a new word of gargantuan dimensions, "velocipedestrianisticalistinamongtal."

An Edinburgh journal followed with "ultramicestablishmentarianists," an extension of Archbishop Benson's previous "antidisestablishmentarian," given in his diary.

A junction might be effected if one is anxious to see a friend carried out in a state of collapse (to the refreshment room) that a good long word is "ultraantidisestablishmentarianists" (only thirty-three letters).

Then there is another short jawbreaker, "antitransubstantiationistically," which appeared in a highland paper. It is highland enough in all conscience.

Sir Walter Scott has in his journal a word, "floccipaucinihilipilification," which, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.

Then Rabelais takes some doing with his [illegible]

Wynkoun in his Chronicle supplies us with "honorificabilitudinitatibus," which Shakespeare uses in "Love's Labor's Lost" (twenty-seven letters). Dante also has it in the ablative singular form in his "De Vulgari Eloquentia."

Byfield in a treatise on the Colossians (1615) wrote "incircumscriptibleness."

But the Englishman's real jawbreaker is a Welsh word over which Mr. Justice Lawrence once at the Anglesey assizes asked an explanation from Mr. Bryn Roberts, M.P., "What is the meaning of the letters 'P.G.' after the name Llanfair?" The answer was, "It is an abbreviation for the village of Llanfairpollgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch. How is this pronounced? It will take some beating. This word of fifty-four letters if repeated often enough is said to be an excellent cure for the toothache.

But the jocular man will tell us there are longer words, "smile" and "beleaguered," for instance, because [illegible]

Parted hair is becoming

Coiffures for the New Turbans

THE newest turban is a dangerous thing to woman's good looks if her hair be not correctly arranged. Indeed, in this age, when details are considered as important as the whole, you can no more adjust a hat without arranging your hair [illegible] than you would think of disregarding the gown with which you wear it.

The new turbans are not small. They [illegible] back and [illegible] require a soft, fluffy arrangement of hair which will [illegible] the line [illegible] waves from [illegible] to the nape of neck. They are not unreasonable in their demand for any special [illegible]

[illegible]

In another coiffure long braids are used with success. The hair is parted and braided at the back. Then it is wound in circles at the back of the head extending far out and supplying the bulk which fills in the space under [illegible] without a net.

[illegible] turbans [illegible] showing the round line of velvet, silk or fur. This coiffure gives just enough support without allowing the brim to settle too far down on the head.

Then again, parted hair can be used with beautiful results. It is quite full and must have sufficient breadth at the sides to fill the space beneath the hat.

When dressing hair to fit your turbans be not neglect the back. I have known women [illegible] spend much time on the front of their hair [illegible] the aid of using a hand glass to give just as much attention to the back. As many people view the sides and back as the front [illegible] that there is [illegible] Marie Antoinette in the front and Mary Ann in the back [illegible] The hair can be arranged in coils and a [illegible] the coiffure.

Let us not be of those thoughtless women who will sail along the shopping streets with turbans which appear to be held up [illegible] the class who will bolster up the velvet shape until it rises [illegible] far above the face. If a turban is to be one of your new [illegible] remember that the coiffure underneath [illegible] a beautiful effect in headdress.

C. P. R. REVENUE OVER $100,000,000

Gross Earnings of Railway for Year Exceeds Total Revenue of Canada by $5.000 000

Montreal, Dec. 20th—It was today estimated by the finance officers of the Canadian Pacific to say that the gross revenue of the system for the calendar year would amount to over $100,000,000 or about $5,000,000 in excess of the revenue for the Dominion for the current fiscal year, which was estimated by the Hon. W. S. Fielding in his budget speech at $95,000,000. The estimate while only approximate, since the year is not ended, is based on the earnings to date, with the probable takings for the balance of the year, based on last years figures.

The earnings published monthly include the railway system, with the Lake steamships, etc., but not the takings of the Atlantic and Pacific railways, the hotel system, etc.

The earnings as shown will amount to $85,000,000 by the end of the year and when the total is added to the gross takings of the two ocean steamship services, hotels, telegraphs, etc., it is estimated that the takings will equal $100,000,000.

A sign of the confidence of the British people in the Canadian Pacific railway is shown in the fact that although payments on the recent issue of $30,000,000 stock are not due until January, large sums are already pouring in from the old country.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY DELIGHT LARGE AUDIENCE

Play Well Rendered and A Great Success From All View Points

That [illegible] the efforts and [illegible] of the Vermilion Dramatic Society were fully appreciated was evidenced by the splendid house which greeted them Friday night in the Assembly Hall, and each member of the Society has every reason to feel satisfied with the enthusiastic reception accorded the actors throughout the entire rendering of their excellent play "A Brace of Partridges".

The play was one well calculated to bring into action the best abilities of the performers and without an exception each one excelled in their parts. The complications caused by the dual personality (in resemblance) of the Hon. Authur Partridge and Alfred Partridge round which the play centres, held profound attention and the double part was well carried out by R. J. Dunsmore, who showed rare ability. Spiffins, the inimitable G. C. Dunsmore, provoked much mirth and played a leading role. Lord and Lady Wallerton, in the persons of Frank Baker and Miss E. M. Hayward, ably sustained their characters. Col. Rackett, in Ken Miller, showed the keen business man. Stubbs, landlord of the Red Lion, was filled to perfection by [illegible], and Miss Beth Witherlee, as his daughter Peggy the heroine of the play won [illegible] plaudits on her remarkable carrying out of her part. Chapter 27

IN communities such as Smoky Mountain the law moves with fateful rapidity. Harry had been formally arraigned the second morning after his self surrender and had pleaded not guilty. The grand jury was in session—indeed, had about finished its labors—and there had been no reason for delay. All necessary witnesses for the state were on the ground, and Felder for his part had no others to summon. So that when Dr. Brent one late forenoon swung himself off a Pullman at the station, returning from his two days' absence, he found the town thrilling with the excitement of the first day of the trial. Before he left the station he had learned of Prendergast's death and accusation and knew that Tom Felder had come to the prisoner's defense. Dr. Brent had taken no stock in the young lawyer's view of Hugh Stires.

He betook himself to the filled courtroom. The court had opened two hours before and half the jury had been [illegible] edge of the prisoner. The close of this chapter had been Prendergast's dismal end in the gulch when he had produced the scrap of paper which was the crux of the case. He declared he had found Moreau dying, that the latter had traced with his own hand the accusation which fastened the crime upon Hugh Stires.

In his cross examination Felder fought gamely to lighten the weight of the evidence. All rested, he said, upon a single scrap of paper, a fragment of handwriting in no way difficult of imitation, and this in turn upon the allegation of a thief, struck down in an act of crime, whose word in an ordinary issue of fact would not be worth a farthing. No motive had been alleged for the killing of Moreau by the prisoner, but Prendergast had had motive enough in his accusation. It had been upon knowledge that he hated Hugh Stires, and his own character made it evident that he would not have scrupled to fasten a murder upon him.

But as Felder studied the twelve grave faces in the jury box, who in the last analysis were all that counted, he shared his client's hopelessness. Judgment and experience told him how futile were all theories in the face of that inarticulate but damning witness that Prendergast had left behind him. So the afternoon dragged through, a [illegible] a circle of brightness. The glimmer of one of them lit the countenance of a man who had brushed her sleeve as he entered. It was Hallelujah Jones.

"Wait, wait!" he cried. "I have evidence to give!" He pointed excitedly toward Harry. "This man is not what you think. He is not"—

The judge's gavel thumped upon the wood. "How dare you," he vociferated, "break in upon the deliberations of this court? I fine you $20 for contempt."

Felder had leaped to his feet. What could this man know? He took a bill from his pocket and clapped it down on the clerk's desk.

"I beg to purge him of contempt," he said, "and call him as a witness."

Hallelujah Jones snatched the Bible from the clerk's hands and kissed it. Knowledge was burning his tongue. The jury were leaning forward in their seats.

"Have you ever seen the prisoner before?" asked Felder.

"Yes."

"When?"

"When he was a minister of the gospel."

Felder stared. The judge frowned. The jury looked at one another, and a laugh ran round the hushed room.

The merriment kindled the evangelist's distempered passion. Sudden anger flamed in him. He leaned forward and shook his hand vehemently at the table where Harry sat, his face as crimson as the flower he wore.

"That man's name," he blazed, "is not Hugh Stires. It is a cloak he has chosen to cover his shame. He is the Rev. Henry Sanderson of Aniston."

. . . .

Harry's pulses had leaped with excitement when the street preacher's first exclamation startled the courtroom, now they were beating as though they must burst. Through the stir about him he heard the crisp voice of the district attorney:

"I ask your honor's permission before this extraordinary witness is examined [illegible]

STEALING CHILDREN.

[illegible]

Perhaps the most amazing feature of the kidnapping cases which have engaged the attention of the police in England recently is that, in a number of instances where women were the culprits, the real cause of the offence has been traced, not to any desire on the part of the kidnapper to injure the stolen child, gain money, or seek revenge on the parents, but merely to the fact that they had been so attracted by the youngster as to be unable to resist the temptation of taking it away.

is certainly one of the most disagreeable ailments which flesh is heir to. Coated tongue—bitter taste in the mouth—nausea dizziness—these combine to make life a burden. The cause is a disordered liver—the cure Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. John D. Rockefeller gets 1,000 begging letters a day. He said of these letters recently:

"They are rather annoying. They are so persistent, you know. They remind me of a schoolboy's episode.

"A Standard Oil young man went to the seashore for his two weeks' vacation. He put up at a cottage. He paid about $9 a week.

"Well, when he came to depart, this young man said to the boarding mistress:

"'Madam, you have been most attentive to me during my stay here.'

"'Thank you, sir, thank you very much,' said the lady.

"'Yes,' continued the young man, 'you have been most attentive, and not only you, but everybody, everything in this house, if I may say so, has been most persistently attentive day and night; and, madam, to show my appreciation I am going to offer you a small present.'

"'How very kind,' said the landlady, and a bright expectant smile lit up her face. Then the young man thrust into her extended hand a packet of insect powder and retired hastily."

Australia Produces Fine Wool For the Whole World.

There were sheep before Australia was known of, just as there were brave men before Agamemnon, but the fine wool sheep of to-day is practically an Australian production—one might almost say invention.

Australia started its national life as a reformatory. With the "First Fleet" of prisoners and their guards there went a few sheep. Unlike the human exiles, they were not sent out for reformation. Yet they were destined to found practically a new race of sheep, vastly more valuable than any that had gone before them.

The picked rams of the First Fleet would yield about 3 1-2 pounds of coarse wool. The picked ram of a first-class Australian stock to-day yields up to 40 pounds of fine wool, and the average yield of a decent flock is eight pounds per sheep. With this great increase in quantity there has been an even greater growth of quality. Australian merino wool is finer, more elastic, longer in staple than any wool ever dreamed of a century ago, and its production alone makes possible some of the exquisite fabrics which display the triumphant luxury of modern civilization.

Nearly 90,000,000 sheep are pastured in Australia to-day, and the pastoral industry brings to Australia's population of between four and four and a half millions some $125,000,000 a year more than $25 a year for every man, woman, and child.

Of much more than Australian moment was the growth of this grand wool industry. It gave to England a new source of wealth. Before the days of Australia, Spain was looked upon as the only country in the world which could produce fine wool. Spain of that day was not willing that British looms should have any advantage of her production, and the British woollen manufacturing industry, confined to the use of coarser staples, languished.

MAGISTRATE SPEAKS FOR ZAM-BUK

Magistrate Perry, of Goldfields, B.C., believes in making a good thing known. Writing of Zam-Buk, the great household balm, he says:—"After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years' standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in his home." The magistrate is quite right. Every home needs Zam-Buk! Unequalled for cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, blood poisoning and all skin diseases. All stores and druggists sell it at 50 cents a box. CHRISTMAS [illegible] years which have passed ... then may somewhat deaden the fresher feelings of our younger days, but there are few who have no welcome for Christmas. It is anticipated with all the old ... other stockings hang from the bedposts as of old, and innocent, young faces, await in expectancy, the mysterious visit of Santa Claus. All the familiar festivities of the happy season are enjoyed, though bright and loving faces of other days are no longer near. It is the same old happy Christmastide, though hearts may be somewhat changed, and the same theme—a Saviour's Bithday—is the true joy of Christmas.

Canada's Forests

Progress of Forestry Work During 1908-1909

The work of the Forest Service of [illegible]

Protection of the Forests from Fire

[illegible] the Spray valley fire the carelessness of tourists is responsible. By the B... fires 200,000 feet, board measure of timber was destroyed and 10,000,000 feet damaged. The Spray valley fire burned about 3,000,000 feet of timber.

The total number of rangers employed during the season of 1908 was 92, as compared with 47 during the season of 1907. A special patrol was maintained along the line of the G. T. P. and no serious fire occurred there. Additional rangers were employed north of the Pas in the country north of Prince Albert and on the Peace and Great Slave rivers. Despite this extension, however, there is the most pressing need of protecting the forests of the great Northern Forest Belt, a district reaching from Hudson Bay to the Rocky Mountains (a distance 1,000 miles) and from 300 to 600 miles wide, there is also great need of the same along the many lines of railway projected into the northern country.

Forest Surveys.

The need of a survey of the Northern Forest Belt is also dwelt upon. All this area is more or less forested and the forest is of great value for local consumption. While along certain lines of travel the country has been explored large areas are entirely unknown and more definite knowledge of these is imperative in order to secure its proper administration and management. Mr. Campbell calculates that an exploration of this forest belt, similar to the one made in 1900 by the Ontario government of the northern part of the province, could be made for $[illegible], an annual expenditure of $[illegible].

Timber surveys on the reserves were continued during 1908 and the surveys of about 1,200,000 acres out of the 10,000,000 acres on the reserves completed. The results are rather discouraging, inasmuch as the reserves are found to be in poor condition as a result of fire and careless cutting. Plans of administration for the reserves, based on the results of these surveys, are now being prepared.

The Forest Reserves

A full list of the forests reserves, with their areas, dates of setting aside and other particulars is given in the report of the Inspector of Forest Reserves, Mr. A. Knechtel. The survey of the Riding Mountain reserve has been completed, and the results have been published as a separate bulletin (Bulletin No. 6, "The Riding Mountain Forest Reserve). A reconnaissance survey of "The Pines" forest reserve near Prince Albert, Sask., was also made in the summer of 1908, the result of which was published in an appendix to the report. Appendix No. 2, [illegible] H. R. MacMillan, Asst. In[spector] of Forest Reserves [illegible]

[illegible] The fence around Buffalo Park has been satisfactorily completed, it is seventy four miles long, nine feet in height and composed of fourteen strands of wire. The St. Lawrence Park reservation consisting of eleven islands and a small peninsula on the St. Lawrence between Brockville and Gananoque (formerly the property of the Mississauga Indians) is also administered by this department.

Fire notices have been printed in Cree and Chipewyan and a facsimile of one of these is appended to the report, together with a translation.

Copies of the report, as well as those of the bulletins referred to above, may be obtained free by addressing R. H. Campbell, Superintendent of Forestry, Ottawa.

At the End of the Quest.

It was a dark night. A man was riding a bicycle with no lamp. He came to a crossroads and did not know which way to turn. He felt in his pocket for a match. He found but one. Climbing to the top of the post, he lit the match carefully and in the ensuing glimmer read, "Wet Paint."—Argonaut.

HERE IS THE CHANCE OF YOUR LIFE!

WHAT SHOOTING COSTS.

Huge Prices English Gentlemen Spend on Sport.

Right through the month of August in Great Britain the great stretches of eternal hill, empurpled with heather, tinselled with swift-running streams, and fringed with coppices of birch and alder, are overrun with companies of men in coarse homespun and thick-soled boots—barristers, members of Parliament, men of wealth and title, all of whom are wholly given over to the worship of St. Grouse.

Sport is the keynote of life in the North, and with the close of the Goodwood race meeting in the dying days of July the "Land of Cakes" becomes the land of dukes, for a large majority of the wearers of strawberry leaves settle in their castles and baronial mansions for the shooting season.

The art of making money out of the game on his estate was unknown to the Highland laird of sixty or seventy years ago. It was not until the late Earl of Dalhousie, who owned some 162,000 acres of land in Forfarshire, had planted 1,700,000 trees at a cost of $[illegible], with the result that the thirteen shootings they provided yielded a revenue of $[illegible] a year, that the Highland landowners made haste to follow his example.

This season Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, the American millionaire, who derives his wealth from banking and railway enterprises, has laid out about $50,000 upon the Holwick Hall grouse moor, Upper Teesdale, and has engaged more than 100 beaters. This is probably the largest sum ever spent by one man on a season's shooting.

How much money is spent by sportsmen on grouse shooting every year cannot be totalled to a penny, but it has been estimated that at least a million birds are shot between August and December at a cost of something like half a million pounds.

The Highlands possess to-day between 2,000 and 3,000 grouse moors, or shootings, Perthshire being par excellence the home of "the little bird of the red wing."

Some years ago the Duke of Sutherland cut the county of Sutherland, of which he is the virtual owner, into fifty-one shootings, with a gross rental of about $150,000 a year. The Duke of Westminster rented 118,000 acres from the Duke of Sutherland, for which he paid over $80,000 a year, in addition to another $1,000 for the right of fishing in the river Laxford.

While the lordly grouse is paying tribute on a thousand hilltops to the rich sportsman for the care and expense lavished upon him during the close season, the pretty deer are called upon to satisfy that bloodthirsty passion the French profess to abhor so much in the Britisher.

Shooting grouse is a costly pastime, but it is not half so costly as deer-stalking. In the third week of August the wealthy go after the deer and continue to do so until October the 12th. During the few weeks deer-stalking is permissible the money spent by the gunners for their sport runs into hundreds of thousands of pounds. Each stag costs the sportsmen anything from $150 to $200.

DESIGNS for LINEN FANCY WORK

THE powder-puff bag first, and the sweet little present it may become, if you will follow my directions and make it up in a jiffy, along with all the other little things of linen shown on the page. They will be the nicest sort of gifts, because they are all pure white; not only will they match the [illegible] rooms, no matter what their color schemes, but are they not all perfectly washable? This last is delightful to contemplate in view of the dusty fancy work one sees on every hand.

A Powder-Puff Bag.

Well, to make the little bag you will embroider the forget-me-nots in a solid over-and-over stitch, the leaves also solid, and the stems in the usual stem stitch. The shallow scallop you will run first with soft untwisted cotton and buttonhole in the usual way. The little ovals necessarily mean an eyelet hole to run with white washable ribbon (or satin, if it seems preferable to you). Now, in cutting out the bag allow a narrow hem at the bottom and a seam up each side; fell the seam together and make the narrowest possible hem along the bottom of the bag. On the extreme edge of the hem run a gathering thread, and dispose the gathers equally round the bottom of the bag, a pasteboard disk which you have covered on each side with white linen. The fastening together of bag and bottom piece is done in the finest overcasting stitch for durability. When the bag is drawn up with ribbons the present will be well worth giving and a delight to receive.

Envelope Jewel Case.

Here is a chance for a dainty little gift, as well as a most useful one, to your friend the traveler. She will wear it suspended from her neck by a ribbon—the white washable quality is necessary for this—slipped under the envelope flap and fastened in several places by the careful maker. The conventional design you will do in solid and stem stitch, filling in with eyelet holes in each of the little circles. The edge you will buttonhole in the way described above, and after cutting out the scallops you will turn it into envelope shape and tack the sides securely together. The flap, which falls over the pocket, is fastened down by a lace button and an embroidered loop.

Not alone are these cases welcomed by the woman who already knows their value, but by those who have never owned one, including the young girl given to losing her [illegible] and her large bills.

A Corset Sachet.

For this pretty little heart-shaped sachet, to slip into the front of your corset, between the steel and yourself, you will need a back exactly like the front, but without the flowers. You will embroider the bowknot in satin stitch and the wreath in solid and eyelet. The scallops follow the usual directions, and there will be no difficulty in tracing a scalloped piece for the back. These two you will fasten together, their wrong sides turned together, after you have filled the little case with a cotton pad sprinkled with sachet. [illegible]

A petition, of much importance to Vermilion and district, is being put in circulation and being signed almost unanimously. The petition is to be presented to the government, and among a great many other things prays that work on the bond guaranteed railway line, into the north, be undertaken next spring. The petition is a strong one in the right direction and may result in Vermilion coming into its own.

THORNCLIFFE FESTIVITIES

A Xmas tree and entertainment took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny on Christmas eve, when about forty people of the district assembled to spend a convivial evening together. Lunch was provided by the ladies. The tree was laden with all the good things old friend Santa Claus brings. The Thorncliffe S. D. choir, consisting of Mesdames Connelly, Emerson, Hodgins and Messrs Dodds, King, Emerson and Hodgins rendered the praise song very prettily.

Short addresses were delivered by Mr. W. A. Connelly and Mr. Emerson. Santa Claus was rather late in reaching the scene of festivity the bad roads in the Grizzly Bear coulee which have been a great detriment to the settlers for time past, having delayed him, however he arrived at 1.30 a. m. and distributed the presents. This was followed by a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Kenny for so kindly throwing open their home for the occasion.

The party broke up about 2.30 a. m. after singing "God Save the King" everyone having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The following programme was rendered;

CHANCELLOR'S CHALLENGE.

Lloyd-George's Method of Getting to His Audience's Heart.

Northern enthusiasm for the British budget found vigorous expression in Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mr. Lloyd-George delivered three speeches — two to crowded audiences in the Palace Theatre and the Drill Hall, and the third at a dinner given in his honor.

The typical representative of the mining population of Northumberland and Durham gave the Chancellor a rousing reception, and his speeches—particularly that at the Palace Theatre—roused the fighting spirit of his audience.

We give below some of the most lively and striking phrases from the Chancellor's speeches:—

A fully equipped duke costs as much to keep up as two Dreadnoughts. They are just as great a terror, and they last longer.

Most of the people who work hard for a living in this country belong to the Liberal party. Most of the people who never work for a living at all belong to the Tory party.

There are two classes who really detest the budget. The first are those who are seeking to establish a complete change in the fiscal system of th[illegible] and the second are the great landlords of the country.

The chief objection of the great landlords lies in the fact that the bill contains the Government's valuation proposals. Valuation goes to the very root of all things in the land question.

When I go to the landlords and ask for five per cent. they say, "You are a thief, you are worse, you are an attorney — worst of all, you are a Welshman." Well, they have got to stand the Welshman this time.

What will the Lords do? The more irresponsible and feather-headed want to throw out the budget. But what will the rest do? Poor Lord Lansdowne, with his creaky old ship and his mutinous crew, has got to sail through the narrows with one eye on the weather glass and the other on the forecastle.

EARLY to BED

"Obliged to bend over books till 11 o'clock."

"Let the bachelor uncle put himself through Dick's algebra lesson."

If Poor Richard did not write—

Early to bed and early to rise,
If you would be healthy and wealthy and wise"—

he might have been the author, so much does it resemble other of his cut-and-dried maxims. It belongs to the same school with—

He who by the plough would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive.

And—

When house and lands and gold are spent,
Then learning is most excellent.

One and all, they are founded upon sound common sense. If they bore us in the repetition, it is because they are such palpably self-evident truisms that nobody would trouble himself to dispute them.

Conservation of vital forces for the acquisition of health, wealth and wisdom is a necessity. And without sleep, and enough of it, the human creature is handicapped. We may excuse our neglect of this physical duty, an obligation as binding upon every intelligent being as the duty of cleanliness and eating digestible food, by flippant and shallow pleas. I wonder how many times I have had flung at me, when I have argued with the young upon the importance of this matter, "Six hours for a man, seven for a woman, eight for a fool." If I grow impatient at the unreason and banality of such talk, it is because I am so firmly convinced in my own mind that not one young man or woman in ten gets all the sleep the Creator intended that he or she should have in order to play aright his or her part in life.

[illegible]

The day has happily for the race, gone by when Laura Matilda feigned to live without eating, regarding hunger as a coarse and brutish sensation to which the ultra-refined "lady of high degree" should be a stranger from the cradle to the grave. Her granddaughter confesses to a fondness for the good things of life, including the pleasures of the table. Why she should cling to the affectation of being able to live and thrive upon four hours' sleep in the twenty-four remains a mystery.

It is to me as puzzling that her brother exploits his owlish habits as proofs of manliness. Where one young fellow avers that he had "a jolly night's sleep, never stirring from 11 P. M. to 7 A. M." after a hard day's work or play, forty boast of dancing or studying or supping or "having a good time generally" until 2 or 3 in the morning. A sensible, God-fearing householder told me in the hearing of his two sons, that, when he was in college and after he began the practice of his profession, he seldom undressed for bed three nights in the week.

"I would throw myself down in my evening toggery, too tired even to take off my necktie, and sleep until 6.30, when my alarm clock called me up. Then a bath and breakfast set me up for the day."

ALMOST CRIMINAL

He said it with quiet pride in the achievement. Don't ask me why he and hundreds of other men plume themselves upon the sin against the bodies committed to them as a sacred trust. It is low, I cannot attain unto it!

Sleep, and in abundant measure, is absolutely essential to the preservation of the proper balance of mental and physical powers. Ignorance of the cardinal truth is stupidity; disregard of it is a sin.

So much, and all too little, of the importance of this natural refreshment [illegible] adult. He requires it for recuperation of wasted energies, the unavoidable wear and tear of the working day or the round of exhausting pleasures. Our children have so much more to lose and to make up by sleep that neglect to insure long hours of healthful slumber for them is infanticide. In addition to the waste I have spoken of as common to all ages, they must make good the vigor expended in growth. We make too little account of the fearful drain upon the most robust child by this process of growth. We all recall the mortification we felt when, going to our elders with the complaint of racking pangs and tiresome aches in back and limbs, we were put off with, "Nothing but growing pains. Run along to play."

It may not hurt the child a the while to grow, although it does so often that he would seek relief from parent and ... frequently but for the dread of [illegible]. It pulls heavily upon his strength and with peculiar severity upon his nervous system. The [illegible] child is either undersized or he "runs up" with abnormal rapidity.

"He has outgrown his strength," we say [illegible]

IRRIGATED FARMING

The annual report of the Department of the Interior for 1909 has lately been published, and in it the Superintendent of Forestry gives some valuable information respecting the development of irrigated farming in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Particular mention is made of the larger irrigation projects, such as that of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which comprises a tract of some 1,000,000 acres lying along the Bow river eastward from Calgary, within which some 2,000,000 acres is believed to be irrigable at an approximate cost of [illegible] 000,000 another of these [illegible] the Southern Alberta Land Co. [illegible] [illegible] a system of canals for the irrigation of a large tract of land between the Bow and Belly rivers and in the vicinity of Medicine Hat. The Alberta Railway and Irrigation Company is referred to as the Pioneer Irrigation Company of Canada. Its canal system covers a large tract in the vicinity of Lethbridge, and irrigated farming has been one of the most important factors in the rapid development of that section. The company has already expended considerably over $1,000,000 on its canals.

The development of irrigated farming and the increasing demand for water power for domestic consumption and industrial purposes in the rapidly growing towns in Southern Alberta and southwestern Saskatchewan has made it necessary to undertake systematic measurements of streams [illegible] the volume [illegible]

HALLEY'S COMET

(Winnipeg Free Press)

From now on it is to be expected that reports of Halley's comet being seen by other than professional astronomers will become more frequent. It is rushing rapidly on its way in from outer space towards the centre of the solar system to which our world belongs and to which this Halley's comet also belongs, though in a different way. Through ordinary astronomical telescopes it will be seen for some time to come only as a small blur of light; but the blur will grow perceptibly larger week by week until it can be located with field glasses and opera glasses and later on by the unaided eye. The present calculations indicate that it will pass around the sun in April next and that in May it will be a conspicuous object in the night sky, a spectacle that will claim attention for several weeks as it hastens away again on its long journey into outer space not to return until another three quarters of a century has passed and human calendars are marked 1985.

The first glimpse of this comet on its present return was caught on September 11 last by a fortunate watcher of the skies, Professor Max Wolff, of Heidelberg University, who was on the lookout for it as astronomers have been every seventy-five years, speaking roughly, since 1759, sixteen years after Halley's death, when it made its appearance in verification of the calculations of that astronomer.

had been known. Perhaps every one at Anisson already knew of it, was reading about it, pitying her. She picked it up and scanned it hastily. There was no hint of the trial, but her eye caught the news which had played its role in the courtroom, and she read it to the end.

Even in her own trouble she read it with a shiver. Yet awful as the fate which Harry Sanderson had so narrowly escaped, it was not to be compared with that which awaited Hugh, [illegible] awful as it was. [illegible]

In a gust of feeling she slipped to her knees by the one sofa the room contained and prayed passionately. As she drew out her handkerchief to staunch the tears that came something fell with a musical tinkle at her feet. It was the little cross she had found in front of the hillside cabin that had lain forgotten in her pocket during the past anxious days. As she pressed it the ring at the top gave way, and the cross parted in halves. Words were engraved on the inside of the arms—[illegible] Henry Sanderson.

The recurrence of the name jarred and surprised her. Hugh had dropped it, an old keepsake of the friend who had been his boon ideal, his exemplar and whose ancient influence was still dominant. He had clung loyally to the [illegible] blind to his constant liking, [illegible] that friend had done him. She looked at the date. It was May [illegible]. She shuddered, for that was the month and day on which Dr. Moreau had been killed. The point had been [illegible] established today by the [illegible]. To the original owner of that cross perhaps the date that had come into Hugh's life with such a sinister meaning was a glad anniversary.

Suddenly she caught her hand to her cheek. A weird idea had rushed through her brain. The religious symbol had stood for Harry Sanderson, and the chance coincidence of date had irresistibly pointed to the murder. To her excited senses the juxtaposition held a bizarre, uncanny suggestion. This cross, the very emblem of vicarious sacrifice! Suppose Harry Sanderson had never given it to Hugh! Suppose he had lost it on the hillside himself?

Christmas Presents FOR BROTHER

For reasons of sentiment and economy it is often preferable to fashion Christmas presents for brothers at home. A few suggestions are given for articles that combine the three qualities of attractiveness, usefulness and inexpensiveness.

There are lots of brothers who own phonographs who will be happy Christmas morning if they find that some member of the family has made them a holder for phonograph disks. This album is made slightly larger than a square that would hold a disk. Its pages are of heavy cardboard, and around each page is folded a sheet of heavy paper with a circular opening in the center of each fold. This provides a pocket on each side of the page in which a record disk can be kept.

ZAM-BUK ENDS YEARS OF PAIN.

Powerful Proofs of Its Healing Value.

As a household remedy, useful in emergencies such as are always arising in any home, and particularly where there are children, Zam-Buk is without equal. Here are some opinions of its merit:—

Mrs. Haliday, Wroxeter, Ont., says: "I have proved Zam-Buk unequalled for cuts, sores and diseases of the skin. In every case in which I have applied [illegible] it has brought about a cure, and I recommend it to all mothers."

Mrs. Cassie Petrie, Victoria Mines, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, says: "For a long time I suffered from pimples and unsightly spots on my face, and hearing so much about Zam-Buk, gave it a trial. It has now removed the eruption, and I would heartily recommend it for pimples and skin diseases."

Miss A. Bourque, Notre Dame, Kent County, N.B., says: "For months I suffered with a running sore on my leg, and although I tried several ointments and salves, none did me much good. The sore would just heal over, and then break out again. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and obtained a supply together with some Zam-Buk Soap. I carefully washed the sore, night and morning, with the Zam-Buk Soap, and then applied the balm. A [illegible] weeks of this treatment completely healed the sore."

Mr. Joseph Kostyuk, of Woodridge, Man., says: "I had eczema on my face, neck, and hand, so bad that I was unable to [illegible] my room. Several doctors failed to do me any good, although I spent large sums of money. Zam-Buk has effected what they failed to do, and I am now cured."

Zam-Buk is the finest-known cure for skin diseases and injuries. It heals cuts, burns, bruises, abscesses, ulcers, eczema, [illegible], bad leg, inflamed patches, [illegible] sores, insect stings, blisters, sore [illegible] etc. It also cures piles. PSYCHINE
PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY.

Will Break Up a Cold in Twenty-four Hours and Cure Any Cough That Is Curable.

The following mixture is often prescribed and is highly recommended for coughs, colds and other throat and bronchial trouble. Mix two ounces of Glycerine, a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure, and eight ounces of pure Whiskey. These can be bought in any good drug store and easily mixed together in a large bottle. The genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure is prepared only in the laboratories of the Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, and put up for dispensing in half-ounce vials.

Why He Was in Luck.

"It is the American characteristic to make the best of everything and to put up a smiling front in the face of fate's hardest blows," said Prof. I. M. Rutherford, of the University of California, according to the Baltimore American.

"I have thought that in this regard Americans were exceptional. Some of the richest humor in our literature is founded on this trait. A few days ago, as I came East on the Southern Pacific, in passing through a foreign-looking town in the desert I heard two men conversing as the train stopped for water.

"'Good-bye, Bill,' said one, 'I am leaving this burg with just one pair of pants, and not another thing on earth.'"

"'You are lucky, old pal,' replied Bill, 'that's more than anybody else ever took away from here.'"

The Beauty of a Clear Skin.—The condition of the liver regulates the condition of the blood. A disordered liver causes impurities in the blood and these show themselves in blemishes on the skin. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in acting upon the liver act upon the blood and a clear, healthy skin will follow intelligent use of this standard medicine. Ladies, who will fully appreciate this fine quality of these pills, can use them with the certainty that the effect will be most gratifying.

THE JAPANESE PRINTER.

He Has Troubles of His Own in His Composing-Room.

If the typesetters of the western world have their troubles they are as nothing compared with those of the Japanese composing-room.

The Japanese, like their brethren, the Chinese, employ a written language—what might be called a literary dialect—that is quite different from the colloquial tongue. In other words, they do not, as we, write as they speak. This proceeding requires the printing of their journals in two languages, the "kana" and the square characters serving as a key to the other. These square characters are modeled on Chinese ideographs, a jumble of geometric figures, crosses, etc., presenting a picturesque zigzag effect.

There are 4,000 or 5,000 of these ideographs in everyday use. The compositor must therefore be something of a scholar, in the oriental sense, to be able to recognize the characters at sight. In order to facilitate his task as much as possible the arrangement of his workroom is something like this:

The compositor seats himself at a little table, upon which are spread forty-seven Kana characters. As he receives copy he cuts it into small strips, handing each strip to a boy. This boy marches along the room until he has finally been able to collect from a number of cases arranged in files down the room the different ideographs desired. About six or seven boys are thus employed in the average Japanese composing room running hither and thither. As they go their rounds in search of the ideographs they keep up a dirgelike chant, which would certainly be very trying to the nerves of any but an oriental.

When the boys have collected all their ideographs they place them before the compositor, who then has recourse to a pair of goggles in order to decipher the characters, fish out the corresponding types in the Kana character and finally set up the whole for proving. The proofs are sung aloud by one reader to another, thus adding to the confusion of weird sounds already existing in the room.

CAUSE AND CURE OF NEURALGIA

Modern Methods Dispose of the Cause Instead of Treating the Symptoms.

Neuralgia means simply "nerve pain," so there may be a great variation in the character and intensity of the pain and any nerve in the body may be affected. There are a number of causes of neuralgia, but the most common is a general rundown condition [illegible]

When an undue amount of nervous energy is used in the brain there is certain to be failure in the other functions of the body.

WHAT every cook should know is, which wheat makes the best flour, and why.

Winter wheat is put into the ground in the fall, but does not ripen until the following July. It matures slowly, is soft and very starchy.

Spring wheat is sown in April or May, and ripens in August. It's a flinty, translucent wheat, rich in gluten and contains nearly twice as much nutriment as winter wheat.

Royal Household Flour

is made entirely from the hard, nutritious spring wheat, carefully selected from all the wheat of this kind grown in Canada.

Royal Household is fine, light and pure—milled by the most improved methods—in a mill as clean as your own kitchen.

HANDS COVERED WITH ECZEMA

"For three weeks I actually had to be fed like one feeds a baby, because my hands and arms were so covered with eczema that they had to be bound up all the time."

So says Mrs. V. McInerley, 73 Gore Street, Sault Ste. Marie, and adds: "From finger tips to elbows the disease spread, my finger nails came off and my flesh was one raw mass. The itching and the pain were almost as unendurable. I had three months of this torture and at one time amputation was discussed.

"Zam-Buk alone saved my hands and arms. I persevered with it, and to-day I am cured completely of every trace of the dreaded eczema. I fervently hope sufferers may learn of the miracle Zam-Buk has worked in my case."

Zam-Buk is without equal for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, piles, cracked hands, cold sores, chapped places, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

HIS STURDY WATCH.

He Keeps It in Repair Himself With the Aid of a Knife.

[illegible] "will slip off a curb step down about a foot and break a leg, and then another man will fall off the top of a seventeen story house and not even muss his clothes. And it's about the same way with watches.

"I dropped my watch the other day about six inches on to a thick plush carpet, and it cost me $16 for repairs. When I was out walking with my friend Bettlewilby this morning he dropped his watch on the sidewalk, and it didn't so much as stop it.

"It sounded when it came down like a safe falling out of a high window, and it was only a two dollar watch, and I expected, of course, to see Bettlewilby just kick the fragments off the sidewalk and pass on, but it seems Bettlewilby knew the watch better. He picked up the crystal, not even cracked, from where it had flown, seven feet away, and put that in his pocket, and then he looked at the watch.

"It was going all right, but somehow in the fall the long hand had got bent. He straightened out that bent hand with his penknife so that the two pointers wouldn't catch, and then he pried off the crystal rim of the watch and put the crystal back in place, and then he snapped the rim back on the front of the watch again and dropped the watch in his pocket and started on, and 'As I was saying,' he said, just as if nothing had happened."—Washington Post.

"Now gentlemen," concluded the lightning calculator, "I 'ave demonstrated to you upon this 'ere blackboard the marvelous speed and accuracy insured by my great system of addition, subtraction, division and multiplication, and I trust that you are all satisfied with the results. Now, gentlemen, I 'ave 'ere a little sellin' booklet explainin' my marvelous system in full and by a careful perusal of which I will guarantee you to become as expert a lightnin' calculator as myself within the period of one week, by which time I shall be out of the town. Ahem! Now, gentlemen, when you recall that I was straight away able to multiply 1,111,111,112,987 by 987,111,111,111,111 perhaps you will"—

"One moment, sir!" called out a shrill voice from the back of the crowd. "But will you answer me a question? I'm no scholar myself, but I was wondering the other night how old a child born in September, nineteen nought nine, would be in September, nineteen nought ten?"

The lightning calculator threw his interrogator a look of contempt.

"One year, of course, my little man," he replied sarcastically.

"Well," retorted the shrill voice, "I think if you were to go home and improve your own arithmetic you would find that child would be 17,101 years old."—London Answers.

A Matter of Smokestacks.

The smokestacks on ocean vessels of recent years have been made to slope backward more particularly to give the steamer a rakish air, the masts also being given the same slope. As to the effect on the draft, there is a slight one, as the wind pressure on the front of the stack sloping up and over the top of the stack is more apt to draw the smoke out than to cut it off, but from all we are aware of this seems to have been held of secondary consideration. The shape of the smokestacks also is changing from round to oval so as to present less surface at the front. If you compare the steamers with the sloping and straight smokestacks, in one case the former, while motionless, still appears to have life, while the rigidity of the other gives it an appearance of stiffness even while under considerable speed.—St. Nicholas.

WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Give Regularity and Good Health.

Every woman at some time needs a tonic. At special times unusual demands are made upon her strength. Where these are added to the worry and hard work which falls to her lot, weakness will result unless the blood is fortified to meet the strain.

Weak women find in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the tonic exactly suited to their needs. Most of the ills with which they suffer are due to bloodlessness — a condition which the Pills readily cure. These Pills save the girl who enters upon womanhood in a bloodless condition from years of misery and afford prompt and permanent relief to the woman who is bloodless and [illegible] Mrs. R. THEY TOOK HIM IN.

A Surprise That Baffled an Absent-minded Scientist.

[illegible] in this country was, to say the least, careless about dress. Once he was asked to lecture in a city not far from Philadelphia. He went, taking with him his dress suit and no other suit. Having given his lecture, he spent the night at the house of a fellow professor, woke up the next morning, cheerfully donned the dress suit and sallied forth to give another lecture at the local college.

He didn't know just where the college was, but, spying an imposing looking building not far from his host's residence, decided that that was it. While walking toward the [illegible] he suddenly saw an ant hill. Bugs were his specialty. He dropped at once to his knees, dress suit and all, and started to scoop out ants.

The next thing he knew he was surrounded by a body of men who had rushed out from the imposing looking building. They seized him roughly and proceeded to drag him indoors. He gesticulated. He protested in many languages. It was of no avail. At last, however, explanations were forthcoming.

The imposing looking building was none other than the lunatic asylum. Seeing a man attired in a dress suit digging up ants at 10 o'clock in the morning, the attendants had thought that an inmate had escaped; hence the sally and attack.—Philadelphia Record.

VARNISH TROUBLES.

The Complaint That Is Made by a Piano Manufacturer.

The piano manufacturer was talking. "A fortune of a million dollars, at least," he said, "awaits the man who can invent a varnish which will respond to changes of temperature in exactly the same rate at which wood [illegible].

"Everybody who ever has made or owned a highly polished article of furniture knows that the surface is liable to break into small cracks—become finely crackled—and thus its beauty is lost. This crackling is caused by the fact that sudden changes of temperature affect varnish — especially fine piano varnish—almost instantly, while the wood beneath contracts or expands at a different rate. This splinters the varnish, and thus far no manufacturer has been able to get the best of the situation.

"We are waiting for this entirely possible elastic varnish, which, when it shall come, will be more welcome to the manufacturers of fine furniture than the flying machine is to the world at large. A piano, delicate as it is, could be stored in an icehouse without detriment to its polished surface, provided the temperature was kept even, but changes, especially if sudden, are fatal to the beauty of the case."—New York Press.

Her Patriotic Protest.

The force of natural and instinctive pride in one's country has been endlessly expressed in literatures of all times and climes, but rarely more dramatically than in the following little incident:

Grieg, as every one knows, is the musical idol of all Norwegians, although it has been the fashion of less talented outsiders to underrate him. One of the most indefatigable of these detractors was the German composer Bargiel, a man of an instinctively jealous nature.

One day one of his pupils, a Norwegian girl, brought for her lesson a concerto of Grieg's. Bargiel took it from her with a smile of most superior disdain.

"But I told you to bring your music, and Grieg is no music!" he said scornfully.

"What—Grieg no music!" was the indignant reply. "Adieu, Herr Professor!" And she swept out of the studio, never to return.

To Save Confusion When Moving.

If you are planning to move prevent confusion in placing furniture in the new house in the following manner: In leisure moments prepare a large card for each room to be tacked to the outside of the door frame on moving day. Assign a number and mark a card for each bedroom. Letter the other cards with the names of the other rooms. Then prepare a number of smaller tags, attaching a string to each, or use baggage tags. Mark enough to put on all furniture, trunks or boxes with the name of the room into which each is to be put. Show your movers the arrangement and there will be little or no error in placing, while no valuable time and strength will be lost in directing.—Woman's Home Companion.

Men Who Write Badly.

"Practice makes perfect" in all the arts and handicrafts, it would seem, barring that of penmanship. In that apparently the more one practices the more imperfect becomes the result produced, and your real man of the pen writes in seven cases out of ten a hand that would reflect discredit on his own housemaid.—Bookman.

He Got It.

For the Aching Head

Gently Massage the Forehead.

An Ice-Bag Relieves Congestion

THERE are so many causes of an aching head that it is probably the most common ailment from which women suffer. First of all, there is the headache which can be traced to the stomach. Over-eating, with its resultant indigestion, quickly [illegible] the offender, and a dull ache across the front of the head generally [illegible] hot water sipped [illegible] will often relieve this pain. It [illegible] muscles which are used in the process of digestion. Often it will dispel the cause of headache in a very short time.

Another headache is caused by an overcharging of the blood vessels in the head, due to any great mental strain. Circulation must be restored to a normal condition. Gentle massage is excellent. By smoothing [illegible] the flow of the blood will be stimulated and it will move on in its course, gradually taking the pain with it. Dipping the fingers in a solution of equal parts of menthol and alcohol and rubbing them on the skin gives refreshing relief. Be careful not to allow any of this to touch the eyes, for it causes an unpleasant sensation.

An icebag applied to the aching part is another well-tried remedy. When the head is dry and feverish this cold application works wonders. It reduces the temperature and has the recommendation of needing no second person to minister to the victim.

When there is beating or a throbbing headache at the base of the brain loosen the hair and rub the back of the neck firmly and steadily. Relaxation of the muscles will sometimes drive the pain away.

Then there is the friendly footbath of hot mustard and water. Take it just before retiring, and in many instances the nerves will be soothed, the circulation restored and any extra amount of blood be drawn away from the brain. Sleep will come, and I can almost promise a painless awakening in the morning.

These simple treatments are far better than the taking of headache powders [illegible] what they aim to do [illegible] away pain—but often they affect the heart [illegible]

If I were you I should never suffer from headaches that occur so frequently that they border on the chronic [illegible] a physician [illegible] derangement [illegible] the body [illegible] the removal of the cause by efficient [illegible] treatment.

A Little Cold.

He caught a little cold—
That was all
So the neighbors sadly said,
As they gathered round his bed,
When they heard that he was dead.
He caught a little cold—
That was all. (Puck.)

Neglect of a cough or cold often leads to serious trouble. To break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable, mix two ounces of Glycerine, a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whiskey. Take a teaspoonful every four hours. You can buy these at any good drug store and easily mix them in a large bottle.

Cool and Correct.

Professor Robert Herrick of the University of Chicago, desired to point out to a young ... the difference between the words "astonish" and "surprise."

"Noah Webster," Professor Herrick said, "was caught in the act of pressing the hand of the pretty cook.

"The cook, blushing like a rose, fled at once to her kitchen. Mrs. Webster said in a sad, tremulous voice:

"'Why, Noah I'm surprised.'

"But the philologist, frowning over his glasses at his wife, answered reprovingly:

"'Madam, you have not studied our glorious language as you should. It's I who am surprised. You are astonished.'"

Often what appear to be the most trivial occurrences of life prove to be the most momentous. Many are disposed to regard a cold as a slight thing, deserving of little consideration, and this neglect often results in most serious ailments entailing years of suffering. Drive out colds and coughs with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the recognized remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs.

"Come on and take a ride in my monoplane," insisted the inventor. "Why, it has a speed of a mile a minute."

"Indeed," said the cautious friend. "In what direction?"

"What has the direction to do with it?"

THE END OF THE WORLD.

Various Scientific Opinions as to How It Will Come.

The terrible catastrophe in Italy which caused the inhabitants of the ill fated city of Messina to believe that the end of the world had come is only a foretaste on a small scale of what many eminent scientists believe will be the end of the world. That eternal problem of how the world will end is, in the opinion of many, a matter for scientific investigation, and it is curious that the majority believe that the earth will open up and fly to pieces in the most gigantic earthquake ever known—an earthquake that will wipe all life from the globe before the actual destruction of the earth is complete.

The late Grant Allen firmly believed that the world would end by the crust of the earth eventually giving way beneath the colossal weight above it, and Abbe Dupin, one of the greatest scientists of France, believes that doomsday will begin with a war that will envelop the greatest nations in Europe, this being followed by a plague the like of which has never been known, culminating with an earthquake that will practically shake the world to pieces.

H. G. Wells, whose scientific prophecies are well known, is, however, of a different opinion. The world will end, he declares, by its becoming entirely frozen over. It is a well known fact that every year more ice accumulates around the poles. In short, many millions of tons of ice in excess of that of the year previous settle about the earth's extremities each year, and in Mr. Wells' opinion this will gradually extend until the whole world is frozen over and every living thing is thus destroyed.

Several scientists, remarks a writer in Cassell's Sunday Journal, are of opinion that we shall perish by fire and this old world of ours with us. Nikola Tesla is convinced that, the atmosphere of the world being so fully charged with electricity, the result will be a gigantic explosion by spontaneous combustion, when the world will ...

Why Stanfield's Make Underwear

UP to 20 years ago, most everyone considered that all Underwear—no matter how well cut and made—would shrink and harden.

In those days, the makers were working on the wrong idea. They were trying to find a way to finish Underwear so that it would not shrink, instead of trying to find a way to get the shrink out the wool before the yarn went to the knitting machines.

The late C. E. Stanfield—who knew wool as only a man can know it who studies it from the sheep's back to the wearer's back—gave his attention to the problem for years.

Living in Nova Scotia, he soon realized that woolen underwear, and the best of pure woolen underwear, was the only kind that would and could protect the Canadian against the rigorous Canadian Winter. He found that as underwear was then made, he could not make woolen underwear that would not shrink, mat and harden. He devoted himself to this problem and after many years of experimenting, he finally discovered a method by which he could take the shrink out of the wool before the garments were knitted.

This method, improved and perfected, has made possible the immense business of Stanfield's Limited, with a larger output of their special classes of Underwear than any other factory in Canada.

The Stanfields make underwear today because Canadian people find Stanfield's Underwear the most comfortable, the most durable, and the warmest for its weight.

The Stanfields are making more underwear every year because the buying public demands more of it. Popularity is a good test of quality.

In 3 standard weights—Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and 17 other weights and qualities to suit the needs and requirements of every man and woman.

Settlers in Rich Agricultural Belt of Country North-east Not Af er Branch Railway

Line to Commence from a Point at or Near Lloydminster

The settlers resident in the territory lying to the north and east of Vermilion are sending a strong delegation to Edmonton about the middle of the month to lay a monster petition before the government asking for a branch railway line to be built from a point at or near Lloydminster in a north-easterly direction through Ranges 1, 2, 3, and four to Township 53, thence west through range 3 and northward. The petition contains a heavy list of signatures and the deputation will be accompanied to Edmonton by Mr. Bromely-Moore M. P. P., the member for that constituency.

From information received by the Standard it would appear that the settlement throughout the district affected has become remarkably heavy, practically all of the open land not only being settled upon but a great percentage of the same being in a state of cultivation. In fact it is claimed that unless relief in the form of cheaper or more ready accessible markets is obtained at once that development must cease as it was impossible to [illegible]

MOBBING A HYPNOTIST.

The Man With the Magnetic Eye and His Manager Had to Flee.

The recent troubles of a travelling hypnotist in Glasgow recall an episode in Toronto in which students played no part, but in which a travelling hypnotist fared badly. Years ago, before Hanlan's Point became a wild expanse of stone and a large area of land, it was a small breathing space with a white-washed hotel, a few trees, a wharf and a showman in the person of Julius Caesar Connor, a native of Whitby, Ont., and since deceased. Connor looked like the imaginary likeness of Artemus Ward which figure in old editions of that humorist's works, and was proud of the fact that he had never worn a necktie. He maintained that for a man with a chin whisker a necktie was superfluous; that it was, so to speak, gilding the lily. Although the showman, he was in reality the show, for though he used to employ entertainers, they were not nearly so entertaining as his own speech ...

Hypnotism was then the craze ... Connor ... a hypnotist and a subject. ... after the first performance it was seen that his ... the thinnest kind of a fake. It was not even funny. The entire crowd used to go over to the Point every night, and at the second performance they were ...

A Countryman in London.

A countryman who went to London in August lost his gold watch. He trotted off to Scotland Yard and told them about his trouble. With their usual politeness they told him they would leave no stone unturned in their endeavor to find his watch. A few days after he went through some of the leading thoroughfares and saw street after street turned up and was told that a few miles were in the same condition. He ran off to Scotland Yard, and said, "I didn't think I was giving you all that trouble. If you don't find the watch by Saturday you needn't pull up any more of the road."

Design for a Tailored Shirtwaist

Designed by Claire A Flynn

LET us have a quiet little chat with the tailor-made girl, for this is her very own garment, and I have had the design made exclusively for her.

She is one woman who has never swerved from the path of the shirtwaist. All others have wandered over into the open field of the curious gown, although they have returned at intervals, but the smartly tailored girl has alone remained faithful.

Whether it be plain or embroidered, the shirt that fastens in front comes under the tailored head so long as it remains comparatively tuckless and is made with lapped seams and outside stitching.

This design is one of those conveniently adaptable ones that may be done in ... varied to suit the worker ... the material ... winding stems and in making each of the circular dots an eyelet. This will ... be the well padded over-and-over stitch. ... either mercerized or soft untwisted ... a cuff. There is added the half of a Puritan collar for the tailored girl who is not too prim and stiff to allow herself some ease and comfort.

Elaborate Trimmings on Dressy Gowns—The New Veils.

Dressy gowns this season show a good deal of jet and crystal bead trimming as well as the brilliant beetle wing embroidery and spangled trimmings.

Double breasted coats are always comfortable for cold weather, and this style is seen among the best models [illegible] lengths.

Wide meshed veils are modish. This veiling is heavy and does not injure the eyes, as the dotted variety is apt to do. Women like the heavy wide meshes because of their becomingness and the fascinating mystery of the half concealed face under the beautifier.

Dotted swiss is used for the cutest little baby dresses. It is of the softest and finest variety. These dresses are simply made, being trimmed with a few insertions of valenciennes. ...

ALL IN WHITE BEDROOM.

The Latest Expression of the Modern Sanitary Craze.

Nothing is prettier or more dainty than an all in white bedroom. [illegible] not entirely practical if the [illegible] that convertible type used as sitting room and sleeping apartment alternatively. But when the dear little bedroom is used to [illegible] in only or perchance as a dressing room there is no [illegible] than [illegible] furnishings.

Cottage furniture has returned, and a white enameled bed will look well with a bureau and washstand that have been retouched with wood enamel in white. Even the [illegible] may be an all white porcelain of a more than usually shapely design. The woodwork may be whitened, even if it first requires the application of a paint remover and the work that entails.

Curtaining and wall paper will present no difficulty, since the decorator can now supply both plain and glossy white papers, and the [illegible] of swiss for sash curtains are practically numberless. That paper having a satiny surface or an invisible pattern will prove less monotonous, and the drapery of the dressing bureau should [illegible].

Now, the introduction into this "colorless" scheme of the occasional picture or the bit of delicate pottery or metal ware will break what may prove monotony, but an excess of ornamentation is to be decried, since the main object and purpose of this purity in coloring is the accomplishment of an entirely sanitary room.

Yes, it may need repapering and reenameling sooner than a darker color, which is to be anticipated, for our white bedroom is intended not only to look clean, but to be clean.

A wonderfully dainty woman steps out of just such a room every morning into what she chooses to consider a sunshiny world, and the room seems to have something to do with her outlook.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The active ingredients entering the most popular household remedy in the world have been made known to the public. This means a new era in the advertising of popular family medicines—Peruna leads.

Peruna contains among other things, golden seal, powerful in its effect [illegible] the mucous membranes. Cedron seed, a rare medicine and unsurpassed tonic. No Decent Gravy.

A venerable clergyman states that he was one of two missionaries who were once captured by cannibals, and were about to be cooked and eaten. His companion was a man who appreciated the good things of the table and prided himself upon his cookery. As the crisis of his fate approached his moanings were piteous. The other exhorted him to bear up, telling him that to die is gain, and all that. "It ain't that," groaned the missionary. "I'm not afraid to die, but it breaks my heart to think that those savages don't know how to make a decent gravy."

THE ULTRA MICROSCOPE.

It Detects Objects Whose Size or Shape Cannot Be Seen.

It will come as news to most people that science has invented instruments that go two degrees beyond the most powerful microscope in detecting small objects. The first of these is known as the ultra violet microscope. This takes advantage of the fact that a photographic plate can often see things that the human eye cannot, and for the following reason.

Things cannot reflect light and consequently cannot be seen that are smaller than the smallest wave length of light that falls on them. Violet light is the smallest that can be possibly seen with the human eye. But there exists a much smaller wave length in the part of the spectrum not visible to the eye called the ultra violet light. This has the peculiar property of affecting a photographic plate just as any other light would, so that we get a true picture of the minute object that is under examination.

Thus the deficiency of the eye is made up for by a mechanical invention of the [illegible] violet light, though not detectable by the human eye, is easily seen by small animals and insects. It has been tried with great success on ants especially. With this ultra violet microscope the smallest objects that can be photographed with definiteness of dimensions are brought out with wonderful distinctness.

But there is one other instrument that can detect much smaller objects, though their shape or size cannot be seen, and that is known as the ultra microscope. This takes advantage of the fact that a small object will scatter any light that falls on it. ...

Vermilion Curlers Attach Many Beautiful Trophies

The Grand Challenge, Merchant's Cup, the Grand Aggregate and Third Prize in Professional Shield, Covers Their Winnings

Bonspiel Was Held At Vegreville

The Rink that Did It: Skip C. E. Slater, A. F. Jones, A. J. Dimmell and W. Telford

Vermilion's "Big Four" returned from the Vegreville bonspiel Sunday morning laden down with trophies of the first annual of the Heather Curling Club of that town. The Grand Challenge Cup the banner event of the spiel, Merchants Cup and their accompanying trophies—third prize in the Professional Shield event and the trophies for winners in the Grand Aggregate— were attached to the belts of Skip Slater and his rink of bonnie curlers, and the town is wild with enthusiasm over their representatives, and with good reason, for the great honors won.

The bonspiel was a great success, seventeen rinks being entered in the events. Edmonton, Fort Saskatchewan, Viking, Vermilion and Vegreville making up the number.

The first prize in the Grand Challenge carried with it the Gordon Cup, presented by Chas. Gordon, Esq., and one suit case fitted with ebony brushes, etc., and three Club Bags, value $40.00.

The Merchants Cup, presented by the ... Hotel, was ... Holds, value $40.00. This also came East.

The third prize won by the rink in the Professional Shield comprised four pairs of Military Brushes in cases, value $22.00.

The Grand Aggregate prizes were four beautiful brass tea kettles. The rink played 13 games winning 12 and losing 1, a record to be proud of.

The two cups won will be retained by the Vermilion Curling Club until November, 1st., 1910, when they will be returned to the secretary of the Vegreville Curling Club.

MANNVILLE NEWS BUDGET

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McFadden, Mannville, was the scene of a very pretty event on Wednesday Jan. 12th when their daughter Pansy was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur H. Oliver, of Calgary. At two o'clock p. m. to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, capably rendered by Mrs. J. T. McAllister, the bridal party entered the parlor which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with evergreen and bunting.

The bride ... given away by her father ... charmingly dainty ...

Chapter 31

MEANWHILE in the car Satan sat with his head in his hands. His bellicose mood had fallen away from him like a discarded garment, and his whole personality was subdued to the dust.

He had not meant to kill Ben. He had only meant to give him a thrashing, as he was always threatening to do. He had not meant to kill him, even when he struck him that terrible blow. He had struck it in self-defense, because Ben had struck him first, and he had struck it in the heat of passion, and with no premeditation whatever. He knew that he would have to live the long years of his life with the memory of that blow, and he knew that he would have to live the long years of his life with the knowledge that he had given over his own soul to the devil in order to save it.

He heard the door of the car open and close, but he did not look up. He knew that Sandy had come in, and he knew that Sandy was looking at him, but he could not look at Sandy. He could not look at anything or anybody. He could only sit there, with his head in his hands, and wait for the end.

He had not been sitting there very long when he heard Sandy's voice speaking to him, and he knew that Sandy was speaking to him because there was no one else in the car to whom he could speak.

"Satan," he was saying, "I've been thinking it over, and I've come to the conclusion that I've been a fool. I've been a fool to let you go on thinking that you've killed Ben. I've been a fool to let you go on thinking that you've committed murder. I've been a fool to let you go on thinking that you've committed a crime that will send you to the penitentiary for the rest of your life. I've been a fool to let you go on thinking that you've committed a crime that will send you to the penitentiary for the rest of your life, and that will send me to the penitentiary for the rest of my life, too, because

PIONEER WORK IN CANADA

Archdeacon Lloyd in England on Church Work

The following is a report of Archdeacon Lloyd's appeal for workers at Reading, Eng., and will no doubt prove of an interesting nature to many of our readers.

Those who have not got seats marked for the J. W. Bengough entertainment in the Presbyterian church Thursday night, Jan. 20 are advised to do so at once as there promises to be a large attendance. The public should not fail to take this rare treat in as the nature of Bengough's entertainment is of a kind we are not likely to have the privilege of seeing and hearing again perhaps in a life time. Seats on sale at Hemmerstein Bros.

Archdeacon Lloyd said that the work which the Society had to do was [illegible] which brought with it [illegible] responsibilities. It was a work which [illegible] and so that there [illegible] of £40 for the training of each one of these men. The speaker then gave his audience some idea of the experience which the men would have who went out as student missionaries to Canada and Manitoba. Continuing he said that they did not want men who could only speak from marble pulpits and brass lecterns but sturdy, God fearing Christians, who were prepared to rough it, and to face hardship, and often danger in the fulfilment of their mission. In three years they had gathered up [illegible] these in turn were governed by a [illegible] [illegible]

Late Hours and Long Life.

A German doctor who has been collecting information about the habits of long lived persons finds that the majority of those who attained old age indulged in late hours. Eight out of ten persons over eighty never went to bed till well into the small hours and did not get up again till late in the day.

LANES OF OCEAN TRAVEL.

Steam Vessels Can Pursue an Almost Unvarying Route.

Although the oceans of the world have no visible streets or crossings or signposts, in the eye of the navigator they are just as distinctly marked. No railway train accomplishes so direct a line between points as does the steamship. No locomotive engineer knows more exactly where he is at all times than does the sea captain.

Vessels operated by steam can pursue an almost unvarying line. Their managers accordingly prescribe courses between various ports, known as "lanes," over which practically all the shipping moves. In case of a breakdown the vessel is much sooner picked up on a lane than in less frequented parts of the sea. Then, too, rocks, derelicts and other obstructions may be more carefully charted and watched on the highly traveled courses. There is usually an east as well as a west lane, a few miles apart, to lessen the danger of collision.

In the matter of inland navigation it may be pointed out that on the great lakes there is a four track lane from Duluth, two of the routes for passenger steamers and two for freighters.

Sailing vessels responsive to winds, tides and currents go about more at random. Yet there are immense areas of the sea where no sail or smokestack is ever seen.

It has been pointed out that the completion of the Panama canal will [illegible]

CRIME OF KIDNAPPING.

Some Queer Cases of Child Stealing In Britain and Europe.

Fourteen years' penal servitude—that is the punishment set by British law for the offence of child-stealing. Perhaps it is this severity, combined with the fact that judges have small mercy upon the offender, which has made the crime known as "kidnapping" so rare.

But that the crime of kidnapping is not extinct is proved by the recent Southend case, where a baby 14 days old was stolen from its parents.

So lately as last March the whole of America was stirred by a kidnapping crime of a most sensational kind. A ten-year-old boy, named Willie Whitla, mysteriously disappeared on his way home from school. His father, a well-known lawyer, employed scores of detectives. They discovered nothing.

Then came anonymous letters demanding a ransom of [illegible], failing which the boy would be killed. The sum was at once handed over, but [illegible] sign of the boy. The letters, however, gave a clue and a man named James Boyle and his wife were arrested. [illegible] to 25 years' [illegible], while the man got a life sentence.

In Italy there is a considerable traffic in unfortunate children stolen from their parents and taught to beg for their kidnappers. [illegible]

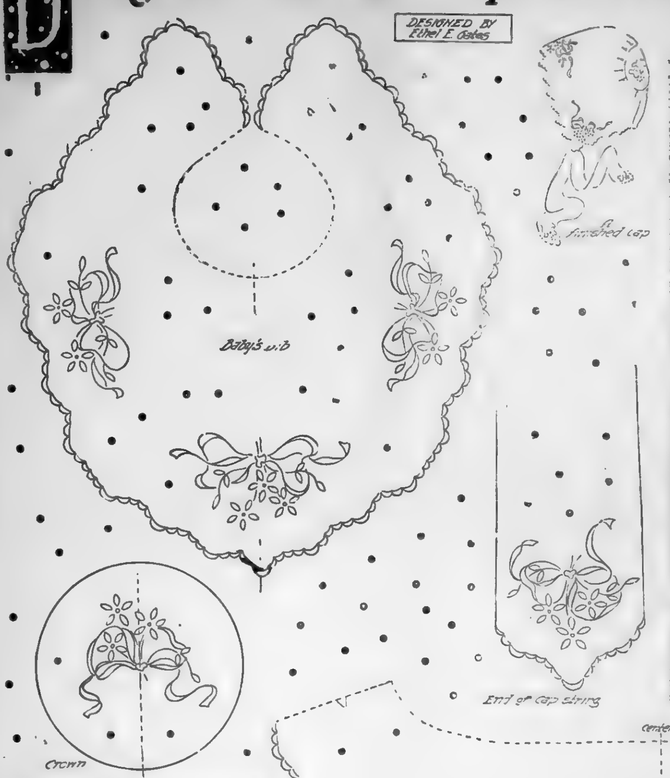
Design for Infant's Cap and Bib

DESIGNED BY Ethel E. Gates



How to Apply Design

THERE are two ways to apply this design to the material upon which you wish to work it.

If [illegible] material [illegible] as handkerchief linen [illegible] the material [illegible] with a well pointed pencil, draw over each line.

[illegible] a piece of transfer [illegible] paper [illegible] the pattern [illegible] permanent impression on the design upon your material.

[illegible]

The Making of Stocks

[illegible]

The Gray Fad

[illegible]

THE sketch of the finished cap will give you a better idea of the design I am showing you today than any word picture could convey. Let us do up the little parts first as pick-up work and put our final effort upon the cap piece proper and the bib.

Somehow, baby's things seem all to need better work than our own, so let us spend what time we have to spare in a little real fancy work, whether the cap be for baby dear in our own house or for somebody's darling in another household.

By "real" I mean actual solid or over-and-over stitch as opposed to the "touch and go" method of outlining. The only bit of hasty stitch should appear as stems, because the bowknots and leaves should be solid and the petals either solid or eyelet. Each blossom center may be either a French knot or a little dot of solid work.

Now let us insure a more than usually reliable edge by turning under a bit of the white linen margin, basting it securely in place wherever a scallop is stamped and cutting it away after the scallops are padded and worked.

This double method will insure a firmer edge, and will mean that instead of cutting away a single edge outside of the scallops there will be two thicknesses to cut away, and also that on the under side of the scallops there will be ragged edges to clip off.

Now let us face the bib around the neck, finish it with one row of brier stitching or a single outline and fasten it with a hook and a lace button.

Let us join the cap at its back seam according to the [illegible] gather [illegible] the round corners [illegible] gathers into quarter [illegible] distribution [illegible] and sew on a row of [illegible]

The strings [illegible] (they should be eighteen inches [illegible]) and we [illegible] cap with gold or silver [illegible] that they may be [illegible] I am [illegible] but if you have a [illegible] under this little [illegible] of a most [illegible]

Handwork [illegible] and the days pass very quickly when [illegible]

Handkerchief linen is the ideal material for this little baby outfit, although pique may be used for the bib and silk for the cap.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

Town of Vermilion 1909

Vermilion, Alta., 4th Jan. 1910.

To the Mayor and Council
Town of Vermilion

Gentlemen:— I, the undersigned, auditor of the town of Vermilion do hereby certify that I have examined the books, vouchers and accounts of the Secretary Treasurer for the months of October, November and December, being the fourth period of the year 1909, and beg to report as follows:

I find the books, vouchers and accounts correct throughout, and in first class order.

Attached hereto is a statement of the receipts and disbursements for the year 1909.

Yours truly,
ROY JACKSON, Auditor.

ACTIVITY ON BRANCH LINES

Over 200 Miles to be Built in Alberta this Year

THROUGH TRAINS TO COAST IN FOUR YEARS

"The Canadian Northern Railway will reach the Pacific Coast before the Grand Trunk Pacific" says William Mackenzie, and "Trains will be running between Edmonton and Vancouver in four years." This is portentous of enormous activity in railway construction west of Edmonton in the next few years.

Mr. Mackenzie was in Edmonton and has gone again, shortly he will be heard of in London. Numerous delegations waited on him urging branch lines of railway and more branch lines. Petitions received from Wetaskiwin and Lloydminster, regarding railway facilities, were presented to Mr. Mackenzie before leaving the city by Premier Rutherford, and he promised to give each of them his best attention.

The C. N. R. constructed over 600 miles in the west last year, 200 of which were in Alberta. The amount of construction work on branch lines is expected to exceed this 200 mile mark this year.

It is understood the Alberta government will not guarantee the bonds of any railways this year. At least this is the statement made in certain quarters where the information is ordinarily of unquestioned reliability.

MONSIEUR LEPINE.

Methods of the Watchful Chief of Police of Paris.

With the collar of a shabby overcoat turned up and an old hat over his eyes, a little, spare, elderly gentleman was captured the other evening by a party of students roistering in the Latin quarter of Paris. They danced round him, made believe to "raise his hair" and altogether behaved badly toward him. A policeman sauntered up and after one look at the victim dashed into the party and rescued him. It was his chief, M. Lepine, prefect of police. His identity revealed, the students [illegible] by shouting "Vive Lepine!" and insisted on forming themselves into a bodyguard to see him home. M. Lepine rather enjoyed his evening. His great amusement is to play Haroun-al-Raschid by night. Almost every evening after dinner he puts on an old coat and shabby hat and goes out exploring on foot. He listens with the idlest, and there is no one more absorbed when a horse falls down or a cabman and a taxi driver have a few words. Nobody recognizes him, but he keeps his eyes open and notes every policeman on duty. The next morning a constable may get a reprimand or a five franc piece, and then he wonders what invisible power detected him in remissness or saw him do a kind deed to punish or reward him afterward.

Recently a policeman found a newly born baby in a doorway, picked it up tenderly and took it to the police station. Of course M. Lepine managed to be there at the moment. He followed the man into the station, sat on a chair in a corner and watched. The constable nurse did his best in the awkward circumstances, but his chiefs did not. The commissary of police was not there, though he ought to have been on duty. The little elderly gentleman in the corner asked timidly whether monsieur the commissary would come shortly.

"What's that to you?" replied the deputy.

"I should like to see him."

"Would you indeed? Then come again!"

"When shall I come?"

"Don't ask questions! The commissary is not at your beck and call."

The little elderly gentleman was crushed and went out. But the next day the commissary and his deputy received notice of suspension.

On another night, a pouring wet one, M. Lepine, soaked through, bespattered with mud and umbrellaless, went up to a constable at the door of a police station and asked if he might go in and warm himself a bit.

"Come along in, old chap, and sit by the stove," said one policeman, and another poked the fire in the grate to make it burn up.

"I put your names down for a ten franc reward each," said M. Lepine, unbuttoning his coat and taking off his hat to the astonished constables.—Paris Letter.

Flying Machines and Animals.

When Zeppelin III made the flight from Dusseldorf to Essen it was observed that horses and cattle ran wildly about the meadows as it approached, and sheep crowded with loud bleatings around their shepherd. From these facts Count Zeppelin concludes that the employment of airships of whatever type will have a disastrous effect on furred and feathered game. All animals show fear at their approach. An important question for Alberta is being asked by many. What is the effect on the market? How will the farmers of Alberta, and the C.N.R. and the G.T.P. system, be affected? Will the quantities of cattle coming to the market be greatly increased? Will there be a very small supply? Will the prices be materially affected? Will there be any change?

At present we are unable to answer any of these questions, but we may in the near future be able to do so. Some of the cattle may or may not see a phenomenal price later, but they will handle fine in sympathy with what is to any height that that cereal may attain therefore it would be interesting to know what is governing the present price and at what figure oats will come out or come to the front.

It seems to be a well established fact that only a few are being offered, especially in the north, and comparatively few have gone to the market. Where are the oats and are they coming on later? This is certainly puzzling some of those who are usually well informed.

Is there a certainty that oats will bring greater prices after the spring sales are over, if held in check, than they do now. On the other hand matter the farmers may be better posted than we are and may have an assurance of higher prices to their oats if they hold on. Of course, in trying to size up the situation it is difficult, for reports given out in regard to the market must be more or less from interested objectors on both sides, so who will strike the happy medium and [illegible]

REPORT OF DELEGATION

Meeting Receive and Adopt Same Friday Night

The report of the delegation which presented the petition to the local government was received at a public meeting Friday night in the town hall. Norman Murray was appointed to chair and G. E. Hayward acted as secretary. In the absence of A. W. Rowbotham who was unable to be present, the report was read by Mayor Stephens as follows:

GENTLEMEN

We have the honour to present this our report of the conference held by your delegation with the Cabinet of the Province of Alberta.

Immediately after the public meeting held on the 7th of January, your delegates requested the willing member of our constituency —Mr. A. Campbell, to arrange a date on which we could meet the Cabinet. Mr. Campbell arranged for Tuesday the 18th inst. for said meeting. On said 18th inst. your delegates consisting of the undersigned, proceeded to Edmonton where they were met by Mr. Campbell, and on the same day held a conference with said cabinet. Mr. A. W. Rowbotham introduced the delegation to the said cabinet and outlined the purpose that had brought about said meeting.

Your delegates brought to the attention of the cabinet the advisability of the immediate construction of the proposed line of railway from Vermilion to Whitford Lake, and asked said cabinet for some definite assurance as to the construction of said road during the coming summer. In answer to this request, Hon. Hon. Mr. Rutherford, stated that the Government of the Province of Alberta was not in the railway building business, and that said Government had gone as far as they could in guaranteeing the bonds of said railway, and that it was the duty of the citizens of the town and district of Vermilion to approach the officials of the Canadian Northern Railway company and secure the [illegible] necessary for the construction of said road. Hon. Hon. Mr. Rutherford, also stated that the Government would be very happy to co-operate with the officials of the proposed line in the [illegible] and Dauphin. Mr. Cameron in answering stated he was not prepared to [illegible]

Your delegates would like to have their district represented by a member of the Provincial Cabinet, and we would respectfully suggest that Mr. [illegible] has given his most solemn promise and assurance that he would see that one of the appropriations for the present year, adequate provisions would be made for the repairing and putting into condition of the road to the north of our town to the Saskatchewan River, and for the putting in of a suitable crossing over the Grizzly Bear Coulee to the south of our town, and that in other respects he would see that our district received due consideration that it deserves from his hands, as long one of the most important, if not the most important part of his Constituency.

Dated Jan. 21st, 1910

A short discussion [illegible] trading of the report [illegible] it was unanimously adopted and a hearty vote of thanks tendered the delegates. Mayor Stephens responded thanking the meeting on behalf of the delegates.

Owing to the lateness of the hour it was decided to postpone the organization of the Board of Trade until Monday night. The meeting then adjourned.

Through the gate of dreams lies the fair land of romance into which you would travel, finding welcome relief from the daily grind. Now you are invited to accompany the Princess Virginia who determines that the royal personage who would honor her with his hand must fall in love with her and woo her as any other man would a woman. Therefore she travels incognito in his realm meeting adventures strange and full of excitement. You will learn with pardonable pride that the American blood in her veins gives her [illegible] heard of in the princesses of kings, but most of all you will want to know how she succeeds in her bold undertaking. That you will enjoy every minute of the reading is assured by the verdict of thousands of readers. The Princess Virginia is to be a most delightful story.

nobody was seen. There were reports of speeches made by him since his accession to the throne, accounts of improvements in guns and an invention of a new explosive. There was a somewhat crude yet witty play which he had written and numerous other records of the accomplishments and achievements and even eccentricities which had built up the Princess Virginia's ideal of this celebrated young man, proclaimed emperor after the great revolution eight years ago.

"You are worthy to be an empress."

Her mother's voice broke into Virginia's thoughts. She started and found herself under inspection by the grand duchess. At first she frowned; then she laughed, springing up on a quick impulse to turn earnest into jest and so perhaps escape further catechising.

"Yes, would I not make an empress?" she echoed, stepping out from the shadow of her favorite elm into the moonlike radiance of summer.

The sun poured over her hair as she stood with uplifted head and threaded it with a network of living gold, gleaming into the dark gray eyes rimmed with tearful lashes and turning them to jewels. Her fair skin was as dawless in the unsparing light as the petals of lilies, and her features, though a repetition of those which had made a Virginia girl famous long ago, were carved with royal perfection.

"There is a real reason why you should not make an empress, dearest," said her mother, in pride of the girl's beauty and desiring, womanlike, to promote her child's happiness. "Stranger things have happened. Only last week at Windsor the dear queen was saying what a pity poor Henri was not more. But no matter, he is well enough. However, if— And when one comes to think of it, it's perhaps not unnatural that Leopold of Rhaetia has never been mentioned for you, although there could be nothing against the marriage. What a match for any woman—a supreme one! Not a royal girl but would crown her knees to him if—"

"I wouldn't," said Virginia. "I might worship him, yet he should go on his knees to me."

"I doubt if those proud knees of his will ever bend in homage to man or woman," replied the grand duchess. "But that's a mere fantasy. I'm serious now, darling, and I very much wish you would be."

"Please, I'd rather not," smiled Virginia uneasily. "Let us not talk of the emperor any more—and never again after this, mother. You know now. That's all that's necessary, and—"

"But it's not all that's necessary. You have put the idea into my head, and it's not an unpleasing idea. Besides it has evidently been in your head for a long time, and I should like to see you happy—see you in a position such as you're entitled to grace. You are a very beautiful girl (there's no disguising that from you, as you know you are the image of your grandmother, who was a celebrated beauty), of the best blood in Europe runs in your veins. You are royal, and yet—and yet our circumstances are such that—in fact, for the present we're somewhat handicapped."

"We're beggars," said Virginia, laughing, but it was not a happy laugh.

(To be continued.)

Wrong Cut.

She was one of those fussy fidgety women who are never satisfied. "I don't like the way you have been cutting my steaks," she snapped at the man her gloved finger over the round of beef. "You should cut them as I direct."

"What kind of a cut do you wish, ma'am?" asked the butcher as he sharpened his knife.

"Look out!" he protested. "Madam, you are not buying a bull pup. This is beefsteak."—Chicago News.

The Kind.

[illegible]

"What kind of a chap is he?" asked a friend.

"Oh, sure enough," replied the general. "But has he any sense?"

"Sense!" snorted the general. "He hasn't sense enough to turn around in a revolving chair."

FADS OF THE FAIR.

Some For Pajamas Girls—Tunic Lines Appear on Wraps.

Girls who sleep in pajamas are ordering dainty coat and trousers sets of tan, blue, white or mauve sheer madras, dotted mercerized cotton, challie, wash silk or flowered dimity. They are bound with launderable ribbon and closed with cords and large silk covered buttons.

Many of the most elaborate wraps are assuming draped tunic lines and have taken on knotted and fussiness at the bottom which distinguished tunic models during the past summer.

A novel trimming that appears on even the plainest of the separate coats takes the form of long ...ments of cloth which are arranged in straight lines alternated here and there with a series of curvilinear welts.

Even the baby has come in for his share of pretty styles of [illegible] pique, loved with linen cord, is a [illegible] attractive style for morning wear. Decidedly novel is the use of a small piece of Irish lace that has been left perhaps from some part of the wardrobe and employed as an extra adornment for the suede bootee.

White cut beaver trimmed with white satin and pink rosebuds is the small little bonnet worn by a wee girl this winter. The flat beaver is fluted about the face and tied under the chin with wide white satin strings. Under the brim there is a ruffle of chiffon, and a tiny bunch of the rosebuds is tucked among the chiffon folds.

The long coat is always best for little children, and the model illustrated includes the plaited sides that are so popular in the coats of grownups. Bordeaux red satin with bands of satin makes the coat illustrated.

I desire to let others know what a valuable cure you have in PSYCHINE for it cured me where all other medicines had failed. Decidedly Looking Up.

A story is told of a ready-witted clergyman who was attending at the regular meeting of ministers of the denomination. One of the preachers in a very excited manner, and with strong indignation in his tones, demanded: "What, sir, would the Apostle Paul have said could he have seen the life of luxury led by our present race of prelates and church dignitaries rolling about in their carriages and living in their palatial residences?" "Well," replied the witty clergyman, "I should think he would have remarked that things in the church are decidedly looking up."

It Eases Pain—Ask any druggist or dealer in medicines what is the most popular of the medicines for pains in the joints, ... or for neuralgia and rheumatism, and he will tell you that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is in greater demand than any other. The reason for this is that it possesses greater healing qualities than any other oil.

A UNIQUE EXPERIMENT.

Boiling and Freezing Water at the Same Time.

The possibility of boiling and freezing water at the same time in the laboratory is one of the most interesting developments of modern science. The temperature at which water boils depends simply on the air pressure above its surface at the time. If there is high pressure the water has to be made a good deal hotter to boil than at low pressure.

On mountains where the air pressure is a good deal lower than at sea level water boils easily at low temperature. In cooking vegetables that require a certain degree of heat and where the water boils before that degree is reached the vegetables will not get done. They consequently have to be put into a closed boiler so that the generated steam will create enough pressure for the water to boil at or beyond the required temperature. In the experimental proof of this fact water is placed in a vessel and the air exhausted from above the surface of the water. As the process of pumping goes on the water will violently boil, the steam congealing on the sides of the exhaust vessel. If the pumping is [illegible] long enough and the outside is [illegible] below the freezing point of water the water will continue to boil and [illegible] till it is frozen into a snowy mass of ice.

This fact is also made use of in taking a rough test of the height of a mountain. Ordinarily at sea level where the pressure is about thirty inches of mercury water boils at 212 degrees F. Now, if it is noticed that at a certain place it boils at a few degrees lower the height of that place can be easily ascertained by comparison with a table made out for this purpose. In general for every degree the boiling takes place under 212 a height of about 500 feet is counted.

Of course these principles do not apply to water alone, but are characteristic of all liquids.—New York Tribune.

FISH LOCOMOTION.

The Nature and Functions of the So Called Air Bladders.

Leaning over the parapet of some old stone breakwater or ... head and watching the fish playing about in the clear green depths below, perhaps the last thought which is likely to occur to any of us is that we are looking on at a really astonishing thing. That a fish is able to propel itself through the water in any desired direction is in no way surprising, but that it can change its level at will, rising or falling without the use of its fins, and instantly assuming a horizontal or vertical position, according to the mood or need of the moment, is a fact that a little reflection will soon develop into prime motive for wonder.

For it is clear that the fish must be able at will to vary its weight in relation to the water it displaces. When it sinks to the bottom it must have suddenly rendered itself heavier than the medium it inhabits, each time it rises to the surface like a released cork, head first, tail pointing almost vertically downward, it must not only have transformed itself into something lighter than the water but must have become lighter in its fore parts than in its tail.

The mystery, for such it undoubtedly is on a casual survey, says the London Chronicle, resolves itself immediately we come to study the nature and functions of the so called air bladder in fishes. By this contrivance all these intricate movements of the fish are brought about.

The bladder, however, contains not air, as is commonly supposed, but gas, which is discharged or regenerated by certain organs of the fish, according to whether upward or downward movement is necessary. Also either the whole length of the bladder or only its front or rear portion can be inflated. Thus the fish is able to swim level or, by altering its center of gravity, to raise or lower either head or tail at will.

Singular Services of Sheep.

In the northern part of India sheep are put to a use unthought of in European or American countries. They are made to serve as beasts of burden. The mountain paths along the foothills of the Himalayas are so precipitous that the sheep, more sure footed than larger beasts, are preferred as burden carriers. The load for each sheep is from sixteen to twenty pounds. The sheep are driven from village to village, with the wool still growing, and in each town the farmer shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheep with the grain which he receives in exchange. After the flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each sheep having on its back a small bag containing the purchased grain.

Economy.

Mrs. Stockley—John, do you know that Royal Worcester vase I bought yesterday for £5? Well, they reduced them to £3 this morning. Mr. Stockley—Yes? Then you lost £2 by not waiting until this morning. Mrs. Stockley—No, only £1. I went down today and bought another for £3, making two of them average £4 each.—London Fun.

Bobby's Questions.

Small Bobby—Papa, why can a man run faster than a boy? Papa—Because he is bigger, my boy. Small Bobby (after pondering for a few moments)—Well, if that's the reason, why don't the hind wheels of a wagon run faster than the front wheels?—Chicago News.

HUGO AND THE YOUNG POET.

Praise For His Verses Which the Master Had Not Read.

A Paris contemporary tells a story of Victor Hugo and a young unknown poet. The poet, hailing from the provinces, sent to the author of "Notre Dame de Paris" a copy of his work, which he had just published in the form of a book of poems. Hugo replied in most sympathetic terms, and the young man was delighted with the letter as well he might have been.

His joy, however, was but short lived, for a day or two later his servant announced that the package containing the volume of poems had come back through the post unopened. The package bore the legend "Refused [illegible] ... on account of insufficient postage."

Hugo's letter was [illegible] and in these terms: "Your work has given me a proud pleasure, under the impression of which I hasten to congratulate you. Your fame is young and radiant, mine is declining. It is the salutation of the night which departs at the rising of the dawn. You are shining, and I am dying. You emerge from oblivion, I return there.

"The heart either grows hard or breaks forth. Your sentiments have come forth, and you have written generous and superb poetry which consecrates you as a poet as well as affirming you as man. You are then doubly man from (twice my brother). Accept my admiration as great as my esteem."

SEAWEED.

Several Varieties Are Valuable For Food Purposes.

Seaweed is not [illegible] to look at, but seaweed does hold [illegible] beauty as upon [illegible] substantial merit to make itself worthy of attention. Various species of it are used in manufactures, and several varieties are edible, the most important of the latter being Irish or carrageen moss, used in the preparation of jellies—blancmange, for instance—dulse or dillisk, very highly thought of by Scotland, particularly when roasted by wrapping about hot tongs, and kelp or tangle.

Irish moss and some other species, particularly eel grass and flat stalk rock weed, have been found valuable as cattle food, especially when boiled to destroy the rank taste and mixed with meal. The eel grass and rock weed compare favorably with hay as regards the most important constituent—protein—containing 4.08 and 8.21 per cent respectively. They are deficient in fat, but contain a large amount of ash.

The great bulk of the seaweed gathered, however, is used as a fertilizer, and the average seaweed contains large quantities of all the essential fertilizing elements. Allowing 10 cents a pound for nitrogen, 2 cents a pound for phosphoric acid and 4 cents a pound for potash—and these are as low prices as it is possible to procure these materials in any form—a ton of seaweed containing 80 per cent water is worth as a fertilizer $1.42 a ton.—New York Times.

An Ancient Mountain Race.

The most ancient people still living in the mountains of India are the Todas. Long before the arrival of the other tribes of the region the Todas were the kings of this country, which they held in common without strife or treachery to one another. The Todas are a fine race, tall, well proportioned and with regular features. Their complexion is of a light brown, and their eyes are bright and intelligent. The men wear a linen or cotton garment that resembles a European of the Roman toga. Their bearing is proud and dignified; their countenances are pleasing; their fine straight hair is regularly cut and well kept. Their superior appearance, the mystery that surrounds them and the obscurity of their origin have caused certain students of ethnology to suppose that the Todas are descended from the soldiers of Darius or Alexander the ancient conquerors of India.

Warding Off Nerve Storms

The Antics of a Kitten Offer Relaxation

DOES any one nowadays read Louisa Alcott? If so they will remember Maud, in "An Old-Fashioned Girl," who wanted to be "nervous," because she had been told that she was "fractious," and she felt the weight of the unknown disease heavy upon her!

It seems rather severe in these days of the boasted athletic woman to say that many girls and women work themselves into nervous headaches and hysterics by pure fractiousness, but it seems often the case. Where one is not really ill or on the verge of nervous prostration from exhaustion or overwork there is no excuse for the nerve storms from which some women suffer constantly.

While there is no excuse, however, there may be an explanation, and it is to be found in the petty irritations of little things. Women, always more highly strung than men, lose control of themselves entirely too often for their own good. Though they can meet great crises with perfect calm and command of the situation, the minor annoyances of life leave them utterly unfit to cope with them.

Usually, too, these annoyances are of so simple and unnecessary a character that one wonders how they could have ever occurred. For instance, a real instance may be cited which will be a useful lesson in [illegible]. A woman who was sewing found herself growing more and more irritable. Nothing seemed to go right, and she had almost worried herself into a nervous breakdown when she suddenly realized that for half an hour she had been holding a pen [illegible] between her teeth. There had been no [illegible] for this, and the unconscious tension had strained every nerve, bringing her unconsciously almost to the verge of nervous tears.

MAKE YOURSELF COMFORTABLE

One of the first rules for warding off nerve storms is to make one's self as comfortable as possible [illegible]

A Sewing Chair that is too High Causes Nervous Tension

... an alliance between Leopold and you or if we have already disposed of your hand. At last the emperor is inclined to listen to his chancellor's advice and marry and you as a Protestant princess'—

"A Protestant princess, indeed!" cried Virginia. "I protest against being [illegible] terms."

The [illegible] grand duchess was [illegible] thoughts [illegible]

[illegible]

"And so altogether, my references being satisfactory, at a pinch I might do for the place," cut in Virginia, with the hot, impatient rebellion of her youth. "Oh, mother, you think me mad or a fool, I know, and perhaps I am mad, yet not mad enough not to see that it would be a great thing, a wonderful thing, to be asked in marriage by the one man in my world if—oh, that great 'if'—he had only seen and fallen in love with me. It might have happened, you know. As you say, I'm not ugly, and I can be rather pleasant if I choose—so I believe. If he had only come to this land to see what I was like, as royal men did in the dear old fairy stories and then had asked me to be his wife, why, I should have been conceited enough to think it was because he loved me even more than because of other things. Then I should have been happy—yes, dear, I'll confess it to you now—almost happy enough to die of the great joy and triumph of it. But now I'm not happy. I will marry Leopold or I'll marry no man, but I swear to you I won't be married to Leopold in Count von Breitstein's hateful old, cold, cut and dried way."

"It's the emperor's way as well as Von Breitstein's."

"Then for once in his big, grand, obstinate life he'll have to learn that there's one insignificant girl who won't [illegible] even for the sake of being the empress."

The girl proclaimed this resolve rising to her feet, with her head high and a look in her gray eyes which told the grand duchess that it would be [illegible] At first it was a proud look and a sad look, but suddenly a beam of light flashed into it and began to sparkle and twinkle. Virginia [illegible] and showed her dimples. Her color came and went. In a moment she was a different girl, and her mother bewildered [illegible] still dared to hope something from the change.

"How odd you look!" she exclaimed. "You've thought of something. You are happy. You have the air of having found some plan."

"It found me, I think," the girl answered laughing, "all suddenly, just in a flash. That's the way it [illegible] with inspirations. This is one. I know it. It was in the air floating round me. But I can grasp it now."

She came close to her mother, still [illegible] and knelt down in the grass at her feet looking up with radiance in her eyes.

[illegible]

"You do love me, don't you, dear [illegible]" cooed the princess softly as a dove.

"You know I do, my child, though I don't pretend to understand you," sighed the grand duchess, well aware that she was about to be coaxed into some scheme, feeling that she would yield and praying Providence that the yielding might not lead her into tribulation.

[illegible] grow dull if we understand [illegible]," said Virginia. "It's like [illegible] a puzzle—there's no more [illegible] when it's finished. But you [illegible] to be happy, darling?"

[illegible] I wish for anything else, [illegible] of course, dear Hal's"—

[illegible]

"Of course I will," said the grand duchess [illegible] of her pretty little [illegible] by the warmth of kisses soft and sweet as the roses on Virginia's [illegible]

"That [illegible] I will if I can. But I don't at all see what I can do."

"I see. And what I want you to do is to [illegible] see with my eyes."

"They're very bright ones," smiled her mother.

Princess Virginia clasped the grand duchess round the waist so tightly that it hurt. Then she laughed a loud, half frightened excited laugh. "Dearest, something perfectly wonderful is going to happen to you and me," she said—"the most wonderful thing that ever has happened. We are going to have a—great—adventure. And what the end of it will be—I don't know."

(To be continued.)

Which Leg?

In a small town in the west of Scotland the town clerk, who was a bit of a "character," had the misfortune to lose his leg in a railway accident. As a mark of appreciation and esteem for his long services the council unanimously agreed to replace his loss with an artificial limb, which they did as soon as he was sufficiently recovered. A few months afterward the town clerk, who was generally known by his Christian name, Paul, was unfortunate enough to have his other leg fractured in an accident. Naturally the mishap became food for town gossip, and one old wife in discussing the matter with a neighbor was overheard saying:

"It's a gey bad business for Paul, puir men, but is't his ain leg or the leg that belangs to the toon that's broken?"

Oxygen.

Oxygen forms one-fifth of the atmosphere, eight-ninths of the waters and, taking all together, one-half of all the materials of the globe, so far as they are known. As carbon is the basis of all the organic substances of the world, so oxygen, the supporter of life and combustion, represents its living energies.

Tiny Parasites.

Since the Dutch philosopher Leeuwenhoek discovered that the pupa of the flea was sometimes preyed on by the larva of a mite it has been well known that various small insects have their external parasites.

The River Jordan.

The Jordan is the "Descender." During its course it falls over [illegible] feet. At no point is it navigable even by a small craft to any considerable distance and presents the unique spectacle of a river which has never been navigated flowing into a sea which contains not one living creature.

Humming Birds.

The humming bird, of which about 400 species have been recognized, is so called because of the humming sound which is produced by the rapid vibration of the wings.

Why Water Won't Fry.

Why cannot we fry in water? Because water can only be heated to the boiling point, 212 degrees, and any additional heat does not increase its temperature. Two hundred and twelve degrees of heat will not brown the surface of anything. Fat, on the contrary, can be made much hotter, the temperature depending on the fluid.

Money Postcards.

They remit money by postcard in Italy most conveniently. The sum in stamps is stuck on a postcard, the stamps are canceled, and their cash value is promptly paid the recipient at the other end.

Abandoned Cisterns.

An abandoned cistern is often a dangerous thing and should be dried as stagnant water which may remain in it is a common source of disease. If this cannot be done at once it is a good plan to throw in proper disinfectants and gradually fill it up with sifted coal ashes.

The Lotus.

The lotus [illegible] to be the same [illegible] a [illegible] of white water [illegible] red in Egypt as typifying the [illegible] of the world and was sacred to the gods Osiris and Isis.

THE MERCHANTS' BANK

REPORT OF THE 46th ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS.

The annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Merchants' Bank of Canada was held on Wednesday, December 15th, at the head offices, 205 St. James street, Montreal. The chair was taken at noon by Sir H. Montagu Allan, the President.

Mr. J. M. Kilbourn, Secretary of the Bank, was appointed Secretary of the meeting, and read the notice calling the meeting.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were taken as read, after which the President presented the report of the Directors, as follows:—

THE DIRECTORS' REPORT

The Directors have pleasure in submitting the report of the Merchants Bank of Canada covering the year's business up to the close of books on 30th of November, for the information and approval of the shareholders.

The net profits amount to $931,150.57, equal to 15.85 per cent. upon the capital, as against $759,867.19 or 12.30 per cent. for the previous year. We hope you will consider this a good return, and from present indications we feel safe in saying that the outlook is promising for equally good results [illegible] We are loath, however, to predict, for we all know how easily it may turn out otherwise, so many factors come into its calculation.

The past year's earnings have been dealt with as follows: After paying [illegible] at the rate of 8 per cent. we have written down our bank [illegible] $30,000 to the Officers' Pension Fund, leaving a balance [illegible] of $301,150.57. This sum added to the amount brought forward [illegible] $500,000 to the Reserve Fund, making [illegible] 75 per cent. of the capital, and to carry forward a balance in the Profit and Loss Account of $102,157.51.

All the branches of the Bank have been inspected during the year. [illegible] Saskatchewan; Carter, Mannvill, Viking, [illegible] Alberta; Nanaimo, New Westminster and [illegible] B.C. We have also opened four sub-agencies [illegible] Meadowvale [illegible] Murdoch [illegible] and Botha, Alta. We have closed the Fort Saskatchewan Office.

We are asking you to authorize us to apply to the Dominion Government for power to increase the capital stock of the Bank by issuing at a [illegible] new shares equal to $4,000,000. We are not [illegible] to issue this stock now, but think it desirable in your interest to take this power.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. MONTAGU ALLAN, President.

His Home-coming

How He Found His Grandmother and What He Did For Her.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

It was the hour of noon. A tall, sallow faced man sat on the barnyard wall, gazing over his rocky fields with slow, speculative eyes. He had finished his dinner and was now waiting for the help.

Every few minutes he glanced impatiently toward the door of the long back kitchen.

At last he muttered something under his breath and slid heavily from the wall. At the same moment he saw a boy approaching.

"Does Mrs. Carter live here?" the boy asked briskly as he paused in front of the man.

"She's stayin' here just now," was the answer. "I guess you'll find her in the house."

The boy walked on past the barnyard and up the clam shelled lined path to the front door of the old farmhouse.

"Is Mrs. Carter in?" he asked of the little old woman who opened the door.

"Round in the kitchen, eatin' her dinner," was the mumbling answer. "Men folks eat fust here. Who be ye?"

But the boy had already left the step and was on his way round to the kitchen.

The door was partly open, and he could see a long table, around which were seated a dozen or more old women and children. He knocked gently and repeated his question.

A sweet faced old woman rose and came to the door.

"I am Mrs. Carter," she said pleasantly. "What do you wish?"

But the boy could not answer.

He felt all those curious eyes upon him, and there was a lump in his throat and a terror of something he could not understand.

"I—I wish to see you," he stammered at length.

"Very well. Suppose we go into the sitting room. We can talk better there."

He followed her through the long kitchen into a big square room that was scantily furnished. The old woman motioned him to a chair by the window where the light rested full upon his face.

"Now," she began, then stopped, and a strange look came into her eyes.

"Who are you?" she asked in a troubled voice. "I am getting old and do not remember as I used to. But I have seen you somewhere."

He rose from the chair.

"No, you have never seen me before," he replied, "but folks used to say that I looked like father. I am John Carter. Why don't you welcome me, grandmother?"

She trembled and gazed at him eagerly.

"John's boy—come home?" she said vaguely. Then a flush came into her faded cheeks and a glad light into her eyes. "And has—has John come?" she asked.

"My father died last fall." The boy's voice was very calm, but in it was a depth of pain which he strove vainly to conceal. "His last wish was for me to come home. He said there had been some misunderstanding between him and Uncle Richard, but that his death would make it all right and that I would be welcome. Is Uncle Richard here?"

"Richard died many years ago. He told me the whole story and wanted John's forgiveness. Poor Richard! Poor John!"

In the dim old eyes was a freshening of the old pain, and the boy saw it, and his own face grew wistful and sympathetic.

"Dear grandmother!" he said softly.

The old woman smiled and tried to rouse herself.

"You and I are all there is left," she said. "We will not speak of the quarrel any more. They have made it up before this." Then she took his strong young hand between her two wrinkled ones and stroked it tenderly. "How did you find me, Jacky?" she asked, using the pet name she had given his father many years before.

"A man on the road told me that you lived in the big house by the pond. It was easy to find."

"And did you come all the way from Mexico alone?"

"Yes. I am used to traveling. I did not mind it much, except for its being lonely. I missed father. We—we were almost always together."

The brave eyes held back their tears, but she could feel his hand tremble in her grasp.

A cheap clock on the shelf began to strike shrilly, but after two or three spasmodic efforts it began to quaver and finally stopped altogether.

The old woman smiled.

"It is old and decrepit, just like everything else about the place," she remarked sadly.

John looked at her inquiringly.

"What does it all mean?" he asked. "Things do not seem as as I expected. Father told me about Maplewood and the long avenue and fine old trees. I looked for them when I was coming up the lane and thought maybe they had been cut down. I fancied I should know the place, but it all seems so strange." Then something in her face made him ask suddenly, "Is it Maplewood?"

"Maplewood—this? Oh, John, John, don't you know—haven't you heard?" All the color was gone from her cheeks now, and her face was white and piteous. "Did you come all the way from Mexico to find such a welcome as this? How thankful I am that your father did not know!"

"But what is it, grandmother? You must tell me everything. You and I are all there is left, and you must let me help you. What is it about Maplewood?"

"It was sold long ago. Your Uncle Richard owed money and let the dear old place go. It took everything. Poor Richard!"

The boy's own face had grown colorless now; a terrible suspicion was in his mind.

"What place is this?" he asked fearfully.

"The poorhouse. Oh, Jacky, Jacky!"

But with that heartbroken cry in his ears the boy forgot everything else—all his hopes and expectations and longings.

"Never mind, grandmother," he said lovingly. "You have me, and I am almost a man. I will soon make another home for you."

"Poor Jacky boy! You are young yet and do not know how hard the world is. And it is more for you than myself I care."

"I am seventeen," he answered sturdily as he drew his strong young figure to its full height. "I went with father to his work in the mountains every day, and he said I was the strongest boy of my age he ever saw. I shall soon make a nice home for you."

"Never mind its being nice, Jacky. A hovel or woodshed—anything to get away from here. And it will not cost so much to live. You have no idea how little we can get along with—we two." Her eyes were shining now, and the color was coming back into her cheeks. "I—I was afraid that I should have to live here always."

When the rest of the women began to file in from the kitchen the two were standing by the window, talking earnestly.

John picked up his hat.

"I'll come and see you as often as I can, grandmother," he said as he moved toward the door, "and it will not be long before I have a home for you."

As he went down the lane he could not help contrasting his prospects with those of the boy who had passed there a short half hour before.

He thought of the long talks that he and his father had had about his future—the studies and college life and the work to be done afterward.

Neither of them had ever dreamed of the possibility of his relatives being unable to provide for him. And here he was penniless and his supposed wealthy grandmother in the poorhouse.

He almost felt glad that his father was dead and could not know.

At the head of the lane he paused and glanced back at the rambling farmhouse and its outbuildings.

"Poor grandmother!" he said aloud. "I must not keep her waiting very long."

Although it was still March the sun was hot and the snow nearly gone. Here and there in the fields he could see farmers beginning their spring work—picking up stones and mending the walls and fences.

After awhile he went across to one of the groups and asked for work. But he was too late. The farmer had already hired all the help he wanted. A little farther on he tried again. At last he found a man who said he was just the sort of boy he had been looking for.

One day in the latter part of April a farm wagon drove up to the [illegible] house, and a boy sprang lightly to the ground.

Sitting on the stone wall was the same man he had met before, [illegible] across the barnyard were [illegible] of the dinner bands.

"I've come for Mrs. Carter," said the boy respectfully.

The man took a straw from his mouth.

"Well, I don't mind," he answered gruffly. "D'ye think you can support her?"

"Yes."

"Where ye goin'?"

"I'm working on the Taylor farm, and we're going to have the little house in the lower pasture."

"That!" contemptuously. "Nobody's lived in it for years. [illegible] fit to live in."

"I've fixed up a couple of rooms so they'll do very well," replied the boy quietly, "and Mr. Taylor says he will have it repaired before another winter. He isn't going to charge us any rent until he has it fixed."

"Shouldn't think he would. What does he pay you?"

"Three dollars a week and lets me have a big garden where I raise all the vegetables I want."

"H'm! Well, that's pretty fair wages for a boy. If [illegible] cost I guess ye can rub along. An' I calc'late the old lady will be mighty glad to get away."

He watched the boy as he went across the yard and into the house. Then he buttoned his [illegible] into the field.

When the old farm wagon rolled down the lane he was [illegible] in his line wall, but he [illegible] to straighten up and gaze at the [illegible] rode away.

FARMERS JOIN TOGETHER

National Council of Agriculture Organized - An Important Body

Prince Albert, Sask., Feb. 12—After the close of the final session of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers Grain convention yesterday afternoon a meeting was held of the executive with the representatives from Manitoba, Alberta and the Dominion Grange and, in accordance with the resolution passed during the convention, Daniel McCuaig of the Manitoba Grain Growers, was elected president and E. C. Drury, president of the Dominion Grange, secretary of the National Council of Agriculture of the Dominion. There will be in addition to these officers, representatives from each of the three western farmers organizations and the Dominion Grange, probably five from each.

This national council rounds out the eastern and western farmers societies into one national organization, covering the whole Dominion and will doubtless prove in its results to have been the most important work of the 1910 Saskatchewan Grain Growers convention.

Zam-Buk
THE GREAT HERBAL BALM

INJURED FOOT CURED.

POISONED FINGER HEALED.

Did you ever ask yourself "How is it that Zam-Buk is so popular?" It is because it is superior and different to other salves. Contrast them! Most salves are mere dense animal oil or fat. Zam-Buk hasn't a trace of animal fat in it. Most salves contain mineral coloring matter. Zam-Buk is absolutely without! Many salves contain poisonous astringents. Zam-Buk doesn't.

Zam-Buk is actually more powerfully antiseptic than crude carbolic acid. Yet it is perfectly safe. Instead of causing pain and smarting when put on a wound, it heals more quickly than any known substance, and at the same time soothes away pain. Zam-Buk is unequalled for piles, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, cuts, burns, bad legs, bad breasts, abscesses, blood poisoning, scalds, chapped hands, and all skin injuries and diseases. Rubbed on the gums and nostrils, Zam-Buk cures toothache and neuralgia. Rubbed on the chest, it relieves bronchitis and pneumonia. Rubbed on the loins, it cures backache and kidney troubles. Rubbed on the abdomen, it cures constipation and indigestion. Rubbed on the limbs, it cures rheumatism. Rubbed on the body, it prevents infectious diseases. Zam-Buk is a herbal balm containing the essential healing properties of certain herbs which have been found by long experience to be unsurpassed for healing purposes. Zam-Buk is sold by all druggists and stores at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

IF your baking goes wrong, investigate — find the cause. Look to your stove, your yeast, your baking methods.

If you succeed in pinning the trouble down to the flour—then take up the flour question in dead earnest.

Consider that flour, to be successful from a baking standpoint, must be fine to produce light bread or pastry, pure to make that bread or pastry wholesome, and rich in nutriment to make it nourishing.

Ogilvie's Royal Household has these three qualities in the greatest degree.

Ogilvie's Royal Household is milled by the most modern methods, and made only from Manitoba Hard Wheat which contains the highest percentage of nutriment.

The PRACTICAL GIRL and her FADS

A CERTAIN old-fashioned doctrine—that of the "survival of the fittest"—is rapidly losing its force in the present day. Not only are the weak and sickly living longer than they used to, but they are actually becoming stronger and healthier. Medical science is largely responsible for this change, and the people are beginning to realize that the best way to be healthy is to keep well. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine that makes people well by making them strong. It is a tonic and blood purifier of unequalled power. It cures all diseases due to poor blood and weak nerves, no matter of how long standing. It is not a secret remedy, for its full list of ingredients is printed on its bottle-wrapper. It contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drug. Its makers are not afraid to print what it contains, because they know that it cures. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the only medicine of its kind sold through druggists, and has a larger sale than any other medicine of its kind in the world. Don't be persuaded to buy a substitute.

Prize Winning Wheat of A. W. Scott Goes to Chicago - Great Advertisement for District

Sad Death of Leigh Weaver

The people of the Mannville district will be pleased to learn that A. W. Scott of this place secured 2nd prize for the best 5 bu of wheat, $30.00 and 2nd for the best 1 bu. of wheat at the Alberta Seed Fair. The exhibit was bought of him to be taken to Chicago for exhibition purposes. It has therefore been proven that the Mannville district is one of the best districts in Alberta for growing wheat.

Half an hour after the injection the dormouse was nibbling an apple as if nothing had happened. The dormouse weighs only two ounces and the amount of venom he resisted was enough to kill sixteen pounds of such animals as rabbits and guinea pigs.

Imperishable Pavement.

A new paving material devised by a French engineer consists of the iron shavings from lathes and similar machines, which are mixed with cement making a combination which is almost indestructible. In making paving blocks according to this process a mold is filled with these iron shavings and the interstices filled with cement grout sufficiently fluid to penetrate the entire mass. The blocks thus formed are said to possess great strength and resistance to abrasion and also (what seems less credible) elasticity under blows or jarring. Tests made of such blocks are said to have shown a resistance to compression of about 150,000 pounds a square inch and of a tensile strength four times that of best cement.—Chicago Journal.

M. Wassili Safonoff, who has been conducting the Newcastle music festival, is a Russian and famous in both hemispheres as a conductor. [illegible] himself without his [illegible] occasion, he used his hands and was so satisfied with the result that since then he has never returned to the use of the customary stick. "There is no baton," he says, [illegible] players cannot be lazy. They must watch your fingers so carefully. In a few years there will be [illegible] Certainly M. Safonoff, who has often conducted in London, gets wonderful results from an orchestra, but no other conductor in the first rank has yet followed his example in abandoning the baton.—London News.

Paris Wants Dog Meat.

According to a Paris paper the prefecture of police has received numerous applications from persons desirous of selling dog meat. The permits have not been granted, for such trade is not considered lawful. But if the number of applications continues to increase it is said that the police will have to obtain a definite decision on the subject. Horse, it is well known, is sold in commercial cities, but as the Paris authorities observe, there would be an instinctive repugnance to eat the flesh of man's best friend. The flesh is eaten in China and by the Eskimos, but, like that of all carnivorous animals, it is tough.

If you aspire to the newest in millinery trimmings just watch when the cook has her back turned and abstract the shining oilcloth covering from the kitchen table. Then use it as a band on one of your hats, and don't forget to make a flat bow of the oilcloth at the side of the chapeau.

Umbrellas which can be folded to fit into a twenty-four inch dress suit case are the only type which now appeal to the college girl.

Shirred dresses are always pretty for young girls. They are simple and Though so many occasions this practice seems only a useless form, it always implies a highly developed sense of courtesy, a phenomenon which is deplorably rare within family circles.

It would be begging the question to think of knocking before entering the family living room which belongs as much to one member of the family as another, though here, too, it is rather gratifying to enter a house where the maid has been taught to pay her mistress this courtesy.

In too many houses the closed door means nothing; the [illegible] have lost all sense of the value of privacy and the personal rights of others, and they blunder in [illegible] bravely as we enter the corner drug store or the street car.

Sure Proof.

Two young lawyers, members of the bar but a few weeks, had grown rather obstreperous in the office of one of the court clerks.

"Here, you get out of here," said the clerk.

"We don't have to," the more talkative one promptly answered. "We've got a right in here, we're lawyers."

"Ah, go on," the clerk replied, "you are nothing of the kind."

"Sure we are," the spokesman rejoined. [illegible] "Then what are you doing with your sign?"—Success Magazine.

While more prevalent in winter, when sudden changes in the weather try the strongest constitutions, colds and coughs and ailments of the throat may come at any season. At the first sight of derangement use Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. Instant relief will be experienced, and use of the medicine until the cold disappears will protect the lungs from attack. For anyone with throat or chest weakness it cannot be surpassed.

VISIT WITH TRAPPISTS

QUAINT MONASTERY EXISTS AT MISTASSINI.

Agricultural Brotherhood Is Located Away Up Four Hundred Miles From James Bay—Vow of Silence Is Imposed on the Members of the Community, But Some Are Exempted—Old Father Is Blind.

Stevenson in as delightful a little book of travel as one can find anywhere, tells of a visit to a Trappist Monastery, on the borderland between France and Spain. As I read his description of it I little thought it would ever be my good fortune to pay a visit to a similar institution. But the opportunity came and I gladly availed myself of it, says a writer in Canadian Life and Resources.

Within four hundred miles of James Bay, which is the southern extension of Hudson Bay, these enterprising agricultural brothers have established themselves most comfortably, though only a few years have passed since they hewed their way through the vast timber lands that stretch away to the north of the Laurentian Mountains.

Leaving the city of [illegible] behind us on a lovely June evening we were whirled across the St. Charles River and off to the north, [illegible]ing height after height of the mountain range, that runs almost parallel to the St. Lawrence River and which takes its name from it. We reached an altitude of fifteen hundred feet above the level of the St. Lawrence, the sharp curves in the road almost upsetting one's equilibrium. Then we began the descent of twelve hundred feet to the level of Lake St. John. During the whole of the railway journey one's eye is constantly attracted by the noble scenery of lakes and hills, hills and lakes, innumerable, and always beautiful. There are few stoppages on the journey because there are few places at which to stop.

The railway, which is called the Quebec and Lake St. John, is of comparatively recent construction.

During the summer there are two or three ways of reaching the Monastery at Mistassini, but we chose to go by way of Lake St. John. A large side-wheel steamboat, capable of carrying several hundred passengers, having been put at our service, we left Roberval the next morning, soon after sunrise. After a ride of two hours across the lake we reached the mouth of the Peribonka River.

At three of our party consisted of ladies, we were not at all sure of our reception at the monastery. However, we drove boldly in and dismounted in the stable-yard and stood waiting for developments. It was some time before any one appeared, the brothers being all at work in the fields, with the exception of those who were in entire seclusion. Our genial friend, the M.P. for Chicoutimi, who had been to the monastery before, [illegible]

C.P.R. EXTENSIONS FOR YEAR

Will Build 621 Miles in West 45 Miles for Alberta

Montreal, Feb. 21.— William Whyte, second vice-president of the Canadian Pacific at Winnipeg today announced the company's programme of Western Improvements, settled during his recent conferences with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. They are extensive including some 621 miles, divided between Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, much of it being colonization lines and links to connect already existing lines. The programme announced included some 346 miles in Saskatchewan, 45 in Alberta, 174 in British Columbia, and 56 in Manitoba, the latter double tracking from Winnipeg to Portage la Prairie. A big bridge will be built over the South Saskatchewan at Outlook, which will be a very large structure taking a year or more to build. While all this programme may not be completed this year energetic work will be carried on in all directions. Details are not yet settled, and Mr. Whyte will remain in Montreal some days before his conferences with the officials are ended.

In Alberta the programme includes a line running north from Langdon which already extends 30 miles to [illegible] in the [illegible] country. This will be extended 15 miles eastern to give further facilities to settlers in the irrigation block, and eventually be carried north to connect Red Deer with the Calgary and Edmonton line.

Another line will be built on the Kipp extension west of the Belly River viaduct [illegible]

He leaves a widow [illegible] grown up family to mourn [illegible] loss; most of whom are residents of this district. The interment took place on Feb. 17th in the cemetery. The funeral service was conducted in the Presbyterian church by the Rev. A. McLennan resident minister and Mr. McLellan, a former minister of this church. A large number of sympathizing friends were present at the service, which was very impressive. The chief mourners were the widow, Mr. Dan Jameson, Mrs. Wright, Mr. Duncan Jameson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bewcroft, Mr. D. Gilchrist. Mrs. Jameson and family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.

The fire engine has just arrived and a fire brigade has been formed, of which Mr. F. Philcox is appointed Captain, and Mr. S. Fyfe Lieutenant. Upon arrival, the apparatus was given a test, and worked satisfactorily. Other practices however are necessary in order to have each man accustomed to his position. The contract for wells has been let, and the work is well under way.

The Carnival which was to have been held at the rink on the 18th was postponed on account of severe weather. The date set for the same now is Feb. 25th.

The hockey team were entertained to a supper by Mr. and Mrs. S. M. M[illegible] at their residence on Feb. 1[illegible]. An excellent supper was served, after which a very pleasant time was spent. In fact nothing would have given the boys more pleasure, except the return match which Vermilion was to have given them.

A variety entertainment was given in the Massey Hall on Feb. 16th by the Happy Hooligan company. There was a fairly large audience, and the entertainment proved to be quite enjoyable.

Word has been received from Mr. H. A. Edwards that he and Mrs. Edwards set sail on March 1[illegible]th. It is expected they will arrive in Islay early in April.

Mr. J. C. M[illegible] shipped in another car of work horses on the 21st. This is the second car during the month.

Want of Confidence Motions

Later in the session, on the call for motions other than government J. R. Boyle, Sturgeon, gave notice that on Wednesday he would move a resolution, the purport of which was to expropriate the rights of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway Company and build the line by a commission of three members of the Legislature or otherwise. This resolution, which is equivalent to a want of confidence vote in the administration, will likely bring about the first division of the House for this session and will indicate the strength of the opposition on this much-discussed question.

CHAPTER THREE

[illegible]

"Don't be absurd, my poor dear. We're absolutely safe. ... I may be a selfish wretch, but I wouldn't for the world have brought you into danger. ... It's easier than turning back. ... In ten minutes you'll be at the top of the cut."

"You may as well tell me that I'll be in my grave. It amounts to the same thing," wailed Miss Manchester, who was, in the sphere of happier duties, Miss Letitia Portman and had been the princess' governess. "I can't look down, I can't look up, because I keep thinking of the unspeakable things behind. After I get my breath and have become resigned to my fate I may be comparatively comfortable ... but, as to stirring either way, there's no use dreaming ..."

"Well, you'll make an ideal hermit, ..." said Virginia. "You've exactly the right features for that profession, austere, yet benevolent. But you're not really afraid now?"

"Not so much, sitting down," admitted Miss Portman, slowly regaining her natural color.

"Do you think, then, dear, that you'd collapse and lose your head or anything if I just strolled on alone to the ..."

person, and Virginia knew that Miss Portman was safe and not half as much frightened as she pretended.

They had started at it, just as the ... sun had begun to draw the ... out of the keen mountain air, and now it was ... and the princess was hungry.

[illegible]

The place could be gained only by a ... over a ledge of formidable rocks ... here and there, yet if the thing could be done at all it could be done in ten minutes, and to come back would be comparatively easy. Virginia was tempted.

"The dear Letitia will be eating her own lunch by this time and won't miss me if my half hour is a long one," she thought. "And, anyway, I said half an hour or so. That means almost anything when it comes to an argument."

Another moment and the girl had started. She was brave at first, but when she had gone halfway—a way which was longer and far more difficult than she had fancied ...

He had run across the plateau. Now the nailed boots were ringing on rock. She could gaze down upon his head, he was so close to her. He was looking up. What a noble face it was—better than all the pictures! And the eyes—

Virginia was suddenly and wildly happy. She could have sung for joy, a song of triumph, and, tossing her head a little, she lost her scant foothold as well, slipped, tried to hold on, failed and slid down the steeper sloping rock.

there was room in her thoughts for ... dreadful ... might have been. ... the one man sent to her by destiny, when if this thing had not been meant since the hour of her birth it might easily have been some mere tourist sent by Cook?

All her life had but led up to this moment. Under the soft hat of green felt adorned with the beard of a chamois was the face she had seen in dreams. A dark, austere young face it was, with more of Mars than Apollo in its lines, yet to her more desirable than all the ideals of all the sculptors since the world began. He was dressed as a chamois hunter, and there was nothing in the well worn, almost shabby, clothes to distinguish the wearer from the type he chose to represent ...

Queer Yuletide Custom Which Promises Never to Become Unpopular.

The terms, "Christmas time" and "kissing time," are regarded as synonymous in several parts of England. The custom used to prevail in scores of business establishments but of late years, somehow or other, the idea is not looked upon as kindly as of yore. In some of the Lancashire factories some of the more daring maidens have been known to "get their ... proper" round the neck and kiss him, but the risks are great. If he takes the kissing ... he will give the girl some ... for a Christmas gift ... will part with the kisser. HE PAINTS IN BED.

James Orrock Is a Busy Artist at Eighty Years.

In a screen guarded bed on the top floor of 48 Bedford Square, London, lives one of the most wonderful men in London. He was the friend of Ruskin and of dozens of other men who have made art history; while to-day his bedroom is a Mecca for picture buying Americans and everybody in the modern English art movement.

His name is James Orrock. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, at the end of October, 1829, so he is 80 years old. For the last three years rheumatic gout, his bitterest enemy, has kept him in bed but, though it has triumphed over his body, his spirit and will have proved invulnerable. Two of the most successful pictures at the present exhibition of the Royal Institute of Painters in Oil—"Drovers Crossing Sands at Holy Island," and "... at Chapel, Lancashire"—are from the brush of this bedridden veteran of 80. For James Orrock is an artist. And he is a collector as well, to say nothing of being a surgeon, a lecturer, a writer and the greatest Turner expert ever known ...

All day long, propped up in bed with comfortable pillows, James Orrock paints pictures that may one day be as eagerly sought after by collectors as the work of his great master, Turner. There is absolutely nothing in these brilliant masterpieces in oil and water color to suggest the invalid or the man of 80. ...

FILLS IMPORTANT POST

MR. WARBURTON IS HIGHLY VALUED PARLIAMENTARIAN.

New Chairman of the Standing Committee of the House of Commons Is One of the Most Prominent Liberals of the East—Was Premier of Prince Edward Island in 1897—Has Degrees From King's College.

Mr. A. B. Warburton, M.P. for Queen's, P.E.I., who has just been elected chairman of the standing committees of the House of Commons, replacing Mr. Clarke of Essex, is one of the leading Liberal politicians of the Maritime Provinces and for a number of years has been conspicuous in the public life of Prince Edward Island. He was the Premier of the ... Ministry of Prince Edward Island, forming a Government on the resignation of Hon. Mr. Peters in October, 1897. He is a son of the late ... James Warburton, who was a member of the first administration after the granting of responsible Government in Prince Edward Island, and was subsequently from time to time held the offices of Provincial Secretary and Provincial Treasurer in the different Liberal Governments which followed.

Mr. Warburton was born at Charlottetown, P.E.I., April 5, 1852, and was educated at the Summerside

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, and the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yates, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

"BEAR GARDEN," STRAND, W.C.

There Lawyers and Litigants Make the Day Hideous.

Of course, it is called the "Bear-garden" because of its noise. It is a hall—of hubbub—at the Law Courts, where gather lawyers and their clerks, engaged in little legal skirmishes preliminary to the hearing proper.

The Bear-garden justifies its name just now. Lawyers are hurrying. The Law Courts will be closed presently for a holiday; preliminary proceedings are being diligently prosecuted therefore, so that actions may be placed high up in the "List of Actions Pending," and thus have a hearing early in the New Year. The Bear-garden is thronged accordingly.

Suppose that a plaintiff wants his defendant to swear an affidavit relating to the subject matter of the action. His solicitor attends at the Bear-garden at an appointed time for the purpose of obtaining an order commanding the defendant to "swear" such an affidavit. The solicitor does not know his opponent by sight, so he yells out: "Catchem and Fleecem—Catchem and Fleecem!" Dozens of other solicitors are similarly calling out, each inquiring for his opponent, whose facial presentment is unknown to him. This must necessarily be so, since there are several hundred solicitors in London.

Messrs. Catchem & Fleecem are late—not unusual here, for eleven or eleven-thirty is considered good time for a ten-thirty appointment—but they arrive at last, and hear their name.

"You Tape & Co.?" they inquire, and are assured that that firm's representative is there. Both of them then go into a room leading off from the Bear-garden where the Master sits—the Master being the autocrat who decides these preliminary points.

A great deal of this work is quite formal, and, in most offices is left to the most junior of juniors.

Young, astute solicitors hurry across the Bear-garden. Clerks, too, hopeful and hopeless. The dregs of the profession are found here—shabby, unshaven, decrepit clerks, who have not "got on," and there seems something very hopeless about an unsuccessful lawyer's clerk. There are many of them to be found in the Bear-garden.

DOCTORS FAILED, RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna.

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me.

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it.

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me.

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment.

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

"I want some more chicken," said a little girl at dinner.

"I think you have had as much as is good for you, dear," reproved her mother. "You can't have any more now, but here is a wishbone. You may pull with me. Whoever gets the longer end will have her wish come true. Why, baby, you've got it. What is your wish?"

"Some more chicken," said the child.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Hon. Mr. Cushing appears to have resigned as minister of public works in the government of Alberta for two reasons. For the past few months he has [illegible] that in name only was he a minister, not having [illegible] the confidence [illegible]. Further, he [illegible] the interests of the province [illegible] least, are not safeguarded by the government in the agreement between the province and the Alberta and Great Waterways railway.

The resignation of Mr. Cushing has, and continues to cause intense excitement as [illegible] many predictions have been made as to the outcome [illegible] far as to assert that the [illegible] will wreck the government and that Mr. Cushing will be asked upon to form a government before the end of the session.

From the opening of the session the feeling of unrest was apparent in the government ranks, and no time was lost in formulating a long list of questions bearing directly upon government deals. J. R. Boyle, the clever young member for Sturgeon, seems to be directing this attack.

The contract with the Alberta and Great Waterways railway gives a bonus of $20,000 a mile, payable in full at the end of each ten miles. The specifications are said to be of a cheap [illegible] John Stocks, the deputy [illegible] of public works, estimated [illegible] to cost [illegible] pany [illegible] whole road [illegible] as the cost of construction [illegible] the amount of the bonus [illegible] [illegible]

Secretary Gets a Raise of Salary—Standard Given Printing for 1910

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held in the office of the secretary on Monday night. All the members were present excepting the Mayor, who was unable to attend through illness.

Coun. Rosebrough was moved to the chair and discharged the functions of the position in his able and creditable manner.

The greater portion of the business transacted was of a routine nature. A number of communications were read and disposed of and the usual number of monthly [illegible] passed.

The secretary's request for an increase of salary was favorably passed upon and he will receive [illegible] $480.00, which covers [illegible] as assessor as [illegible]. We have seen that the high cost of living is traceable largely to the failure to the production of various agricultural products to keep pace with the nation's growth in population, especially city population. The West is rapidly increasing the size of its wheat crop, and the shortage is noticeable chiefly in garden stuffs, and in livestock, poultry and [illegible] products. Market garden "truck," butter, eggs and meat are far too dear. The obvious remedy is to make the farm and particularly the market garden and chicken run, yield a larger output. "Back to the land" and "Intensive agriculture" are the approved cure.—Toronto News.

Interest Is Unabated

Edmonton, Alta. Feb. 16.—The interest in the Cabinet muddle incident to the resignation of Hon. W. A. Cushing, minister of public works, as a result of the government guaranteeing $7,000,000 bonds of the Alberta and Great Waterways railway continues unabated.

This is what is said to be the meat of the contract:

1. Roadbed to be of loam ballast and 56 pound rails, same as Crow's Nest.

2. Company to be paid full amount of $20,000 a mile at the end of each ten miles completed.

3. If the full 350 miles of the road of the A. G. W. is built for less than the contract price, the difference to be given to the company upon the completion of the road.

4. Spurs to be paid for at the rate of $20,000 a mile.

Wedding at Brimpton

Popular Catechist Married in the Old Country

(Extract from Reading and Newbury News, England Jan. 22nd 1910.)

On the 18th inst. at St. Peter's Church Brimpton, which was prettily decorated with white flowers for the occasion, Miss Evelyn M. Keene, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Keene of The Cottage, Brimpton, was married to Mr. Harold A. Edwards of Islay, Alberta, Canada. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Basil Edwards, rector of Ashleworth Gloucestershire, father of the bridegroom, and the Rev. Charles Taylor, Vicar of the parish, and the hymns were nicely sung by members of the village choir. Mr. Du Bois presiding at the organ. The bride who was given away by her father was charmingly gowned in soft white satin embroidered with pearls some beautiful old lace on the bodice, and a fine net veil covered a small wreath of orange blossoms in her hair. She carried lilies of the valley, and a quaint little pearl embroidered satin bag which had been carried by her grandmother at her wedding.

The bridegroom was supported by Mr. T. H. M. Keene of Vermilion Alberta, brother of the bride and schoolfellow and friend of many years standing of Mr. Edwards. The bridesmaids were five in number, Miss Kathleen M. Keene, sister, Miss Doris Robinson, Miss Freda Page Penney, cousins of the bride, Miss Elsie Seth Smith, cousin of the bridegroom, and Miss Eula Feel. They wore prettily [illegible] [illegible]

Ravages of Consumption

ALL HER RELATIVES HAD DIED OF CONSUMPTION.

In the year 1890, 18 years ago, Mrs. C. S. Comer, of Petite ..., N.S., was in a sad condition. All her relatives had died of consumption, and there was every indication that she was going the same way.

At this point her husband suggested to try Psychine. The doctor who attended said Psychine was worthless, but it effected a wonderful cure. Eighteen years after in a letter bearing date August 14, 1908, Mrs. Comer says, "I am better than I have been for years. My lungs have not troubled me since I took your treatment. My physician told me I could not take a better tonic than PSYCHINE, and I recommend it to all who are suffering from Lung Trouble and General Debility."

DON'T COUGH!

Every time you cough it means that Nature is dislodging phlegm from the delicate membranes of the throat or lungs. In doing so that membrane becomes inflamed, strained — maybe broken. There's the danger point! Broken tissue means letting down the body's defences against disease — germs await just such an entrance — Consumption itself starts that way. Don't take that chance. Shiloh's Cure loosens coughs — removes phlegm — allays all inflammation in the breathing tract — builds up and heals damaged tissue — puts the throat and lungs in a state of robust health. The Perfect Service Table

"The Service Plate"

"Black Coffee Follows the Guests to the Drawing Room"

MY ATTENTION has been drawn of late to the large number of what we are in the habit of calling "really nice" people who are servantless. I do not mean now those I have spoken of several times as "the half-way poor," borrowing the phrase from a magazine article. Still less do I refer to "reduced" families who are compelled to retrench even painfully in the style of living to which they were accustomed in bygone days. There are settled all over prosperous and well-kept neighborhoods families in easy circumstances that cannot command skilled domestic labor. Spacious and well-appointed dwellings in the fringe of handsome suburban towns are kept in perfect order and the domestic machinery is run the year round with no "hired help." The washing is put out or a laundress comes for a couple of days per week to get that part of the work out of the way. For the rest, mother and daughters are responsible. I know dozens of such homes so smooth is the action of the machine of daily living that the deficiency in the matter of servants is hardly perceptible to the casual visitor. It is only when the refined women who have reduced housewifery to a fine art would receive friends in more ceremonious fashion than in the afternoon call and informal ... to tea or luncheon that there is a jar in the aforesaid ...

"It irks me to accept invitations to luncheons and dinners when I cannot reciprocate the courtesy in kind," said one frank-spoken matron to me. "And my girls feel it even more keenly. Let me tell you what nearly killed your ... Weitmar, ... German laundress, has proved so obliging and capable in her own line that my daughters were ready to believe that she could follow their directions in playing waitress at a small dinner party they felt committed to give for some southern visitors in the neighborhood. They are charming people, and my girls received much hospitality from them while they were in Charleston last winter.

"The good soul is not ill looking, and she was ready to sport cap and apron, and to learn all the young ladies would teach her about the business of the table. They drilled her faithfully and were satisfied with the result of the rehearsal.

"Well, the company assembled and were got to the table in good form. The first three courses were served and removed without misadventure. When Mrs. Weitmar saw us fall to work upon the piece de resistance, she apparently counted upon a period of comparative inaction. Whereupon she seated herself upon a chair in one corner of the dining room, keeping us well in sight in case she should be needed, and fanned herself ...

"1. Where is the serving table placed and what is put on it?

"2. When is salad served, and may coffee be passed with the latter?

"4. Are vegetables put into small individual dishes?

"5. Are butter knives used at all?

... whether ... with me ... who should do the carving?

"All this may sound very childish, but it means much to us. Maybe it will help others who know no more than we do."

TWO CALIFORNIA GIRLS

And there are hundreds of others. I am thinking of them as well as of you while I try to answer your frank queries.

1. Unless you have a regular waitress or a maid-of-all-work who can change courses and pass dishes it would be well for one of you girls to perform this office. Not your mother, ... At the conclusion of each course one of the daughters ... and remove the plates and the dishes from the table ... another. Have near at hand a large tray covered with a napkin to which you transfer the plates as you remove them. When all are upon it lift the tray and carry it ... Bring back the next course on the same tray. Set it upon the ... table and take the plates in order ... setting them before the guests ...

Ye Olde Thyme Concerte

Ye people of ye town of Vermilion. The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give their anniversary concert on the evening of St. Patricks Day, March 17, in the Alexandra School Hall. The above name is suggestive of many good things in store for those fortunate enough to go. Further announcements later.

A birthday party was given by Mrs. A. Fox, Thursday, for master Willie, who celebrated his seventh year. A number of little folks were present and spent a happy and joyous time.

One of our ladies invited a few friends in to dinner the first of this week. The hostess insisted that one of the guests take another plate of pork and beans. "Why," he said, "I've had two already, but it's really such nicely cooked pork and beans I believe I will take another plate." "Ma's won," exclaimed the little boy at his side. "Ma's won! She said she'd bet a dollar you'd make a hog of yourself if you came."

One of our exchanges tells of an old German who had a boy of whom he was very proud, and decided to find out the trend of his mind. He adopted a novel method by which to test him. He slipped into the boy's room one morning and placed on his table a bottle of whiskey a Bible and a silver dollar. "Now," he said, "when dat boy comes in if he takes dot dollar he's going to be a business man, if he takes dot Bible he's going to be a preacher; if he takes dot whiskey he's no good and going to be a drunkard." Then he hid behind a door to see which his son would choose. In came the boy whistling. He ran to the table, picked up the Bible and put it under his arm, then snatched up the bottle, took two or three drinks, picked up the dollar and put it in his pocket and went out smacking his lips. The German poked his head out from behind the door and exclaimed: "Mein Got, he is going to be a politician."

The editor was pleased to note that one of the rinks from his old town, Baldur, Man., the Fowler rink, got into the finals at the Winnipeg spiel in the Walker Cup, defeating the Doig rink of Glenboro, winners of the trophy last year. The final game in the competition was lost to Justice of Dauphin, 9-11, Fowler winning second place. Mr. Fowler was one of the Canadian team that toured Scotland and is a familiar figure at the big spiel, the editor had the honor of learning the "ins and outs" of the game under this skip, playing two seasons in his rink.

A. & G. W. Railway Agreement Severely Gritiz-ed

During Course of Debate A Strong Stand Develops

Friday the ex-minister of public works presented his promised statement to the house, his reasons for resigning from the Rutherford government being as was pretty generally known, a protest against the agreement made with the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway. In the course of his speech he offered to build the road to Fort McMurray on A. & G. W. specifications for $12,000 per mile.

Premier Rutherford replying established that Mr. Cushing was present at a meeting of the Cabinet on October 7th when the agreement in question was finally approved. The offer of Mr. Cushing to build the road for $12,000 per mile was declared by the premier to be a bluff and he quoted government engineer Jones' estimate at $29,151.20 per mile.

Following the premier's reply to the ex-minister, John R. Boyle introduced a want of confidence motion in a speech of four hours duration, in which he declared that the interests of the province were insufficiently safeguarded.

Attorney-General Cross replied defending the advisability of the project and amount of the guarantee.

The debate was resumed at Monday's session by F. H. Riley, member for Gleichen, who made an impassioned address in condemnation of the railway agreement, and W. F. Puffer, Lacombe, who endorsed the administration. He was followed in the evening by Dr. Warnock, Pincher, who spoke against the agreement and J. L. Cote, Athabasca who defended it.

At the conclusion of the remarks of the member for Athabasca, J. W. Woolf, Cardston, rose and submitted an amendment which is understood to be acceptable to the government. It was that steps be taken to incorporate the offer made in a recent letter of President Clark, of the A. & G. W. R. Co., into the agreement with the company. J. A. McDougall, Edmonton, seconded the resolution.

A recess of ten minutes elapsed while copies of the amendment [illegible] prepared for the members. On [illegible] resuming Mr. Bennett contended [illegible] the [illegible] was [illegible] The speaker asked [illegible] [illegible] point [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] adjournment was moved by Mr. Bennett and carried.

Tuesday afternoon and evening [illegible] the debate [illegible] and it was expected that the conclusion of the debate on Mr Woolf's amendment would be reached Wednesday night and a vote taken before the House adjourned. Eleven speakers took part in the debate, the adjournment being moved by Hon. W. H. Cushing.

R. B. Bennett and Hon. Duncan Marshall will also speak.

INTERESTING EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES

Many Statements Which Will Go Down in History of Alberta Legislature

"I also took the ground that all the issue of the bonds should not be guaranteed at one time before the route of the line was decided. At the same time the president of the company was in Europe trying to sell the bonds, but was not successful. Then he tried his own country and had ultimately better success.

"There can always be found people who will help others out of a hole if they are paid high enough price." Hon. W. H. Cushing, his speech to the legislature.

"The state is not a sectional one, it is not a question of north against south. I again repeat I have made a contract [illegible] province has not been properly safeguarded. I believe that the evidence I have produced will show that my intentions on this [illegible] have been borne out by the facts. — Extract from speech of Hon. W. H. Cushing.

"Now in conclusion to show that I am sincere I am prepared to put up a bond of half a million dollars that I will build a line similar to the one to be built as per these specifications for $12,000 a mile; will provide sidings free, while the company are paid for them, and will provide all terminals save Edmonton. I am also further prepared to give a similar bond that I will construct a road according to the standard of the main line of the C. N. R. with all the terminals except Edmonton, for $16,000 a mile and provide a full equipment for operation besides. If I can do that why, I ask, should the government pay $20,000 a mile for every ten miles. I have taken this step solely in the interests of the province and I leave it to the intelligence and sense of fair play inherent in this legislature." Ex-Minister of public works on the floor of the House.

"From what I have observed and learned within the last few days I have almost arrived at the conclusion that there is a nest of traitors in the Liberal camp in Alberta. It is not a large nest. I don't couple the name of the ex-minister of public works with that nest. That would be ungenerous, but I think that he has been misled—he has been duped. If left to his own calm judgment he would still be an honored and honorable member of my cabinet." Premier Rutherford.

"L. M. Roberts, High River, declared that the province of Alberta would not stand for the perpetration of any of the Clarke's get-rich-quick schemes, and further that no other political institution on the continent, with the exception of Tammany Hall in New York city, could put through a deal like that which the government had negotiated." Edmonton Bulletin.

CHAPTER FOUR

Soon she had a new pet to love. It came in the night, or almost; she was not quite sure which, and she had no chance to find out. Her self-control in the matter of asking questions had been severely tried, but she had succeeded in not asking one. She had learned that Mother Superior was not to be questioned. She was the one person who could answer all questions, but she was not to be questioned. Therefore, Virginia had not asked her whether the new pet was a boy or a girl, or what its name was, or where it came from. She had simply accepted the fact that it was there, and had been grateful for it.

The new pet was a little, tousled, black-and-white kitten, with a pink nose and a pink mouth, and pink paws. It was not at all beautiful, but Virginia thought it the most fascinating creature she had ever seen. She had never had a kitten of her own, and had always envied children who had. She had even envied Lucy Ann, who had had a dog.

The kitten was not playful. It was sleepy, and it was hungry. It had been found in the garden, mewing piteously, and had been brought in by Sister Agnes Joseph, who had given it milk in a saucer. It had lapped the milk, and then had curled up in a ball on Virginia's lap, and had gone to sleep. Virginia had sat very still, for fear of disturbing it, and had stroked it gently with one finger. She had not dared to move for a long time, but at last the kitten had stretched itself, and had begun to wash its face with its paws. Then it had looked up at Virginia, and had mewed again.

Virginia had wondered what it wanted, and had stroked it again. It had begun to purr, and had rubbed its head against her hand. Then it had mewed again, and had looked up at her with its round, green eyes. Virginia had wondered more than ever what it wanted, and had stroked it again. It had purred more loudly than before, and had rubbed its head against her hand more vigorously

VERMILION, ALTA. MARCH 2, 1910

As member after member [illegible] in the House and [illegible] condemned the A. & G. W. railway agreement, the Premier must have concluded that Mr. Boyle had a small sized army at his back. At any rate the members of the Alberta legislature are demonstrating that they are not of the rubber stamp variety.

It is folly to say that [illegible] no license to save a few dollars of the people's taxes [illegible] every dollar saved may help in cutting down that 25 mill tax rate which the people of Vermilion are bucking up against.

Some ten months ago in two issues before the Standard made its initial appearance, the late lamented editor of our esteem [illegible] filled his columns with vigorous attacks upon the new publication which had the temerity to encroach upon its pastures, those were of such a calibre so only his colossal intellect could produce. Finding they can no longer get credit at home, the customers are forced to keep their money at home in order to purchase articles for which it would not pay them to send away. Majority for Vermilion — 1

Total Points Vermilion 50, Veg. 47

From [illegible] Thursday night until 12.30 the rink was a scene [illegible] and unbounded [illegible] play for the Whyte Cup [illegible] the two sheets of ice between four rinks from Vegreville [illegible] counter from the [illegible]. The play started at 7 p. m. [illegible] until the last rock went [illegible] at 12.30 it looked [illegible] game. The final score stood Vermilion rinks 50, Vegreville 47, a margin of three points for the Cup holders.

The visitors arrived shortly before six on the local and the draw was immediately made McInnis and Chute being pitted against Slater and Pilkie for the 7 o'clock draw and Field and Horton against Telford and Dunnell for the 10 o'clock draw.

While Slater was putting up a great game against McInnis and piling up a phenomenal score, his running mate Pilkie was getting the short end of the scoring on the other ice. This made the running almost even and held the closest interest right up to the close and though Slater chalked up 20 to his opponent's 6, Pilkie went down to Chute 6 to 16, making the result of the first draw Vermilion 26 Vegreville 24 or leaving only 2 points to the good. Just here too much cannot be said in praise of the perfect game put up by Skip Slater ably assisted by his rink to [illegible] the credit is entirely due of holding the Cup to Vermilion for a [illegible] year.

With only 2 points to the good the [illegible] the ten o'clock draw were [illegible]

Fierce Arraignment of Government by Bennet

In a five hour address, R. B. Bennett declared the government had been guilty of negligence in the A. & G. W. deal.

"The government occupied a different position to that of an individual in that they were the trustees of the people, not for the advancement of any political party or for any private advantage. There must be an investigation of the Alberta and Great Waterways deal and the members of the House would not rest until every shred of evidence had been adduced, in the course if necessary, where under gruelling cross-examination men could be made to divulge the truth."

"This whole deal was as interesting as a novel. Jesse James' romances were nothing beside it. But it was not a novel, because it affected vitally the public life of this province."

"Dealing with what he termed as the emasculation and stripping of the files before being brought down to the House he stated that there were letters and telegrams which referred to other letters and telegrams which were not to be found on the files. He looked the files over in vain to find, except in one instance, the [illegible] It was inconceivable that the attorney general, in the wealth of negotiations which had taken place, had written only one letter. Why, he asked, [illegible] be stripped if it was all right, if all right, righteous and honorable. Why, why, why! The people of the province demanded an answer and the people of the province would obtain an answer."

The above are a few extracts from Mr. Bennett's speech as reported in the Bulletin.

102,200 CATTLE EXPORTED IN 1909

Rapid Growth of Alberta Shown By Agricultural Report

The annual report of the provincial Department of Agriculture was tabled in the Legislature on Friday by Hon. Duncan Marshall. It is a voluminous document and contains a great deal of valuable information about the agricultural development of Alberta during the past year. In its opening remarks, reference is made to the growth of the department since the late minister, Hon. W. T. Finlay took charge. In the four years' development the staff had grown from three members to over fifty in number, with all the branches thoroughly organized. Reference is made to the appointment of the new minister and the death of the late T. B. R. Henderson, chief inspector of noxious weeds.

One of the most important statements in the report is that there were 102,200 head of cattle shipped in 1910 from Alberta making a considerable increase over the former year.

A General Increase.

[illegible] the general work of the department the report shows that there has been a steady increase in the general correspondence of the department and in fact in the work of all the branches thereof. The enrollment of the [illegible] shows a slight increase in the percentage of pure bred animals enrolled as against [illegible] tary on the horse industry of the province to note that there are two grade stallions standing for service [illegible]

Stock inspection returns show that approximately 10,000 head of horses were exported from the province, while [illegible] head of 13,000 head were shipped from one part of the province to another. In all over 79,200 head of [illegible] out of the province [illegible] over 23,000 [illegible] making a grand total for export stock of something over 102,200 head.

This shows a considerable increase in the number of animals exported and on the face of it does not justify the report of the large cattle dealers of the country to the effect the industry is on the decline. It is true the large ranches are [illegible] any diminution in the number of animals available for export. [illegible] there will be a steadily increasing [illegible]

No Disease in Stock

[illegible] Live Stock Commissioner points out the very valuable fact that the province is [illegible] free from [illegible] ranging for transportation facilities for some, in visiting the various [illegible] officials of the Railway Commission [illegible] in these yards in accordance with [illegible] ment requirements. His report also [illegible] given to the importation of some car loads of pure bred dairy stock, which was distributed [illegible]

MADE A MISTAKE.

He Was Not an Applicant For That Kind of a Job.

He was altogether a tired looking sort of person from the top of his head to the soles of his feet. His hat was tired; his collar, if indeed he had ever worn one, was so tired that it had retired beyond the vision of man, and even the patches upon his attire looked as if they would welcome a rest. Moreover, he was much in need of a shave and of several other customary processes through which the true and perfect man should occasionally go before presenting himself to polite society. Indeed, the only thing about him that was not tired was his manner, and this was alarmingly fresh as he stopped at the farmhouse door and requested food and a job in tones bordering perilously on those of command.

"You will excuse me, madam, for addressin' a lady without bein' introduced," he began, "but, observin' that there was no man about the place, I—"

"Now, just you move on," retorted the lady of the mansion. "We ain't got no use for no tramps about this place, and I'll just have you to understand right now that whether there's any men about this place now or at any other time—young, middle-aged, light, dark or yaller—we ain't wantin' no protection when the time comes that we need it, which fellers of your kind, wanderin' about the country all day tryin' to avoid work and livin' on the fat o' the land earned by the sweat o' some one else's brow, and lookin' for a chance to lay your hands on anything you can carry off without strainin' your muscles, seems to think we ain't got within reach, as I could prove the contrary of in a jerk of a ram's tail if I had a mind to ring that there bell ye see fastened on to the roof, by pullin' this here cord alongside the wash basin, which, Lord knows, I ain't seein' as how I ain't none of these weak sassiety women what can't handle the best man that ever lived without no help from nobody or thanks to the neighbors, which on the whole ain't no better than they should be when it comes down to a straightforward case o' fight or take your medic'—"

"Excuse me, madam," interrupted the weary wayfarer, making rapidly for the gate, "I find I've made a mistake. I wanted a job on a farm, not in a gas house."

And he skipped blithely up the road with little evidence of that weariness which had lent distinction to his carriage in the moments immediately preceding the interview.

"Growing Down."

Everybody has noticed that in extreme old age people grow rapidly shorter, so that a person formerly of average height "grows down" into quite a diminutive man or woman. A German contemporary points out that this decrease of height begins as early as the age of thirty-five years. At thirty, we are told, the human body has reached its full height, which is retained for a few years, after which the "growing down" process begins. At first and for many years the process is so slow as to be almost imperceptible, but at the age of about sixty it begins to be noticeable, and after seventy, even though a veteran does not stoop at all, the fact that he is "growing down" becomes apparent to all.

"Give me a ham sandwich!" shouted the traveller at the bar of the refreshment room. Two seconds later he complained to the attendant, "That was the worst sandwich I ever had. No more taste than sawdust, and not big enough to see."

"You've et yer ticket," returned the attendant contemptuously, "this here's yer ham san'wich."

When Holloway's Corn Cure is applied to a corn or wart it kills the roots and the callosity comes out without injury to the flesh.

The substitution of steel for wood goes steadily on. The National Lead Company will pack its white lead in steel kegs, having decided to abandon the use of wooden kegs. This innovation is made because the company has concluded that steel kegs will have many advantages over the wooden kegs. ... charges. Taking up less room than the wooden kegs the new steel package also will save storage space.

Fire Preventives.

A man who believes that many fires and much loss of life could be avoided if people exercised more care in disposing of burnt matches and cigar and cigarette stumps is sending thousands of postal cards through the mail bearing this plea: "Fire is a useful but also dangerous element. Remember this when you would throw a burnt-out match into a paper basket or on the floor where an unseen spark might make a flame. Think of it when you throw away your cigar or cigarette stump. Prevent the fires that kill. A receptacle for burnt matches is a more valuable piece of furniture than a rocking chair."—New York Tribune.

Training a Prince for the Navy

PRINCE EDWARD OF WALES AT WORK ...

ROYAL children have no easy time during schooldays. Their training is most rigorous. Prince Edward of Wales has found this out long ago. He has been studying in the Royal Naval College at Dartmouth for the past few months, having graduated from the Osborne school, where his naval training was begun. According to the custom of the English royal family his education is planned along the same lines as that followed by many lads who in the future will probably be his subjects.

To enter the British navy candidates must be of pure European descent and the sons either of British-born or naturalized British subjects. Applications are made to the assistant private secretary to the first lord when the candidate has reached the age of twelve and the boy is required to present himself before a committee which interviews each applicant separately.

A strict medical examination is now necessary to show whether he is physically fit for the navy. Should he pass this, he is examined in educational matters. The subjects include English history, geography, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, French or German and Latin.

A training of four years and eight months then follows, first at Osborne, then at Dartmouth and ... the training ... The parents must pay $375 per annum ... There is also the expense of ... outfit ... Pocket money ...

Everything at Dartmouth ... magnificent ... country is well known for the grandeur of its scenery.

The workshops for mechanical instruction ...

Dartmouth ... for sports. The cricket and football fields are the finest in Devon ...

FEDERAL HOUSE MAY SIT TILL MAY

Amendment to Banking Act to Go Over to Next Session

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 28.—The important feature of today's sitting of the Commons was a statement made by Hon. W. S. Fielding which practically means that the amendment to the Banking act will go over till next session. This action will be taken because the members are urging the leaders to bring the session to a conclusion at a reasonably early date. Even with the Banking bill laid over it is doubtful if the House can finish before May 1st. The naval bill will not reach the senate much before the Easter recess and after that there are several government bills including the Anti-combines bill and great bulk of estimates to be disposed of.

TO HAIR DRESSERS

A Splendid Hair Tonic That Makes Beautiful Hair

Every hair dresser should know about Parisian Sage the quick acting hair dressing, that does just what this paper tells you it will do.

Parisian Sage is a most delightful and different hair dressing, a fact that will be recognized the moment it is applied to the scalp. There is not a particle of stickiness in it, it is not greasy it has a delicate and refined odor, and is a truly invigorating tonic that will make hair grow, if the hair root still shows the least sign of life.

Try a bottle of Parisian Sage. It will brighten up the hair in two days.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by Fred Long to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and scalp itch in two weeks, or money back. It is particularly in demand by women of refinement, who desire soft luxuriant hair, that compels admiration. Rutherford Has Resigned

Report to Standard from Edmonton to this Effect-Cushing said to be Called upon to form Ministry

ELECTION TO TAKE PLACE IMMEDIATELY

The climax in the bitter criticisms of the Rutherford administration over the A. & G. W. railway deal has been reached. The latest report received by phone this (Thursday) morning from Edmonton was to the effect that following the resignations of Attorney-General Cross and Hon. Mr. Buchanan, announced in the daily papers comes that of Premier Rutherford himself and the statement that the Hon. W. H. Cushing, the late minister of Public Works, is to be called upon to form a government.

A meeting of the opposition forces was held last evening to select a cabinet in the event of such being authentic, and there is not an ounce of donbt that a general election will be held within the next few weeks, just so soon as the necessary legal formalities can be complied with.

Never in the history of the Dominion have such sensational developments in political circles taken place with such startling rapidity.

AN OUTDOOR PAINTER

GEORGE CHAVIGNAUD IS A SPECIALIST ON TREES.

Canadian Artist Whose Landscapes Are So Well Known Has a Passion For Elms, Poplars and Willows—Gray, Heavy Days Are Often a Feature of His Canvases — Works a Great Deal In Water-Color Now.

Toronto is the show-centre for a large number of Canadian artists who paint out of doors in the surrounding country during the spring, summer, and early autumn months. It is encouraging to see the good results that are here very often obtained, the excellent landscape subjects, the lovely bits of coloring in foliage, sky and water, particularly when so many think that it is necessary to go far afield to procure anything worth painting. That it is not necessary to go beyond easy distance of Toronto to discover charming subjects for the painter is shown in the latest work of Mr. George Chavignaud, whose paintings were recently exhibited in Toronto, and most of the pictures that Mr. Chavignaud exhibited this time were painted in the open, and they are, therefore, distinguished for spontaneity, freshness, and clean coloring. With but a few exceptions, which lend variety to the collection, the subjects are all Canadian, and many of the landscapes will be reminiscent to those who are familiar with Lambton, Humber, and Kleinburg.

Mr. Chavignaud has been painting Canadian subjects persistently for some years, and his work in this respect shows a decided improvement. Now he sees with Canadian eyes, and his oils have attained the qualities of light and tone that have given character and individuality to his water-colors. Most of his pictures this year have been painted in the latter medium. While in many instances they are carried further than is often attempted in water-colors, they retain the pleasing qualities of the sketch—showing but little evidence of labor, yet ... to the subject as faithfully ... consistent with artistic results.

Trees, especially elms, poplars, and willows, appeal very strongly to Mr. Chavignaud's artistic sensibilities, and accordingly a collection of his pictures invariably includes these tempting subjects in a variety of effects of light and atmosphere. Gray days, ... low in the ... large place in ... but, for all ... time are not ... that a ... Mr. Chavignaud's ... wide range of ... interesting variety of treatment.

COUGHS & COLDS
LEAD TO CONSUMPTION

Colds are the most dangerous of all forms of disease. A neglected cold leads to Bronchitis, Consumption, Pneumonia. "Coughs" are the result of irritated bronchial tubes. "PSYCHINE" cures coughs by removing the irritating particles and healing the inflamed membranes. It is a germicide and destroys the tubercle germ. It is a tonic that strengthens the lungs, the liver, and tones up the system. It makes for better health in all conditions of humanity. Get strong and the cough will disappear. "PSYCHINE" makes weak people strong. It cures coughs of the most obstinate kind and breaks up a cold in a few hours.

"Music," remarked the sweet girl graduate, "is the language of the heart."

"According to that," rejoined the mere man, "ragtime must be caused by palpitation of the heart."

There is no medicine on the market that can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup in expelling from the system the irritating germs that colds engender in the air passages. It is suicide to neglect your cold. Try the cheap experiment of ridding yourself of it by using Bickle's Syrup, which is a simple remedy, easily taken, and once used it will always be prized as a sovereign medicine.

MOLER BARBER COLLEGE, 220 Pacific Ave., Winnipeg.

CREMATION RITUALS.

A Lengthy Ceremony Is Necessary to Assure Salvation.

The ceremony of burial as observed by the Brahmans is, to our western minds, decidedly heathenish. As soon as a man dies his relatives and friends set about performing the long list of rites required by religion for the purification of his body.

The corpse is washed and a barber shaves off all the hair. After a second washing sandalwood is placed upon the forehead and garlands of flowers around the neck. The mouth is filled with betel leaves and the body is adorned with rich raiment and jewels. After lying in state for a certain period the body is wrapped in a new piece of cloth, purified according to prescribed ceremony. It is next placed upon a litter, and the thumbs and toes are bound together with cord. Then the head mourner, carrying fire in an earthen vessel, leads the way. After him comes the funeral litter ornamented with flowers and gaudy cloths and surrounded by the mourners. The women remain at home.

On the way to the crematory three halts are made so that the spirits of the nether world may have time to repair their mistake if perchance they have taken the wrong man. At each halt a little cooked rice is placed in the dead person's mouth that his hunger and thirst may be satisfied. The cremation ground at Benares, the holy city, is an open, sandy space beside the Ganges. Running down into the water are quite a number of long, wide flights of steps called ghats. Each ghat is set aside for a particular purpose. At the burning ghat the funeral procession halts.

First a shallow pit is dug. This is consecrated with ceremonial water and a few coins are thrown into it. The funeral pyre is then erected. The body is stripped of all jewels and raiment, and having been dipped in the sacred river, is laid upon the pyre. Then are performed a number of purification rites, after which a small gold coin is placed in the mouth of the corpse. Then the head mourner touches a torch to the corners of the pyre, and the procession returns to the house, where numerous other rites must be performed. Only the four men who carried the corpse remain. These must wait until the body is entirely consumed and cast the ashes into the sacred waters of the river.

The crematory is in the care of the "dumri," the lowest of castes, who charge exorbitant prices for the wood, the oil and other accessories needed for the burning. The earlier this occurs the greater is the cost and more certain is the departed one's chance of reaching paradise. Toward noon the bodies of criminals and the very poor are cremated. The higher order of priests and fakirs are considered so holy that they do not need to be purified by fire. Their bodies are simply cast into the river.

Repairing Westminster.

The work of keeping Westminster Abbey in repair is a very onerous and delicate one and the long line of surveyors of the fabric is a distinguished one indeed. During the last seventy years this matchless church has been in the hands of Mr. Blore, Sir Gilbert Scott, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Micklethwaite and now Prof. Lethaby.

There have been times in the history of the abbey when its very existence has been in jeopardy. The first of these occurred about the end of the seventeenth century. Sir Christopher Wren was called in and the work of restoration was carried out with the utmost zeal and thoroughness, though in many ... its ... was open to much question.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS DEAL

Stephens Brothers Purchase McClinton Flour & Feed Business

An important business deal took place last week whereby the firm of Stephens Brothers, general merchants, acquired the large flour and feed business of W. H. McClinton. The business was taken over by the purchasers Monday morning.

Mr. McClinton is at present looking over other fields with the intention of locating if suited or he may take a position on the road.

Church of Christ Notes

The Branch of the Church on 24-5[illegible] was dedicated on Feb. 25th. Rev. Mr. McLaurin preached in the afternoon and evening. The collection and subscription totalled $120 which proved sufficient for the building expenses and also furnished an organ. The people of [illegible] District are much encouraged over the prospect of Service and Sunday School.

On Sunday the 20th Rev. H. Gordon Bennett will occupy the pulpit in the town. Mr. Bennett will also give his lecture entitled, "The Life of Christ" with lime light views of paintings by the Masters, on Monday, the 21st. There will be no fee charged, a collection only being taken up for the purpose of mission work in Alberta.

All are cordially invited to enjoy the views. The Lecture will commence at eight o'clock.

Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

The way down was easy to Virginia, with his hand to help her when it was needed, and she had never [illegible] so happy in her twenty years. But after all, she asked herself as they neared the place where she had left Miss Portman, what had [illegible]ed? What impression was she leaving? Would the [illegible] morning of adventure do her good or harm with Leopold when Miss Manners should meet him later [illegible] some [illegible] way [illegible] letters of introduction to court dignitaries at Rosenburg?

While she wondered his voice broke into her questionings.

"I hope, gna' fraeulein," the chamois hunter was saying, almost shyly and as if by an effort, "that you won't go away from our country thinking that we Rhaetians are as cold of heart and blood as you're inclined to fancy. We men of the mountains may be different [illegible] others [illegible] have seen, but we're [illegible] more real. The torrent of [illegible] may sleep for a season under the ice, but when the spring comes, as it must, and the ice melts, then the torrent gushes forth the more hotly because it has not spent its strength [illegible]."

"I shall remember your words," said the princess, "for my journal of Rhaetia. And, now, here's my poor friend I shall [illegible] [illegible]."

For her journal of Rhaetia! For a moment the man looked wistful as if it were a pain to him that he would have no other place in her thoughts [illegible] time to win it [illegible] lady in a tourist's [illegible] and the episode was [illegible]. He looked [illegible] as if there was something he would add to his last words [illegible]

CHAPTER FIVE

The stout old lady flew to the rescue.

"Ach himmel!" exclaimed Frau Yorvan, and "Ach, himmel!" she exclaimed again, her voice rising to a wail, with a frantic uplifting of the hands.

The grand duchess grew pale, for the apple cheeked lady suddenly exhibited these alarming signs of emotion while passing a window of the private dining room. Evidently some scene of horror was being enacted outside, and Virginia and Miss Portman had been away for many hours.

It was the time for tea in England, for coffee in Rhaetia. Frau Yorvan had just brought in coffee for one, with heart shaped sugars, [illegible] which would have appeared more poignantly to the grand duchess signs of the absent ones had been with her to share them. Naturally at the great woman's outburst her imagination instantly pictured disaster to the [illegible].

What—oh, what is it you see?" she [illegible], her heart leaping, then failing. But for once the [illegible] [illegible] honored guest was forgotten, and the [illegible] Frau Yorvan fled from the room without giving an answer.

[illegible] with dread of what she [illegible] to see, the grand duchess [illegible] to the window. It was there, [illegible] a procession coming down the [illegible] street that led to town from the mountain. Oh, horror upon horror! They were perhaps bringing Virginia [illegible] or dead, her [illegible] crushed out of recognition. [illegible] was Virginia herself [illegible] men stopping at the inn had returned and were at this moment assembled in the room adjoining hers. The grand duchess resolved that at the first sign of insolent behavior or threatening on the part of the luggage carrier these noblemen should be promptly summoned by her to the rescue of her daughter.

Her anxiety was even slightly allayed at this point in her reflections by the thought (for she had not quite outgrown an innate love of romance) that the emperor himself might go to Virginia's assistance. His friends were in the next room, having come down from the mountain about noon, and there seemed little doubt that he was among them. If he had not already looked out of his window, drawn by the landlady's excited voice, the grand duchess resolved that in the circumstances it was her part as a mother to make him look out. She had promised to help Virginia, and she would help her by providing a romantic first encounter.

In a penetrating voice which could not fail to reach the ears of the men next door or the actors in the scene below she adjured her daughter in English.

This language was the safest to employ, she decided hastily, because the brigand with the rucksacks would not understand, while the flower of Rhaetian chivalry in the adjoining room were doubtless acquainted with all modern languages.

"Helen," she screamed, loyally remembering in her excitement the part she was playing, "Helen, where did you come across that ferocious look[illegible]

GREAT FRAUDS.

Dr. Cook's Unfortunate Predicament Recalls De Rougemont Case.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, since the report of the University of Copenhagen findings after investigation of his "proofs," is regarded as being more or less of a fraud. Some openly denounce the Brooklyn "discoverer" as being such, while there are others who incline to the belief that the doctor's mind has become affected through hardship, exposure to cold and a constant brooding over the idea that he should some day be successful in reaching the long-sought North Pole. Aside from any question of Dr. Cook's guilt or innocence, the case recalls a famous hoax wherein a French traveler, De Rougemont, set the world agape with curiosity concerning a certain wonderful island of the South Pacific ocean.

M. de Rougemont about ten years ago startled and interested the whole world with the publication of a story that he had discovered a wonderful island in the southern Pacific ocean, where the inhabitants had developed a civilization so advanced as to cause the blush of shame to rise to the cheek of the very best thing that had as yet been done in the civilization lines by the most "advanced countries of Europe."

How he came to find the island is totally beside the question. The main fact in the case is that everybody believed him—at first. How [illegible] anybody doubt the word of a "French savant"? Here was a man coming back fresh from a trip of discovery in the south seas with the actual goods on his person!

The best feature of De Rougemont's work was that he was only too willing to appear before the geographical societies of Europe and tell them anything they wanted to know. He was sharply quizzed at the meeting of the geographical section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science and came out of the ordeal as fresh as a daisy. He made a small fortune for himself by contributing to widewake magazines and writing a book or two. A few wise ones, however, had begun to suspect that De Rougemont was "something of a liar himself," and the impression grew until the notorious island, and De Rougemont with it, submerged into the depths of the Pacific ocean, from which the imaginative and thrifty Frenchman had raised it.

ITS PEERLESS YOUNG RIVAL.

Steel Must Some Day Give Way to New Metal, Aluminum.

Within the last 200 years about 50 metals have been discovered. Most of them, it is true, have been looked upon by the world as curiosities, and they have been relegated to the chemical museums and shown in tiny little vials as samples of the wonderful achievements of modern scientific research. Occasionally they would be referred to by some writer with a vivid imagination, who would call to mind their extreme rarity and their fabulous value, but only as chemical curiosities and never as substances that would ever be of any possible use to mankind. Then the little vials would be put back on the shelves out of sight, out of mind, until the public wished again to hear the tales of gallium and germanium and radium, and to estimate what it would cost to make a pound of these rarities.

With the advent of the electric furnace and the use of temperatures hitherto unheard of these little vials have been taken down for another purpose. Oxides of the rare metals have been introduced to the fearful heat and reduced to the form of pure metals, and these rare metals, now rare no longer on account of the cheapness of reduction and abundance of ore, are taking their proper place in the sphere of industrial activity. The little dust-covered vials are looming up, and keen, hard-headed scientists are studying them with a view to their possibilities and the best means as to their utilization.

Take aluminum, for example. In 1855 aluminum first appeared on the market and sold for $5 a pound. It was still a curiosity, and here and there some one would get hold of an ounce or two and muse over its extreme lightness, its beautiful color and its acid and oxygen resisting properties. But still a curiosity. Then comes the electric furnace. Aluminum drops from $5 a pound to 35 cents a pound, and the world suddenly sits up very straight and takes notice. A metal more useful than gold or silver, possibly than iron, has joined the great procession of modern business opportunities, and immediately the business man frantically seeks the man of science and talks about "possibilities."

Aluminum has had a remarkable growth, commercially, but the next few decades will show its real value and use. It is popularly supposed that iron is the commonest of all metals, but analyses of the earth's crust show that aluminum is the king [illegible]

LIEUT.-COL. MASON LEAVES MILITIA AFTER LONG CAREER.

Late Commander of the Fourth Infantry Brigade Has Managed to Be Present at All the Active Service in Canada in His Time—Was in Northwest Engagements and Fenian Raid—Was at Queen's Jubilee.

The retirement a few days ago of Lieut.-Col. Col. Mason is a native of Toronto, where he was born in 1843, and has lived there all his life. After winning the place of head boy in the Model School he entered the service of the Toronto Savings Bank, which later merged into the Home Savings & Loan Co., and of which Col. Mason became and remained for many years managing director. Five years ago the Home Savings & Loan Co. evolved into the Home Bank of Canada, of which Col. Mason is general manager and a director.

As long ago as the early sixties the future colonel took up soldiering by serving for three years in the Queen's Own Rifles during the Fenian Raid troubles. In 1866 he was gazetted captain in the 10th Royal Grenadiers, the regiment which enjoyed so many years

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS

"Trustee" Has a Few Remarks to Make Re Rural Schools

March, 14th 1910

TO THE EDITOR

Sir —

Principal Hartley has opened the question of Consolidated schools, and as this is one of great importance and one that affects us all, it is right that it should be discussed in all its bearings. I intend [illegible] how this question affects the [illegible] in the rural districts, more particularly where natural physical obstacles exist, such as we have between [illegible] and points north.

I can imagine that my district is driven ... to the Town school at ... Will Principal Hartley kindly take ... [illegible] ... and tell me if he would be willing to have his [illegible] ... Even when the ... would be safe ... take chances ... drivers or annuities, also horses.

I am not an objector to Consolidation in every case, for I know that some exist where there is ... great ... arrangement of rural schools.

I see there is the financial side of the question. Adopting Principal Hartley's ... transport say twenty children from one ... the cost would be ... [illegible] ... net cost of $674 ... [illegible] ... $500 per year with aid of grant, and ... have a first class centrally located building that would not only be useful for school purposes but would be a great convenience to the district at large for public meetings, religious services, concerts etc.
